MAGNETIC GIRDLE
FOR MEN.

Are You Nervous, and Lack Vital Energy?

In all diseases of a nervous or muscular type, such as Nervous Debility, Paralysis, Overworked Brain, Exhaustion, or Loss of Vital Energy, Weak Back, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Kidney Disease, our Magnetic Belt or Regenerator is made expressly for the cure of derangements of the procreative organs. Whenever any debility of the generative organs occurs, from whatever cause, the continuous stream of Magnetism permeating through the parts must restore them to healthy action. There is no mistake about this appliance. Years of use have tested it, and thousands of cures are testified to. Weakness from Indiscretion, Incapacity, Lack of Vigor, Sterility—in fact, any troubles of these organs is cured. Do not confound this with electric belts advertised to cure all ills from head to toe. This is for the one specific purpose.

Price of belt, $10. Sent by express upon receipt of price, and if not found as represented money refunded. In ordering, send measure of waist. Remittances can be made in currency, set in letter at our risk.

SEA'S Millinery Dept.

Is the Largest, Handsomest, and Finest in Chicago.

SEA

Has an advertisement on the third page. It is headed

"Not a Rag Baby."

It states that no unclean, out-of-style, old trash is kept in our premises; and in no one of our departments is this truth more manifest than in our Millinery Parlors. No old shapes or job lots are palmed off as new; neither are the goods tumbled on the sidewalk with the price placarded, for who would wish another to know that her Hat cost 29c?

Newest Styles!
Choicest Materials!
Largest Assortment!
Lowest Prices!

These are the characteristics of Sea's. Again, no matter how cheap the Hat you buy, nor how much work you wish put on it, all

Hats Are Trimmed Free!

Our Plumes and Tips are the real Ostrich, not made or pieced feathers. In Flowers we show the greatest variety at prices ridiculously low. Our Flowers of Domestic manufacture are as handsome as any made in France, and they cost but one-half the prices we are obliged to ask for Paris Flowers. Corsage Bouquets, Roses, Buds, and Small Flowers in endless variety. Gold Laces, Crowns, and Cords, Colored and Black Beaded Laces and Crowns, Pom Poms in all the new shades, Ornaments in Gold and Steel—all at one-half the prices charged by any Milliner, and don't forget to remember

Hats Trimmed FREE By Your Friend SEA.

Silks! Silks! Silks!

During the past two weeks there has been considerable talk on State-st. with reference to Blk Silks; in fact, so much as to make all the leading makers in Europe familiar to all.

Sea, always on the lookout, bought for spot cash, from two of the largest importing houses in the East, all their Cut Pieces and Short Ends of Black Silks, ranging in lengths from 3 to 29 yards, embracing all the European makers—viz.:

C. J. Bonnet et Cie., In All the Numbers.

Antoine Guinet, In All the Numbers.

Bellon's, In All the Numbers.

Tappissier Freres, In All the Numbers.

And many other well-known brands. This lot contains some good lengths of Ottomans, Rhadames, Merveilleux, Surahs, &c., in all about 27,000 yards, all of which will be placed on sale Monday morning, marked at a slight advance on the price paid, which was 37 1-2c on the dollar.

This is an opportunity seldom offered. Ladies should not miss it.

HIGH ART AT THE HIGH SCHOOL!

A Boom in Æsthetic Ideas!

SCENE: High School Entrance Grounds.
PERSONÆ: Three Undergraduates.

ELEANOR—"Hello, Kittie!"

KITTIE—"Hello!"

ELEANOR—"So you were at Miss Burchrodd's wedding—what'd she have on?"

KITTIE—"Don't ask me! I am studying the Beautiful now a days, but not those forms of the Beautiful that we wear on our backs. I do pretend somewhat to art, I admit the æsthetic aspiration, the passion, at any rate the yearning, but I am no disciple of the dressmaker, thank you!"

HELEN—"Good for you, Kittie! When you talk Art, talk Art! How were the parlors dressed?"

KITTIE—"That is a question that reaches me! The furniture, and window dressing, and floor clothing of a human home—the vesture and habiliment of a human habitation—is the æsthetic and poetic counterpart of human architecture. The attire of Miss Burchrodd's main parlor was in the John M. Smyth moresque furniture."

ELEANOR—"What did she have on the floor, Kitt?"

KITTIE—"A John M. Smyth Brussels, a new conception in Windsor Palace Brussels—vernal colors, ground of new meadow green, with studies of forest buds harmonizing with glimpses of white peach blossoms and daffodils."

ELEANOR—"What'd her windows look like, Kitt?"

POSTAL REVENUES.

RESULTS OF DECREASED REVENUES.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 7.—[Special.]—Under the present law, small country Postmasters, whose sales of stamps do not amount to more than $200 per annum, retain 60 per cent of the value of the stamps canceled as their salary. The reduction of letter postage to two cents would of course materially reduce the compensation of the small Postmasters were they to receive only the same percentage. But the new law provides that where the sales of stamps do not exceed $200 per annum, the Postmaster shall after Oct. 1 be allowed to retain 100 per cent of the value of the stamps canceled. Judge Ela, Sixth Auditor of the Post-Office Department, said today that this would cut off the entire revenue from about 75 per cent of all the post-offices in the country. In the New England and Middle States, the offices at which the sales of stamps aggregate more than enough to pay the Postmasters' salaries average about one in three, in the Western States about one in four, and in the South about one in eight. Besides the great reduction in revenues, the operation of the new law will entail a great deal of additional labor on the Post-Office Department. At present many small offices retain 60 per cent of the receipts and pay the other 40 per cent to a carrier who delivers the mail to and from the depots. After Oct. 1 these small offices will retain all the receipts, and the carriers will have to be paid by warrant from the Post-Office Department. Much other additional work now distributed among country Postmasters will also be transferred to the department, and it is believed that the deficiency for the first few years will be much greater than was at first expected.

SUGARS.

INVESTIGATING BELMONT'S CHARGES.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 7.—[Special.]—The customs officials have no confidence that the special committee which has been appointed to visit California to investigate the charges that the Hawaiian treaty is violated in the importation of sugars will discover any fraud. This incredulity has been increased by a report which has just been received from our Minister, Daggett, at the Hawaiian Kingdom, who states that he has made a thorough investigation, and is satisfied that the reports that sugars from Manilla were brought to Honolulu and then shipped to the United States as a product of the Sandwich Islands, paying no duty, are untrue. Minister Daggett relates that the improbability of these reports was evident to any person familiar with the business of the Sandwich Islands. Every man, woman, and child in the islands is interested, directly or indirectly, in the sugar-producing industry. The commerce of the islands is small. To suppose that cargoes could be landed in Honolulu and trans-shipped to American ports under false pretenses would imply that a little army of officials must be bribed, and that an alert and gossipy population must be asleep. The charges upon which Perry Belmont made his report were in evidence before the House Committee on Foreign Affairs by one Henry G. Brown, formerly a Special Treasury Agent, who of late years has apparently acted in the interest of the Louisiana planters, and has been very active in efforts to secure the abrogation of the Hawaiian treaty. Had the Committee on Foreign Affairs seen fit to print this testimony or give the press access to it, Perry Belmont's minority report would have had little value, and the Secretary of the Treasury would not have suffered the humiliation of publicly stating that the first that he had heard of these charges was contained in Perry Belmont's report. Two Special Treasury Agents, however, will soon start for the Pacific coast with instructions to make a thorough investigation.

AQUATIC.

HANLAN AND KENNEDY ON THE WATER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 7.—[Special.]—Hanlan takes a good long pull twice every day, once in the morning and once in the afternoon. He has a good many pounds of extra flesh to work off before the big race next month, and rows in heavy flannels. He will not stay here to practice until just before the race as he at first intended, but will probably leave for Boston some time next week. He is afraid of malaria here, particularly as he has just come from the cold climate of Canada, and is not at all acclimated. He thinks it particularly dangerous to practice down the river, where they are dredging for the flats improvement, and says that the odors in that vicinity are anything but pleasant. He has already felt a buzzing in his head occasionally which he doesn't like. He hasn't heard anything from Ross lately, and no understanding about a race with him has been reached. Ross would without doubt like to be down here to see how things are going, but he would be apt to receive a very cold reception if he should come. John Kennedy practices but once a day, about 1 o'clock. He has but little flesh to spare, and in consequence does not row in such heavy clothes as Hanlan. He will continue to take one long pull daily until his race with Hanlan. He is feeling and looking much better than he did before he commenced to train, and expects to be in tip-top condition on the 30th of May. Hanlan and Kennedy are good friends, and they expect their friendship to continue after their race. Kennedy asked Hanlan last fall for a chance to meet him, and the request was granted at once. That was all the talk there was about their match. The champion knows that he has a fine oarsman to row against, but he has won too many times not to feel perfectly confident. Kennedy is wonderfully skillful with his oars, and if he had Hanlan's strength they say could leave him easily.

ORDNANCE.

NEGOTIATING FOR LARGE CONTRACTS.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 7.—[Special.] The Ordnance Department of the army, as a preliminary step towards the manufacture of the steel guns and cast-iron mortars hooped with steel, for which an appropriation was made at the last session of Congress, has this week addressed a circular to eleven of the leading steel-manufacturing establishments of this country, requesting that they state whether they possess the necessary facilities for manufacturing the steel parts required, and of the right quality. Open hearth or Siemens-Martin steel is required. This has been done with a view of determining whether these guns can be fabricated from home products exclusively, as it is the desire of the Ordnance Department to be independent of foreign steel-makers if possible. The circular requests that the home firms give the subject their serious consideration, and with their reply to give expression to their views generally upon the matter. In accordance with the spirit of the law, the department will give all possible assistance and encouragement in this matter. It will require some experiments and probably delay before the large forgings required for tubes and jackets can be satisfactorily produced in this country, but it is thought that the hoops required can be obtained from our tire-rolling mills with a proper modification of the plant. The cular contains several tables giving the physical properties of gun-steel furnished by foreign countries.

NOTES.

WESTERN VISITORS.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 7.—[Special.]—J. A. Brown and E. N. Johnson, of Chicago; the Hon. Thad C. Pound, of Wisconsin; and J. W. Johnson, of Minneapolis, are registered at the hotels tonight.

THE PRESIDENT.

The report that the President has positively accepted the invitation to visit Chicago in June is inaccurate. All that he did say in response to the invitation of President Keith, of the Union League Club, was that if he should visit Chicago, he would accept the invitation.

A NEW CANAL SCHEME.

It is stated that the money has been raised to build a ship canal across the Peninsula by what is known as the Sassafras route, the $8,000,000 required having been raised in France. The canal is to be constructed within the next four years.

CONKLING'S CANDOR.

The National Republican, Administration organ, has the following: "Roscoe Conkling had a room full of listeners while he was speaking in the electric-light patent suit yesterday. He spoke with marvelous facility of the details, and warmed up with his subject until the perspiration ran off his beard in frequent drops. He seemed to be in better health and spirits, and when he gathered up his papers he said to Solicitor McCammon, 'Give me one of those rubber bands on your desk. I guess it's about all I shall get out of this Administration.'"

TAXING ART.

The secret of the absurd provision in the new Tariff law, imposing a high duty on foreign works of art, has been discovered. It appears that Boteler, of West Virginia, a member of the Tariff Commission, is himself an amateur artist, and that he ascertained that there are 1,500 persons who earn their living from art in the United States, and he induced the Tariff Commission to report the rate of duty which he thought would protect these artists against what he called "Dutch daubs," and the recommendation of the commission was incorporated in the bill, and the duty on works of art imported into this country was increased from 10 to 30 per cent ad valorem.

THE DYNAMITE SCARE.

The State Department has received no advices relative to the dynamite scare in England beyond what is contained in the press reports. The officials decline to state whether any special steps have been taken to discover any violation of the neutrality laws by Irish-Americans, but it is believed that special efforts are being made in that direction.

INVESTIGATING YELLOW-FEVER.

Surgeon-General Hamilton, of the Marine Hospital service, has gone to Florida for the purpose of considering any preventive measures that may be taken as to yellow-fever. The Florida authorities last year were ready to take the money of the National Government, but declined to accept any Government supervision, and were specially hostile to the Marine Hospital Service.

THE CIVIL-SERVICE COMMISSIONERS.

A story has recently been published in the West to the effect that the Civil-Service Commissioners have violated their own principles in the matter of the appointment of a stenographer. Mr. Eaton, who had his attention called to this report today, said it was absolutely without foundation except in the respect that they have a very excellent stenographer and do not intend to make any change.

THE NEW CRUISERS.

It appears that there is a great diversity of opinion among the Naval Constructors as to the specifications for the new steel cruisers. Some of the constructors favor double screws, others single screws. One objects to the plan of moving the guns by hydraulic power, another opposes the plan for steel decks. Secretary Chandler is anxious to secure unanimity before the work commences.

ARRESTED.

H. H. Alexander, the stenographer who reported the Guiteau trial, was arrested this morning early on the charge of having been connected with the fracas at the house of May Field and locked up. One empty and one full bottle of whisky were found upon his person. He gave bail today, and his father, Columbus Alexander, who was noted in connection with the district investigation and the safe-burglary affair, announces that he intends to see him through.

THE PANAMA ARRESTS.

The report that the Government is doing nothing with regard to the Americans imprisoned in Panama on a charge of being concerned in the robbery of a keg of gold is not true. State-Department officials say that they have corresponded with the Colombian Government, and that everything has been done which can be done. The delay which has occurred is simply the delay always attendant upon criminal procedure. Pinkerton, the detective, is reported to have informed the State Department that the men under arrest have been under suspicion before.

RETALIATION.

Recent dispatches from our Consuls indicate that there is growing apprehension in several European countries of retaliatory legislation on the part of the United States on account of the opposition to American pork. It is the impression at the State Department that the President will recommend retaliatory measures to Congress. The State Department officials are said to be now engaged in considering whether anything could be done, in the absence of legislation, to rebuke countries which are making discriminations against the United States, but doubtless nothing will be done until Congress meets. A number of countries now levy export duties, which are at times considered discriminations. Among them are Austria, France, Italy, Spain, Russia, Turkey, Norway, Mexico, Japan, Morocco, the Argentine Republic, Peru, Guatemala, and Hayti. Special export taxes are also levied in some of the British colonies, and the system obtains in the British East Indies and in Cuba and Porto Rico. The export duties in Cuba are particularly hostile to the United States.

TREASURY STATEMENT.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 7.—The statement of the United States Treasurer shows the gold, silver, and United States notes in the Treasury today as follows: Gold coin and bullion, $185,053,148; silver dollars and bullion, $107,560,961; fractional silver coin, $28,883,178; United States notes, $43,788,070. Total, $364,285,357. Certificates outstanding: Gold, $43,506,800; silver, $71,071,411; currency, $9,135,000.

WESTERN MILITARY POSTS.

The appropriation of $200,000 for the enlargement and construction of such military posts as in the judgment of the Secretary of War may be necessary has been allotted as follows: Fort Thornburg (new fort), Wyoming Territory, $90,000; Fort Colville (new fort), Washington Territory, $50,000; Fort Anachauca, Ari. (improvement), $50,000; Fort Bliss, El Paso, Tex. (improvement), $10,000.

CELEBRATING LEE'S SURRENDER.

Gen. Sherman, Secretary Lincoln, Commodore Walker, Senator Hawley, Col. Dudley, and many others will leave here Monday to attend the banquet of the Union Veterans of Maryland at Baltimore in celebration of the anniversary of the surrender of Lee at Appomattox.

POSTMASTERS APPOINTED.

The following Postmasters were appointed: Mrs. C. E. Aplington, Polo, Ill.; David D. Grant, Venango, Pa.; P. A. Hazzard, Colorado, Tex.

SECRETARY FOLGER'S HEALTH.

Secretary Folger has almost entirely recovered. He went riding horseback this afternoon, and appears benefited by the exercise. It is expected the Secretary will be able to resume his duties at the Treasury Department Monday morning. He has given his personal attention to almost all important matters that have been presented to the department the last week or two. The Secretary has abandoned his contemplated trip to Bermuda.

MORTUARY.

The funeral of the late Gen. Joseph K. Barnes, ex-Surgeon-General, took place this afternoon with military honors. The escort consisted of a battery of United States artillery, two companies of heavy artillery, two companies of United States marines, and the Union Veteran Corps.

PLANNING A SERENADE.

The Indianians resident here held a meeting at their club-rooms tonight, and appointed a committee to arrange for a serenade and reception to Gen. Gresham upon his arrival here.

An evening paper publishes the following letter from the wife of Sergt. Mason:

LOCUST GROVE, Va., April 4.—I have read in your paper of the very strange steps taken by J. G. Bigelow, and his effort to get at my money, which good, kind, and generous people gave to me for the benefit of myself and dear little baby. I have never employed Bigelow to attend to any business for me, and he has never rendered me any service, either, and I want the public to know this. He pretends to have done so much for my husband, but I never employed him, and I have no money for Bigelow; and I hope the court will throw aside his unjust claim. My poor husband is still in prison, and Bigelow should be ashamed to try to take from me money given to me and my child for our support. Bigelow has never done any good for my husband, and he cannot have any of the money with my consent. Respectfully,

BETTIE E. MASON.

A HOMELY SUBJECT.

Facts Which Are "An Open Secret"—A Correspondent Answered.

Two articles which have recently appeared in THE TRIBUNE on a very homely subject have attracted more attention than is usually accorded to newspaper suggestions. In the first article an effort was made to point out the vital importance to public health of securing good sewerage. The second article, printed last week, told readers how to distinguish between the genuine and bogus quality of sewer-pipe. Both articles have created much discussion, and have been made the occasion of numberless inquiries. Among the queries which are deserving of notice is the following, received yesterday:

CHICAGO, April 6.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Your articles on sewerage and sewer-pipes ought to be read by every man and woman in this country. Now, why don't you go a step further and tell your readers plainly just what kind of sewer-pipe to buy? Tell them what pipe is the standard in Chicago. If you have any doubts yourself on the subject, send a reporter to the Sewerage Department. I know of sewer-pipe laid in this city in 1857 that is today just as sound as it was when first put down. I don't suppose you can do any free advertising, but I wish that the facts about sewer-pipe could be made known, so that people who paid for what they supposed to be the genuine article could always get it.

"AN OLD READER."

The facts about sewer-pipe are quickly and easily told. The best known article is the sewer-pipe made at Akron, O. At that place there is found a peculiar quality of clay which burns, vitrifies, and glazes perfectly. Just why this clay is peculiar to Akron is as much of a mystery as the Montana silver deposit, the California gold-beds, or the Pennsylvania oil wells. The clay found at Akron, when converted into sewer-pipe, becomes even more indestructible than an iron pipe, which must, in the course of manufacture, be run around a "core," will vary in thickness, is liable to "sand holes," and will not withstand acids. When coated with asphalt it is of course impossible to discover the defects in iron pipe. The correspondent allues to the pipe regarded as "standard" in this city. It is the Akron pipe. It has stood every test and is indorsed both by the Department of Public Works and the Sewerage Department. The great works of the Pullman Palace-Car Company are drained entirely by pipe make at Akron, O. Since 1857 nine-tenths of the sewer-pipe laid by the Chicago authorities was from Akron. It is indorsed by such distinguished engineers as E. S. Chesbrough, Bennzette Williams, and G. Howard-Ellers. The truth regarding the Akron pipe is an open open secret. Indeed, many of the most prominent architects of the city will specify no other kind of pipe.—Adv.

MILLIONS IN IT.

Scotch Capital Invested in Cattle Ranches in Wyoming.

The largest sale of American cattle and ranch property on record was completed at Edinburg, Scotland, last Monday. Last summer Mr. James Wilson, of Edinburg, came to this country to look at the Western cattle business, and perhaps invest for himself and friends. After looking through Kansas, New Mexico, and Colorado, he went to Wyoming. That Territory he considered was well sheltered and well adapted to grazing and ranching purposes. At Cheyenne Mr. Wilson met Mr. A. H. Swan, the manager of the three live-stock companies known as the Swan & Frank Live-Stock Company, the National Cattle Company, and the Swan & Anthony Cattle Company. At Mr. Wilson's request he was shown this property and was much delighted with it. The result was that the trustees of the combined companies gave Mr. Wilson the refusal of the property at a stipulated price, $2,553,825. Mr. Wilson returned to Scotland, Mr. Swan accompanying him, and the sale was consummated last week at the above price. On the ranch are 87,000 head of cattle, 1,200 horses, 1,600 graded bulls, a large lot of land, buildings, etc. The range extends over 100 miles one way and forty another, and is one of the most valuable in the West.

A new company has been organized, known as the Swan Land and Cattle Company, with a capital of $3,000,000. About one-third of this capital is held by Chicago parties, among them being Joseph Frank, Rosenbaum Brothers, G. Snydacker, and H. L. and L. E. Frank. Mr. Swan will continue as manager, and the Cheyenne parties interested in the old firm hold a considerable interest in the consolidation. About $100,000 of stock is held in Milwaukee.

Parties who are acquainted with this property say the herd could not have been purchased this spring for less than $500,000 more than the price agreed upon with Mr. Wilson last fall.

IT DOES NOT SUIT.

Objections of Chicago Justices to the Bill to Punish Drunkards.

A TRIBUNE reporter yesterday asked a number of the Justices and police magistrates what they thought of Senator Clark's proposed amendment to the criminal code, which provides that for the third offense a drunk or disorderly person shall be fined and also imprisoned in the County Jail for not more than six months, and that for the fourth offense he shall be sent to the penitentiary for one year. The Justices, as a rule, are opposed to the amendment. Justice Wallace said it would not only fill to overflowing the jail and the penitentiary, but that in certain cases, where persons had been arrested for the third or fourth offense, they would be turned out by the police before being brought into court.

"If, for instance," suggested the reporter, "they were good friends of Ald. Appleton of the Second Ward."

"Exactly so," answered Justice Wallace. "Probably I would vote against the amendment were I in the Legislature, although it might do no harm to try the experiment for a while."

Another Justice, who does not want his name mentioned, said he thought that the amendment, if passed, would work an injustice to the men who were not habitual drinkers, but who went on a spree about every six months, and were sober, respectable citizens between the sprees. He thought that some men were so constituted that they had to get drunk every so often as though controlled by a species of insanity.

DAYS OF GRACE.

Is a Chattel Mortgage Entitled to Any?

C. S. Munson is the proprietor of a hotel located opposit the Illinois Central depot, and designated in the City Directory as the Massasoit House. Mr. Munson seems to have contracted debts which his creditors claim he does not settle, and a number of them are endeavoring to effect a compromise with the aid of the Sheriff. The principal claim is that of E. W. Blatchford & Co., who have held a promissory note bearing Munson's signature for an amount exceeding $30,000 since April 4, 1881, and partially secured by a chattel mortgage on the hotel furniture. John L. Barnum & Co. are also creditors of Munson, and obtained judgment for $1,048.67 in the Superior Court Nov. 5, 1880. Another creditor is Robert E. Jenkins as Assignee, to the extent of about $900. John L. Barnum & Co., through their attorney, have made several efforts to collect their claim, but not succeeding, have, as they claim, been patiently waiting for the expiration of the chattel-mortgage held by E. W. Blatchford & Co. This, they also state, expired on Friday, and they immediately placed an execution in the hands of Deputy-Sheriff Burke, who levied on the furniture. On the other hand, E. W. Blatchford & Co.'s attorney claims that the mortgage had not expired, as they were entitled to three days' grace, and yesterday replevined the goods. Here the matter rests at present, as a legal controversy will be instituted to decide whether or not a chattel mortgage is entitled to three days' grace.

A Great Falling Off in the East-Bound Freight Shipments.

Chances of a War Among the Roads—Dressed Beef Rates—Miscellaneous Notes.

Dull Times Approaching—Another Heavy Decrease in East-Bound Freight Shipments.

The boom in east-bound freight shipments which kept up so remarkably until March 24 is now entirely over. Within two weeks east-bound shipments of flour, grain, and provisions from this city have had such a decline as has never before been experienced. Of course it was not expected that with the opening of navigation so close at hand the total shipments would remain in the neighborhood of 70,000 tons per week, which they were for the week ending March 24, and for some months previous to that. But no one expected that the decline would be so heavy and so sudden. For the week ending March 24 the total shipments of flour, grain, and provisions east from this city amounted to 70,707 tons. For the week ending March 31 they ran down to 48,092, and for the week just past the total amounted to but 30,647 tons. Sinch March 24 the flour shipments have fallen off 7,477 tons; the grain shipments 29,137 tons; and the provision shipments 3,446 tons. It will thus be seen that while there has been a decrease on all the above-named articles, the principal falling off was on grain shipments, which shows that the heavy decrease in east-bound shipments is mostly due to the approaching opening of navigation. East-bound shipments are now but little heavier than they were at this time last year, when they amounted for the week corresponding with the one just past to 28,172 tons, or a difference of only 2,000 tons, and it is quite likely that this difference will be wiped out this week. For the same week in 1881 the total shipments were 53,963 tons. This rather indicates that the business of the roads running East from this city will not be heavier during this summer than the last one, unless there should be a war between the trunk lines, which is not at all among the improbabilities, although strong efforts are being made to prevent it.

The great trouble between the trunk lines is that they find it rather difficult to agree upon percentages for the two new Eastern lines from this city—the Nickel-Plate and the Chicago & Atlantic. If these roads are not admitted into the east-bound pool and guaranteed a percentage of the business, they will be compelled to cut the rates, and this of course will compel the regular pool lines to follow suit. An attempt was made in New York during the last week to admit the Nickel-Plate into the east-bound live-stock pool, but failed, because the Nickel-Plate demanded 15 per cent of the business, which is largely in excess of what the Grand Trunk and Baltimore & Ohio are now getting. Of course no such exorbitant demand could be entertained, especially as the Chicago & Atlantic will open for through business and will then also want proportionately as large a share as the Nickel-Plate. The matter has been referred to Arbitrator Adams, who will have no easy task in arriving at a satisfactory solution of the problem. If the Nickel-Plate is given an unduly large share of the live-stock business, it will no doubt ask for an equally large proportion of the dead-freight business, and that question will be still more difficult of solution than the live-stock one.

There is another matter that is likely to cause considerable trouble among the Eastern lines this spring. An effort is making by the roads which do but little of the dressed-beef business to strike a blow at the Grand Trunk and one or two other lines which are doing the bulk of it by bringing about an advance in dressed-beef rates. At present the rate from Chicago to New York is 60 per cent more than the live-stock rates, which, it is claimed, is about as high as the business can stand, and the roads which now do most of it say they would rather withdraw from the pool than to submit to a further advance in dressed-beef rates.

The following statement shows the amount of flour, grain, and provisions shipped east from this city by the various rail lines for the week ending April 7, 1883, and also the total shipments for the corresponding week last year:

	Flour, tons.	Grain, tons.	Provisions tons.	Total, tons.
Mich. Cent'l	3,285	2,818	1,380	7,483
Lake Shore.	804	1,594	1,333	3,731
Ft. Wayne..	1,673	3,171	1,315	6,159
Pan-Handle	1,459	2,235	1,226	4,920
Balt. & Ohio	246	489	299	1,034
Gr'd Trunk	221	4,245	860	5,324
Nick'l-Pl'te	......	1,970	24	1,994
Total, 1883	7,688	16,522	6,437	30,647
Same week, 1882....	5,553	16,607	6,012	28,172

The percentages this year were: Michigan Central, 24.4; Lake Shore, 12.2; Fort Wayne, 20.1; Pan-Handle, 16; Baltimore & Ohio, 3.4; Grand Trunk, 17.4; Nickel-Plate, 6.5. The percentages last year were: Michigan Central, 13.4; Lake Shore, 17.6; Fort Wayne, 25.4; Pan-Handle, 10.8; Baltimore & Ohio, 8.3; Grand Trunk, 24.

The Grand Trunk Policy.

TORONTO, Ont., April 7.—[Special.]—It is understood here that the Grand Trunk Railway Company, in consequence of the trouble they experience in working, and the misrepresentation to which the company and its officers are constantly subjected, will remove almost immediately their locomotive establishments from the Cities of Hamilton and Toronto. The great English companies long ago adopted the policy of building up towns at points remote from the large centres of population and which would be principally inhabited by their own employés, as, for instance, Crewe on the London & Northwestern Railway, the people resident in which are almost wholly employed on the railway. The place sends a representative to the House of Commons. Stratford is said to be looked upon as the most eligible place for the western shops, and a large tract of land is to be purchased east of Toronto on which to place running-sheds and ample yard accommodation. This arrangement would better equalize the mileage of the divisions between Belleville on the one hand and Stratford and Hamilton on the other. It would prevent delays which now arise in the working of trains, and enable the train staffs, etc., to live cheaper, as well as materially reduce the company's expenditures.

To Put None but Sober Men on Guard.

GALENA, Ill., April 7.—[Special.]—Orders have just been issued by Superintendent Swineford, of Baraboo, and posted up along the line of the Galena and Madison Division of the Chicago & Northwestern Road, providing that from this date all trainmen in the employ of the company who are found drinking in saloons or are known to be in the habit of using liquor as a beverage will be summarily discharged, and that the simple presence of employés in saloons, providing they are not seen to drink, shall be regarded by the company as sufficient evidence that such men are intemperate, and they will, in consequence, be relieved from duty. The order applies to section as well as to train men, and is to be rigidly enforced. The prompt resignation of all those who are unwilling to comply with the provisions is called for. It is the intention of the company to have none but strictly temperate men in their employ.

Miscellaneous Items.

Mr. F. H. Kingsbury, Assistant General Freight Agent of the Pan-Handle Road, has been appointed General Agent of the Chicago, St. Louis & Pittsburg Railroad at Columbus.

Mr. C. L. Rising, General Agent of the Wabash, notifies lumber-dealers and connecting roads that, commencing Monday, the rate on soft lumber, lath, and shingles in car-loads from Chicago to Kansas City and other Missouri River points will be 15 cents per 100 pounds when destined to those points or beyond.

The Baltimore & Ohio yesterday brought here about 1,000 European emigrants, and about 300 came in by the Fort Wayne. The Chicago & Grand Trunk brought in three special trains with Canadian emigrants and emigrant goods who are on their way to Manitoba. They went west from here by the Milwaukee & St. Paul.

The representatives of the roads east from this city held another meeting yesterday at Commissioner Moore's office to take further action regarding Mr. Fink's letter requiring information regarding the relative cost of live-stock and dressed-beef shipments to be used by the Joint Executive Committee in determining whether the demand for an advance in dressed-beef rates is justifiable or not. The representatives of the various roads submitted such figures and statements as they were able to secure, and Commissioner Moore was instructed to compile and forward them at once to Commissioner Fink.

O. C. Foster, the Chicago agent of the Canada Souther Fast Freight Line, was notified by telegram from Buffalo yesterday to include the four following new points in the forthcoming tariff schedule: Montreal, Quebec, Ottawa, and Brockville, Ont., at the same rate as from Chicago to Philadelphia. The following four roads have furnished their complement of cars and will enter the line: Rome, Watertown & Ogdensburg, Ogdensburg & Lake Champlain, Utica & Black River, and Canadian Pacific. The line will soon be able to make rates on points on these roads. It is understood that the forthcoming tariff schedule contains no change with the exception of a reduction of five cents per 100 lbs on lumber.

THE CHICAGO ELECTION.

Comments of the Press upon Harrison's Victory—"A Menace to Good Government"—"The Wickedest City in the World."

[Dubuque (Ia.) Telegraph.]—Carter Harrison's election as Mayor of Chicago is not a victory of which Democrats have any reason to feel proud.

[Buffalo Express.]—It is a question whether the reëlection of Carter Harrison as Mayor, or the Great Fire, was the worst misfortune that has fallen to the lot of Chicago.

[Syracuse (N. Y.) Herald.]—Chicago yesterday reëlected Mayor Carter Harrison, who has the satisfaction of knowing that he has commanded the solid support of the Socialists, dramsellers, gamblers, and all other classes that have a share in giving Chicago the reputation of being the wickedest city in the Union.

[New York Herald.]—The Reformers, or Independents, of Chicago were beaten by the Democrats, who reëlected Carter Harrison. This gentleman was an out-and-out champion of the classes that keep the saloons of that many-salooned city. He is personally what is known as a "good fellow." His victory is something which makes decent men shudder.

[Milwaukee Wisconsin.]—Carter Harrison's overwhelming success in Tuesday's election at Chicago is attributed chiefly to the frantic opposition against him by the Inter Ocean. Chicago's defeated candidate for Mayor is not the first one who has learned by personal experience that indiscreet friends in politics are about as dangerous and hurtful as bitter enemies.

[Rochester (N. Y.) Democrat.]—The Chicago Republicans made a strong fight to redeem the city from the gamblers and thugs, but failed. The outlook is not very encouraging. The problem of municipal government is not being settled very rapidly or satisfactorily in this country. All of the great cities groan under the domination of a class that is wholly unfit to govern.

[St. Louis Post-Dispatch.]—The reëlection of Carter Harrison to be a third time Mayor of Chicago ought to be a lesson to those political amateurs who think it is an easy matter to draw the line between the good citizens and the bad ones in politics, and secure the triumph of virtue. Harrison has undoubtedly been supported by the gamblers, saloonkeepers, and the vicious elements of Chicago, and he has been denounced by the pulpit and opposed by genteel society.

[Quincy (Ill.) Whig.]—In Chicago, either the responsible citizens did not all vote, or the slums of the city hold a majority of its voters. The sluggers, thieves, and gamblers that infest Chicago won a notable victory in the reëlection of Carter Harrison. Such a result is a menace to good government, not only in Chicago, but everywhere else. And good government is always in danger when decency stays at home on election-day, and allows the irresponsible and the vicious to have sway at the polls.

[New York Sun.]—We are afraid that Chicago is a wicked city. On Sunday a number of the most eloquent and able Chicago preachers took occasion to denounce Carter Harrison and his Administration, and to advise their hearers to vote for the other man for Mayor; and yet, in spite of their solemn warnings, more persons voted for Harrison than for Judge Cary. To be sure, it may be said that many of those who voted for Harrison never go to church, and therefore could not be influenced by the voice of the preacher. But this only proves the more that Chicago is a very wicked city.

[New Haven (Conn.) Palladium.]—As we go to press the indications are that the City of Chicago has reëlected Mayor Harrison by a large majority. This means that the city is still in the hands and at the mercy of the worst element of Western civilization, whose sole idea of power is the commission of mischief and the overturning of law and order. No greater calamity, not even excepting the Great Fire, has ever come upon the Western Metropolis than this complete surrender of the city, with its great and varied interests, into the hands of a mob.

[Des Moines (Ia.) State Register.]—The saloon has won in Chicago again. It carried the day, and Carter Harrison, its promoter and defender, on top of it, on Tuesday, with plenty of votes and abundance to spare. All the better elements of society in the city, regardless of politics, united to break its rule, and were confident of doing it. The honest press of the whole city, the pulpit, the leading business-men, the best and strongest men among the lawyers, the moral forces of society, united to overthrow the rule of the grog-shop—but to no avail.

[Albany Evening Journal.]—In Chicago, party lines were not drawn with much exactness. Carter Harrison ran as the candidate of the saloons and faro-places; and the issue was made against him by the Law-and-Order elements of both parties. Democratic as well as Republican papers opposed him, and Democratic as well as Republican clergymen preached against him. The result is only discouraging to Republicans insomuch as they feel themselves the representatives of decent government. The fact that the scum of Chicago has given Harrison over 10,000 majority is a proper subject for regret and mortification to all good citizens of whatever party. No sensible Democrat can rejoice that such a triumph has been won in the name and under the banner of his party. It is a victory which will cost the Democracy thousands of votes all over the country—a victory which would better not have been gained.

[New York Mail and Express.]—The tremendous majority for Harrison in Chicago, and the accounts of the orgies, have put a brand upon the city from which it will not soon recover. It is reported that all the saloons were open, that as many men as could be made so were drunk, and that several murders were committed, not to mention ordinary streets brawls and fights. It was stated by a Chicago man last Saturday that last year more murders were committed in Chicago than in the whole of Great Britain. From the manner in which Harrison's third term begins, it seems likely that this record will be beaten in the next two years. It remains to be seen whether the decent people of the city will wait two years and make a supreme effort to unload the gang of thieves, sandbaggers, and gamblers that rule the city, or move away and leave the modern Sodom to its destruction.

[Peoria (Ill.) Journal.]—In spite of the maledictions thundered from the press, and the prayers uttered from the pulpit, Chicago has voted to sustain the policy of Carter Harrison. It is not too much to say that Chicago is the wickedest city in the world, the most immoral, the most licentious, the most debased. Paris is immoral, but a man may walk the streets in the French Capital at midnight in security. In Chicago he would not be safe in midday. Neither London nor Rome, neither St. Petersburg nor Madrid, can boast of a set of criminals as vicious, as depraved, or as reckless as Chicago contains today. It is the common sewer where the craft of the East meets and mingles with the animal courage of the West. The Chicago thug has in him something of the diplomacy of the villain from the Paris slums engrafted upon the brute force of the border outlaw. The great majority of the citizens, all the floating class, had the issue strongly set before them. It was left to them whether they would have law and order, peace and prosperity, decency and morality, or whether they would have the dance-house, the variety-hell, the sandbagger, and the thug. To the disgrace of that city be it said that they have deliberately chosen the latter. The misrule, the open licentiousness, the lawlessness, the seething of the slums, that have made Chicago a hissing and a byword, are to be continued and intensified. The sober population of New York City rose up against the mismanagement of Tweed; but Tweed's government, with all its thefts and rascality, never presented a shadow of the coarse and brutal debauchery that fester in Chicago. The blame for sustaining this rests on Chicago's young men. When this is the complexion of the Metropolis, and these the tastes of her future government, God save the Commonwealth."

[Adrian (Mich.) Times.]—The result of the Chicago election is a sad misfortune, not simply for the people who live there or who go there to do business, but to the cause of municipal reform. The result is hailed as "a Democratic victory." It is true that Carter Harrison, the Mayor, is a Democrat, and the convention that nominated him was a Democratic convention; but the convention was run, and the result of the election was determined, by the most dangerous element of the city—the cutthroats, the whisky-guzzlers, pimps, sluggers, the scum and offal of the place. This element, under the two terms of Mayor Harrison, has come to the top in municipal affairs, doing its sweet will without let or hindrance from the Mayor or other representatives of the law. The streets of Chicago have come to be unsafe even in the daytime for decent people to walk through. The sluggers ply their vocation even in daylight in frequented thoroughfares. Just the other day a woman died from the effects of wounds received in the streets at the hands of a thug, who no doubt voted "early and often" for the Democratic candidate for Mayor. This is but an added illustration of the ease with which parties in large cities can be captured and run by the most lawless and dangerous element. In Chicago the sandbaggers, whisky-soakers, thieves, and cutthroats have seized the Democratic party; and there are enough honest sort of Democrats, who "always vote the party ticket," no matter if the Devil's name is on it, acting with them, to win at the ballot-boxes.

[Boston Journal.]—The Reform movement in Chicago has been buried under a majority of not far from 10,000. It had the support of all the reputable newspapers of the city, of the business-men, of the churches, of the moral elements of society, and into it had gone a large amount of enthusiasm, of hopefulness, and of hard work. But the difficulty of bringing the Republican organization into line with it was surmounted only at the cost of abandoning the candidate first selected by the Citizens. Time was lost in this way, and probably also some strength. At the other end were the 4,000 and more saloons, licensed and unlicensed, the hundreds of gambling-dens, and other places of ill-repute, and the Democratic organization, which is wholly under control of these elements. Not a gambler or saloonkeeper, not a rough or thief in the city, that was not "solid" and enthusiastic for Carter Harrison, the present Mayor; campaign-songs celebrating "Our Carter" were sung rapturously in the lowest dives which the city contains; and with all the election-machinery, the police-force, the men who guarded the polls, and the men who counted the votes, in their hands, and with all the lawless and demoralizing elements of the city population at their back, the success of Carter Harrison and his crowd was almost a foregone conclusion. Every friend of good government must deplore the result. For weeks past crimes of violence in Chicago have been alarmingly on the increase, and bold robberies on the street have been matters of daily occurrence. To all these things the Mayor has been blind and deaf, although ladies have been knocked down and robbed within a stone's toss of his residence. The lawless classes understand their man; they have reëlected him; and now they will be bolder than ever. It is a discouraging outlook for the good citizens of Chicago; but courage, determination, and self-sacrificing exertion will some time win the day for them.

[Milwaukee Sentinel.]—The triumph of Harrison embodies a lesson of the most serious import to the respectable classes in all populous communities. It illustrates the dangerous impotence of the unorganized forces in municipal politics as opposed to a close union of the vicious and irresponsible classes under the direction of a reckless leader. It is not party spirit, in common acceptance of the term, that welded the dangerous elements together in Harrison's support; it was rather the fraternal impulse of common depravity, common ignorance, and common audacity, under the manipulation of a cunning and desperate demagog. . . . It is a serious mistake for persons who are opposed to fanatical warfare on the saloons to unite politically in opposition to a very reasonable, and in the case of Chicago an essential, movement for an increase in license-fee. Because the importance of a higher saloon-tax was dwelt upon by the advocates of the Citizens' movement, although it did not directly involve the tax question, the saloon-people generally called upon all their friends to defeat the movement. It has been defeated, and the defeat will be charged directly to the saloon people. The evils which are bound to follow the reëlection of Mayor Harrison will be charged directly to the political combination of the saloon-men. This is bad for them. There is nothing to which the public is more sensitive than political combinations based on a special interest. The recognition of the political power of the saloon led to the Iowa movement, which, abortive as it has been, is an indication of the ability of the saloon-men to aid the fanatical temperance people. In Illinois there is a power that will do for Chicago what the city has been unable to do for itself. The next Legislature, made up of members from all parts of the State, will be charged to interest itself in running up the license. It will be found in the end that the saloonkeepers of Chicago have lost something by Democratic friendship.

SUNDAY, APRIL 8, 1883.

For the Lake region slightly warmer and fair weather with southerly to westerly winds.

SOME weeks ago mention was made of the indictment of Representative Crews, a member of the Legislature, who was charged with having obtained a sum of money from a bank in Belleville, Ill., on false representations. He was tried yesterday and promptly acquitted.

COUNTY-CLERK RYAN has evidently concluded that an admonition from Judge Smith is not one of the things for which he craves, and for this reason he yesterday put into the jury-box the lists of reputable jurors prepared by several of the County Commissioners. For some time to come the professional juryman will find his occupation gone, and the halls of justice will have a sweeter and more fragrant odor.

IT will be remembered that about two years ago the proprietress of a palace of sin on a very disreputable thoroughfare became converted, and for several months conducted, at her own expense, a mission for the regeneration of fallen women. The sympathies of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union were enlisted in the cause, and the good ladies finally assumed its management, under the name of the "Rehoboth Home." Miss Carrie Moffatt was appointed Matron, and for one year she has had the practical control of the mission. A few days ago the Woman's Christian Temperance Union withdrew its financial patronage, and the Matron, who regards it as her life work, will hereafter assume all responsibility. She has determined to abstain from personal begging appeals to the public, and will put her trust in faith. She sincerely believes that the Lord will provide, and that He will find the means of warming the public heart to a very deserving charity.

MAYOR HARRISON has requested all the heads of departments at the City-Hall to tender their resignation. It is understood that all will be reappointed except Fogarty, the Superintendent of Streets. His decapitation, if it occur, can be charged to his friendship for Capt. Finerty, who so badly shattered the City-Hall machine at the election last fall. The Mayor made his annual stump speech to the reporters yesterday, and as usual defended his Administration and made a scapegoat of the police. If the chief of the department were not a pachyderm he would object to this vicarious martyrdom.

THE IRISH CONVENTION.

Now that it is very certain Mr. Parnell will not come to this country at present the prospects for any good arising out of the forthcoming Land-League Convention at Philadelphia are not encouraging. There are to be two of these conventions, the one comprising representatives from the National League of Ireland, the Irish National Land League of the United States and Canada, and the Committee of Seven, which will meet on the 26th inst. On the 27th there will be a second convention of the hodge-podge sort, to which all Irish-American temperance, mutual aid, literary, musical, and patriotic organizations have been invited to send delegates. The object of these conventions, as it was originally defined, was to unite all classes of Irishmen in some common organization, or to devise some common method of relieving Ireland. It was a praiseworthy object, but there is now every reason to believe that the methods which will be devised will only serve to intensify the sufferings of Ireland.

Mr. Parnell's decision not to come has already induced the hot-headed leaders to turn the convention into a meeting for talking dynamite and other impossible methods for obtaining the independence of Ireland. More than one leader has openly expressed himself as in favor of a declaration of autonomy for Ireland, and as certain that such an expression would give belligerent rights to the Irish in America in any future martial enterprises they might take against the English Government. Mr. Patrick Ford, of New York, who has great influence, makes no secret of the affirmation that dynamite resolutions will be introduced and that the convention as a body will approve them. It may also be accepted as certain that an effort will be made to unite all the Irish-American organizations in a declaration of Irish independence. Mr. M. D. Gallagher, the President of the Parnell Land League, who is opposed to all these incendiary projects, also confirms the belief that in the absence of Mr. Parnell the dynamiters will force their resolutions and policy upon the convention and control its action. It is certain that Mr. Parnell, were he in attendance, would not favor any such policy, but at the same time he might not be able to control it. In such case it is probably just as well that he does not come, for as matters are going now he can be of more service at home, where the dynamiters are practically at work, than in this country, where there is nothing more harmful than resolutions to be expected, or indirect aid and sympathy with the Dublin and London conspirators.

At the same time, the convention will make a great mistake if it allows the O'Rossa faction to control it. It will forfeit a large share of the sympathy which Americans feel for the cause of Ireland. It will inevitably alienate this Government from any sympathy with it. Worse than all, it will only expose Ireland to renewed misery and suffering, and innocent people to retaliatory measures. Declarations of an Irish Republic will not be worth the paper on which they are written. Republics are not made in this manner. Resolutions passed by frantic zealots three thousand miles away are not going to alter the relations of Ireland to England. If they resort to any belligerent measures in this country they will only expose themselves to interference from its Government. It is an open question now whether O'Donovan-Rossa, if he really, as is alleged, is in complicity with the conspirators recently arrested at Birmingham, is not liable to arrest. If he and others are furnishing explosive machines to the Fenians in England and Ireland, and teaching them how to use them, no reasonable opposition can be made to the request of the English Government that it be allowed to land a corps of detectives here to help protect its rights; and it is open to question whether they are not violating our own laws. Even could these hot-headed patriots carry out all their schemes without interference, their proposed liberation of Ireland by force would be the wildest, most absurd, most impracticable scheme ever contemplated in history. It would be dashed to pieces in the first encounter with the tremendous power of the English Government. The leaders in the movement ought to understand that the people of this country have no sympathy with dynamite or assassination, whatever the objects to be attained may be, and there is no law-abiding citizen of it who would not approve of the arrest of O'Donnovan-Rossa or any other man who has been engaged in supplying Fenians across the water with dynamite-machines, and in explaining and ordering their use. If the leaders are wise they will oust the dynamiters, and place themselves and their cause before this country and the world in a light which will command sympathy, encouragement, and practical assistance.

CO-OPERATIVE STREET-CLEANING.

A recent number of a Philadelphia newspaper contains the following account of an individual street-cleaning enterprise in that city:

> The Messrs. Drexel, Mr. Childs, Mr. Edwin N. Benson, and Messrs. Strawbridge & Clothier have just been giving practical lessons in the art of street-cleaning that ought not to be lost upon Chief Estabrook and his corps of civil and shovel engineers. The jobs that these liberal gentlemen have had done at their own expense have been the best examples of street-cleaning ever seen in Philadelphia. The streets they have invaded have been swept, the ice and mud excavated with picks and gathered into heaps, and some thousands of cart-loads of the accumulated filth of the winter have been hauled away immediately, without any of the delays we have been accustomed to under the old system. It is a great wrong that such work should have to be done by a few citizens at their own expense, especially as they all pay heavy taxes to the city for having it done. It should never be allowed to become necessary again. They have shown that the streets can be cleaned, and their methods should be adopted by the city authorities. People will pay their taxes cheerfully if they find that good work is to be obtained for the money.

The merchants and house-owners of Chicago in the principal business districts will find it profitable to follow this Philadelphia example, not merely for the purpose of instructing the street-cleaning contractors how the thing may be done, but as the only means of getting rid of the mud and slush which have accumulated during the winter. It is certainly exasperating to pay taxes for doing this work and then do it at private expense, but not so exasperating as the present impassable condition of the streets. Besides, it must be remembered that the taxpayers of Chicago do not contribute liberally enough to provide all the requirements of model city government. The rate of taxation is limited to 2 per cent—which is high enough—but the rate of assessment runs from one-fifth to one-third of the actual value of the taxable property. Taxpayers can well afford, therefore, to do something more, especially if their extra and voluntary contributions can be made directly tributary to their own business interests.

It is perfectly certain that, if the job be left to the city contractor, it will be two or three months before the business thoroughfares will be cleaned, and then the work will be only partially and unsatisfactorily done. During these sixty or ninety days the filth in the streets will injure business to an extent greatly in excess of the amount of money which will be required for a thorough cleansing. The wholesale business will be damaged by the wear and tear on the horses and wagons engaged in hauling their stocks and the soiling of their goods. The retail business will be damaged still more by the loss of trade. When ladies cannot come down-town shopping except at the expense of dragging their dresses in the mud and getting splashed by passing teams, it stands to reason that the attractiveness of shopping, so dear to the feminine heart, is considerably diminished. The volume of spring trade will be contracted by many thousands of dollars if the main thoroughfares be permitted to remain in their present filthy condition.

The expense of cleaning a block of pavement, if equitably divided among the occupants of the stores and the owners of the office buildings, will be exceedingly small to each individual subscriber. Without going into detail, it is probable that $10 from each party in interest, or a payment at that rate per twenty-five feet, would yield a sufficient sum to dig, sweep, and cart away the mud and dirt, and that $1 a week thereafter in the same proportion would keep the streets clean from day to day during the spring. The merchants and house-owners along Michigan and Wabash avenues, State, Clark, Dearborn, La Salle, and other principal thoroughfares running north and south, and the cross-streets between the river and Van Buren street, will find it a paying investment to discharge the actual cost of doing the work. These same persons do not refuse or neglect to subscribe the necessary funds for sprinkling the streets during the hot and dry season, but the cleaning of the streets during the wet and muddy season is of much greater importance. If the merchants, shopkeepers, and house-owners of two or three blocks would inaugurate the system the others would soon follow. Any owner or occupant who should refuse to contribute his mite would soon be shamed into doing his duty by the filthy appearance in front of his premises, and it would not be long before he would discover that he was losing more than he saved by his niggardliness.

There will be another advantage from this coöperative system of street-cleaning in the business-districts. It will leave more of the city funds for cleaning the residence streets, and the merchants will thus get back at their homes a compensation for their down-town expenditure. The appropriation for street-cleaning this year is $190,000. On the limited scale at which the contractors proceed, with an insufficient sum which is slowly and grudgingly paid out to them, they will scarcely reach the outside streets at all if they undertake to clean the business-districts first. The property-owners on Wabash avenue south of Twenty-third street, for instance, paid out a large sum of money last summer for the repaving of their street with the asphalt blocks, but the new pavement will be of little use or comfort to them if it shall remain under a foot of mud all spring, only to be converted into fine dust in the summer. There would be some chance to get the residence streets swept by the city contractors if the down-town streets were cleaned at private expense. If a few of those who are chiefly interested in having clean streets will go at this work the satisfactory result will induce others to follow, and some enterprising owner of teams can establish a good business by taking a block to clean, soliciting subscriptions, and doing the work upon the plan adopted for street-sprinkling.

UNDERGROUND TRANSIT.

The phenomenal growth of the cities of the world is forcing the question of transit on, over, or under their streets into the first place in public consideration. Paris has just chartered a company which proposes to build an elevated road and to carry the workingmen from one end of that city to the other and back for less than five cents a day. Boston is experimenting with the Meigs elevated road that was exhibited there some time ago. Philadelphia has put into operation an experimental section of the cable road that is so successful for surface transit in San Francisco and in Chicago.

A bill has been favorably reported to the New York Legislature by the Assembly Committee on Cities to extend the powers of the company which has undertaken the task of building an underground road from the Battery to Harlem. Secretary Windom is interested in this project, and capitalists like Mr. Astor and Wilson G. Hunt are ready to contribute the money that may be needed. Such engineers as Gen. Viele and Gen. McClellan have declared the plans of the company perfectly feasible.

The enterprise is nothing less stupendous than the construction underneath Broadway of a subterranean Broadway with sidewalks for foot-passengers, electric lights, two tracks for way-trains, two tracks for express-trains, and conduits for carrying water, sewer, gas, steam, and other pipes, and the telegraph wires. All this is to be done without disturbing a stone or brick on the upper street. As the excavation is made, beginning at the Battery, the sidewalks and roadway of Broadway will be replaced on arches of solid masonry resting on heavy iron columns set in secure foundations. There will be no interruption to travel, as a movable street one block long will be kept over the excavation and pushed along as it progresses. The iron columns that support the upper street will be used for carrying the surface drainage to the sewers. The cost of this work will be about $2,000,000 a mile, and the length of the road will be twelve miles, from the Battery to Harlem.

Elevated transit has not proved a complete success in New York, and there are not a few persons who believe the day will come when the present structures will be taken down. They are a nuisance that can only be endured until a substitute has been found. When accidents occur between stations the unhappy passengers are caged for hours in the upper air, unable to reach the ground, although within walking distance perhaps of their homes. Bolts, live coals, grease, and tobacco quids are continually dropping from the engines, or cars, or passengers upon the passers-by below. The expense of keeping this iron bridge, twelve miles long, in safe repair, with trains rushing over it at a high rate of speed, is very great, and this, with that of making good the damages that have accrued to property on the lines of the roads, may carry the cost of elevated transit so high that it will have to be abandoned. Another argument in favor of the underground plan is, that with all the facilities of the surface and overhead lines the people of New York have not transportation enough for the busy hours of the day. It is impossible to get a seat in the elevated cars in the morning and evening.

Chicago must some day, and that not a very distant one, have rapid transit. The cable roads are a success for the public as well as for the company that had the intelligent enterprise to introduce them, but surface transit can never under any circumstances be rapid transit. Our river with its bridges, which would detain trains almost continually during the season of lake navigation, make elevated roads from the centre of the city impossible in any direction except towards the south, while the greatest need of rapid transit is towards the west. The steam roads which enter the city on all sides and approach so near the centre do not give intramural transit, as their routes are not the ones the streams of city population follow, and as surface roads they are restricted to a speed of six miles an hour.

These considerations give us a special interest in watching the success of the New York underground scheme. If successful there, it would be successful here. With electricity to light the tunnel, and electricity to drive the engines without smoke or gas, the horrors of the underground travel of London could be entirely avoided. The expansiveness of Chicago is a characteristic that demands rapid transit as urgently as the concentration of population along the narrow axis of New York. The underground plan is the only one that disposes of the difficulty of the river. The digging through our clay and sand would be as easy as it will be arduous through the hard rocks of New York. Water will be the obstacle that would give us the most trouble, but that could easily be disposed of by drainage and pumps.

FUNERAL REFORMS.

The newspaper discussion of the objectionable features of the prevailing funeral system has recently been revived, especially in regard to the dangers from exposure in raw weather and on damp ground. There is no doubt that the attendance at funerals and the observance of the common usages are responsible for a large amount of ensuing illness and many deaths. At a time when pneumonia has become almost as full of terror as scarlet-fever or small-pox in an epidemic form, it is certainly perilous, if not actually sinful, to impose by mere force of custom an unnecessary exposure upon those who feel it a duty to accompany the remains of a deceased friend to the cemetery and stand with uncovered head during the ceremony at the grave. Respect for the dead does not properly involve danger to the living.

In spite of the progressive spirit of the age cremation does not seem to grow in favor. The number of those who believe in incineration in theory may be increasing, but the actual practice of this means of disposing of the dead is so rare as to command universal attention for every individual case. No prejudices are more deeply rooted than those which pertain to the treatment of the dead, and many generations of the living will intervene before cremation will be substituted for interment of the body. Meanwhile the cause of public health demands some radical reforms in burial usages. The first step should be taken by the companies owning or controlling cemeteries, and an excellent model is furnished by the principal cemetery in Utica, N. Y., which is provided with two capacious chapels. One is of stone, where funeral services are held in summer, and the other of iron and glass, where they are held during the rest of the year. The chapel is described as a sort of conservatory, full of tropical verdure, the funeral-train passes through a covered carriageway, and the services are conducted in light and warmth, among trailing vines and blooming shrubs. At the conclusion of the services the corpse is surrendered to keepers, who bestow it in a vault to await interment in the grave under the supervision of one or more of the immediate family or friends of the deceased. In this manner the large number of persons frequently in attendance at funerals are saved the perils of exposure in inclement weather. Every cemetery should be provided with similar appointments; and it would be well if the Illinois Legislature, now in session, would pass a law requiring at least one such chapel for every burying-ground of larger dimensions than the village churchyard.

There are other reforms which may be established speedily by example. The most important of these is to make private funerals fashionable. Let the usual services be held in church or at the residence, to which friends shall be invited, with a notice that at the termination thereof the friends are desired to leave the remains in charge of the family and pall-bearers to be taken to their last resting-place. By this means a large part of the expense attached to the funeral may be saved to families who cannot afford to engage a score or more of carriages, the friends will not be tempted to risk a dangerous exposure in order to show their respect for the deceased or friendship for his family, and the privacy of the last rites will add to their solemnity. The custom of promiscuous floral offerings would also be more honored in the breach than in the observance. It has come to be a serious tax upon people of small means and wide acquaintance. A false sense of pride induces many people to incur expense for flowers to send to the funerals of deceased friends which they cannot afford. The example of private funerals and family flowers should be set by the rich, for the people of the middle and poorer classes will strive to keep up appearances as long as the present system remains in vogue. There is absolutely no compensation for the personal exposure and hardships incident to the funeral customs of the day. There is no other occasion where mere ostentation is so vulgar, and it can be of no possible advantage to the deceased to have his last appearance on earth entail misfortune upon those who were dearest or most attached to him in life.

ILLITERACY.

In December last Dr. Eaton, United States Commissioner of Education, delivered an address before the Union League Club of New York City on "Illiteracy, and its Social, Political, and Industrial Effects." Dr. Eaton analyzes the census of 1880, and from the analysis deduces conclusions of the most startling nature.

Let us group a few significant facts of the census. There are six and a quarter million persons 10 years of age and over, say one-eighth of the entire population of the United States, who cannot write their names—581,814 more than in 1870. There are four and a quarter million persons, 21 years of age and over, who cannot write, and half of these are white persons. There are fourteen million children of school age in the country, of whom only nine millions attend the public schools.

These few salient features of the census are sufficient for our present purpose. They are sufficient to show that the experiment of the maintenance of popular free government, based on universal intelligence, is not being tried in the United States. They show, on the contrary, that it is being tried under conditions not very dissimilar to those under which all the so-called strong Governments of history have been wrecked. They show such a large admixture of ignorance as must, unless dispelled, inevitably lead to riot, bloodshed, and revolution. For the ignorance of large masses of a population prevents them from accumulating property, and so tends to the concentration of wealth in a few hands. In the race for wealth, intelligence pitted against ignorance always wins. Under a strong Government intelligence and wealth control ignorance and poverty with the iron hand. Under a weak Government, like ours, intelligence and wealth secure the same end by debauching the ignorant and poor suffrage.

Already we have a land monopoly scarcely less oppressive in its future probabilities than that of Great Britain; it girdles the land in the form of railway grants. Combination among the railway magnates has destroyed competition, and we have a monopoly of transportation which involves, in the end, absolute control of prices of all the great staples. Through combination we have an absolute coal monopoly. Through the same influence the telegraph monopoly is supreme. In the same way the Standard Oil Company controls the price of light for all mankind. Through legislation all these monopolists lay their hands heavily on producers. They commence at the party primary and never relax their vigilance until the Legislature or the Congress adjourns. In Republican districts they are Republicans, in Democratic districts Democrats, in doubtful districts doubtful. They have no souls, for they are corporations. Their god is greed, and the lever with which they control legislation is ignorance.

Every fifth man who marches up to the polling-booth, taking the average through the United States, is an illiterate. He cannot write his name. He is ignorant of the issue upon which he votes. He belongs to the army of voting cattle, and that army of illiterates holds the balance of power in every election. This fifth man cannot be reclaimed; it is too late. But his children can and must be educated if our free institutions are to be preserved. How to do it is the problem of problems, for upon its early solution depends the life of the Great Republic. It is not a question of philanthropy! it is a question of self-preservation, not to the poor alone, but quite as much to the rich. For if the Government is to be wrecked, he who has the largest stake in the country is destined to suffer most.

Communism is spreading all over the face of the earth. No country is exempt from its malign influences. Out of the ranks of the 5,000,000 children for whom we provide no school accommodations tens of thousands of Communists will emerge upon the stage of active life, ready to deposit the perjured ballot in the sacred urn, and equally ready to carry and apply the torch of the incendiary. Illiteracy is the enemy of property rights. For, however long it may be bribed to protect them, there comes a time when it assumes the form of the Commune, and stabs, shoots, hangs, and burns.

What will you do with these 6,250,000 of persons 10 years of age and over who cannot write their names even, and who threaten the Government, threaten property, threaten civilization itself? They are savages who will seek to live in a civilized state by savage methods. They swarm in our cities, swelling the ranks of the criminal class. They crowd our penitentiaries, emerging again from time to time to prey on society.

Senator Logan's proposition to devote $60,000,000 annually from the whisky excise was received with something very like a sneer, but it must come to this if the land is to be saved from the deadly blight of ignorance. It will require twice the sum demanded by Mr. Logan to place these 5,000,000 vagrant children in school, where they must be placed if the country is to be saved from danger.

FIRES AND INSURANCE.

The magnitude of the losses of public and private property by fire exceeds probably the estimates of even careful observers. An estimate by an insurance paper shows that the losses by fire in this country and in Canada during the year 1882 (not including in the estimate any loss less than $100) exceed $90,000,000. This was a total loss, an annihilation of that much accumulated earnings of labor, all of which vanished in smoke. The distribution of this immense amount of losses among the States and Territories of the United States and in Canada is thus stated:

Another table gives a summary of the losses by fire during the eight years beginning with 1875 and ending in 1882, the loss aggregating $672,326,909.

Mr. Edward Atkinson has recently been investigating this question of the losses by fire. He estimates the direct and absolute loss in the country at $90,000,000 a year, and puts the cost of maintaining fire departments at $25,000,000 a year additional. To this he adds $60,000,000 a year as paid for insurance money, making an aggregate loss of $175,000,000 annually. This annual destruction or waste or annihilation of property is an immense tax, equal to about 15 per cent of every man's income. He attributes the leading causes of it to carelessness and ignorance in building. Hollow walls and lath partitions are largely responsible.

Some of the details of these losses have a peculiar interest, and ought to furnish instructive lessons to builders and architects. Under a classification called special hazards one of these papers gives the number of buildings which have been burned during the 2,920 days embraced within the eight years stated, and the following are given as the numbers of the buildings of the several classes destroyed by fire within that period:

Carriage shops	623	Printing offices	822
Churches	646	Cotton-gin houses	957
Bakeries	904	Foundries	1,096
Restaurants	1,131	Livery-stables	1,189
Flour mills	1,434	Barns and grain-houses	1,588
Sawmills	1,759	Saloons, etc.	1,757
Hotels	2,871	Country stores	3,084
Blacksmith shops	82

During the first three months of 1883 the losses by fire, including only cases where the loss equaled $100,000, aggregate $12,000,000. The total losses by fire during these same months, including cases where the loss on any one has not been less than $100, will possibly more than double these figures.

Municipal carelessness or negligence in controlling the construction of buildings, especially in cities, is largely responsible for these immense losses. Insurance may to some extent make good individual losses by fire, but it does not restore the property lost. The loss by fire is not remedied because insured. The annihilation of property and the loss of its value is the same whether it be insured or not. Insurance merely distributes the loss, but it does not restore the property, the loss of which is perpetual.

The men in City Councils who look upon building regulations as opposed to "the liberty of the citizen" because they restrain him from building his premises of inflammable material, and from inviting conflagration not only of his own building, but also of the buildings of others, are responsible for much of this enormous tax of $175,000,000 annually caused by fires, and the cost of maintaining precautionary measures to prevent them. A fire in a down-town district, where the telegraph wires stretched along the fronts of buildings may prevent the prompt and efficient service of the Fire Department, may from that reason increase the loss by fire to an extent that would soon pay for placing those wires underground. The best way to reduce the loss by fires is to avoid the danger of fire. A wise City Government will best protect property from loss by fire by such building regulations as will prevent the construction of buildings of inflammable materials, and by compelling each building to be as free as possible from the possibility of extension of fire from within or the contact with fire from without. The facility of obtaining insurance may to some extent encourage the faulty or hazardous construction of buildings and the employment of improper materials. Buildings of dangerous construction, as a rule, are generally insured; owners take no more risk than they are compelled to take. A refusal to insure buildings that are not sufficiently protected from risks by fire would perhaps have a wholesome effect upon the plans of architects and upon the self-interest of owners. In every case the owner should by the amount of his obtainable insurance be made to assume such a share of his own risk as to make him as careful in the protection of his building against fire within as from without. The annual experience of a tax of $175,000,000 in the shape of losses by fire will, perhaps, in time teach men and governments to adopt laws and methods of building that will reduce that tax below its present enormous rate.

PETS FOR PARLORS.

It is one of the most singular phases of modern esthetic culture that it defines no limit to folly and leads its votaries in all sorts of fantastic directions. It at first based itself upon the medieval, and so long as it confined itself to the harpies, griffins, and Gargantuan monstrosities of that period it at least was consistent, even if it did eliminate the principle of beauty. From the imitation of the old it led to a craze for the actually old. Genuine antiquity, however, is not a drug in the market, but whenever a demand arises for an article the supply follows. Consequently manufactories were established where antiquities were made, and at last they became so cheap that they fell into disfavor. It was within the limits of even the ordinary purse to procure vases of the Egyptian period, colonial clocks, andirons of Marie Antoinette's time, or tables and chests of Louis XIV.

It is one of the rules of modern culture that a beautiful thing is not always beautiful and cannot be a joy forever when once it has become common. It is but a few months ago that the sunflower was the rage among esthetic creatures, but as soon as it became common it was relegated to the back yard, where it belongs. The stork had his little day of triumph and displaced every other fowl, though he had but one available leg, until the peacock came in. He strutted his brief day and in turn gave way to the chicken, who has created a furor, purely out of accident. In decorating his store for Easter a New York shopkeeper, thinking that something like a barnyard was the proper thing for the season, placed several live chickens in his window. To his great surprise several ladies instantly rushed in and demanded to buy them. Other storekeepers filled up their windows, and the rush began; and now a lady might as well be out of the world who does not have two chickens about the size of billiard-balls in a gilded coop. Several steam hatching factories are at work to supply the demand, which of course implies that they will soon go out of fashion. Meanwhile small alligators are coming in and are quite too awfully admired, though perhaps they are the most loathsome objects in the animal world. They are not to have the field to themselves, however. Two classes of dogs are contesting supremacy with them. The one is a small animal who is dragged about by ladies with a string tied to him and is distinguished from other dogs by being in a continual state of shiver. The second is a fat, aristocratic creature, snub and black as to his nose, and English in antecedents. He is rapidly becoming the fashionable and favored pet. In some circles he is an object of envy to the children, as he has his share of holiday presents and is allowed a card-case in which are deposited the cards of other dogs who come to visit him. He has collars with bells and collars with bangles, and the rugs selected for his repose are usually from Daghestan. His drinking-cup is gold-lined and his dishes hand-painted. Parties are given in his honor, and one such has been held in Chicago to which only French-speaking persons were invited, the dog in question having been of French descent. As all sorts of mongrels are now shaved down and fixed up with black noses, it is probable the craze will not last long. What will next come in fashion has not yet been indicated, but in the regular line of succession it will probably be the dude, who has the advantage of being quiet and affectionate, can carry things which neither the alligator nor pug can do, is not liable to stray away or be stolen, and has not the vulgar habit of hiding bones under the rugs or lounges to be dragged out at inopportune moments. It is possible that the hatters, tailors, boot and umbrella men may eventually glut the market with dudes, but the resources of esthetics are illimitable, and even in such a case some substitute will probably be found for this highly ornamental and extraordinary creature. It is darkly hinted since the success of Mr. Sullivan in Boston cultured circles and the recent knock-down in a gentleman's parlor in New York that parlor prize-rings will be the feature for next winter, especially as the dude can hardly last longer than the summer, being a tender plant.

GREENVILLE, Texas, was the scene of a hotel horror at an early hour yesterday morning. The walls of the Ende House, a three-story brick building, caved in, burying the inmates in the ruins. Shortly afterwards the débris took fire and the maimed and wounded whom it was impossible to extricate were roasted in the flames. Fifteen persons are known to have perished. The direct cause of the terrible occurrence is criminal negligence. The walls were too slight to bear the strain imposed on them, and of this fact most of the people of the town were cognizant.

WITHIN two weeks the volume of east-bound freight—flour, grain, and provisions—from this city has fallen off 56 per cent. This indicates that the shippers are holding off for the opening of navigation. There are intimations of coming troubles between the east-bound roads arising out of difficulties regarding the pool percentage, and an attempt on the part of some of the roads to advance the rates on dressed beef, to which the Grand Trunk, which carries the bulk of the traffic, will not consent.

A POPULAR Parisian singer, as she entered the theatre on a recent evening, received from the doorkeeper a bundle which provoked great merriment when she opened it in the green-room. It contained a roasted chicken, with a note, from an ardent admirer, begging that she would send her portrait and "something belonging to her which she held to be precious" to a given address. As the lady happens to be married, her husband undertook to cool the ardor of her correspondent by a reply which ran thus: "Sir, as my wife is busy dressing her last baby (a girl, dear sir), she requests me to answer your note and to send you my portrait, her husband being, she assures me, what she deems most precious—at least, at present. With regard to her photograph, you will find this at Nadar's, and I may tell you that the renowned photographer makes a great reduction when large quantities are taken. And, finally, my daughter being now 6 months old, you might a little later on, in transferring to the child the great love you express for the mother, become my son-in-law. Who knows? Yours truly, X."

The Railroads of Florida and Their Features—The Proposed Ship Canal.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., April 4.—[Editorial Correspondence.]—In a previous letter I was in error in saying that the prevailing railroads, both built and building, were of the narrow-gage kind. There are quite a number of short three-foot roads and more are being constructed; but I find they are mostly confined to making connections between the St. John's and fruit-growing settlements and colonies, twenty, thirty, or fifty miles back from that river, such as the narrow-gage road from Palatka west to Gainesville, sixty-five miles; Astor to the Teesbury Lakes, thirty-five miles; Tocoi, on the St. John's, to East St. Augustine, on the ocean, fourteen miles; Jacksonville, southwest through swamps and pine-wood barrens, to St. Augustine, about thirty miles; from San Mateo, opposit Palatka, on the St. John's, southeast to the famous-for-fruit Indian River country. The terminus will probably be at or near Titusville, which is located in the midst of great orange groves and banana and pineapple fields. The distance is about 100 miles, making it the longest narrow-gage road in the State when constructed. A son of ex-Mayor Mason, of Chicago, is the chief engineer of the work, and some Chicago parties are stockholders and bondholders. The company has secured a large land-grant from the Florida Legislatures, and expect to open up an extensive and otherwise inaccessible tract of country—much of it capable of bearing tropical fruits as well as all kinds of garden truck for the Northern market, and, besides, tapping the great fruit-growing Indian River region, near the seashore, and south of the frost line.

The last narrow-gage road that I will detain the reader to describe is the "Boston Herald Road," beginning at Sanford on Lake Monroe (the head of large-steamboat navigation of the St. John's) and running south twenty-two miles to Orlando, the seat of Orange County, which is famous for its orange and lemon groves. The road is being extended to Lake Kissimee, twenty miles further, were it will connect with an extensive steamboat navigation through several lakes and streams all the way into Lake Okeechobee, the largest lake in Florida. The Herald people have already expended, it is reported, about $300,000 on this little road, and it is returning them over 12 per cent in dividends in doing the business of Orange County. When Gen. Grant visited this State in 1880 he threw up the first spadeful of earth in the construction of the Boston Herald Road. The owners believe they have a good thing and propose to keep it, albeit they are sorely tempted by a syndicate of railway speculators to sell out.

In addition to the above described narrow railroads there are in Florida about 500 miles of five-foot, Southern standard-gage road extending from Jacksonville west via Tallahassee to the State line, and southwest diagonally across the State to Cedar Keys on the gulf, where Faber obtains and manufactures the wood for his famous red cedar pencils, employing about 100 German families in the work of operating his machinery located there. Red cedar grows abundantly in the vicinity. From Waldo, a station about half-way between Jacksonville and Cedar Keys, the Florida Railroad Company has extended a branch forty miles south to Ocala, a flourishing county-seat where one mercantile firm do a business that aggregates a million dollars a year. The country around Ocala is higher than most parts of Florida, and the soil better; consequently it is a well-settled farming country, where cotton and corn and some sugar cane are produced, as well as oranges in abundance. Not long since the wide-gage roads in Florida were owned by several companies; but now they are all consolidated into one, called the Florida Railroad Company. The different branches, of course, have separate names, as the Western (running to Mobile and New Orleans from Jacksonville on an air line almost), the Transit (running to Key West), the Southern, now built to Ocala and nearly completed to Sumpterville, twenty-five miles farther south, through a high, beautiful, and fertile country. This Southern road will be really the most important in the Florida system when completed. The surveyors are locating a line through the woods and prairies south to Charlotte Harbor Bay, at a deep-water port called Punta Rassa, which is at the mouth of the Caloo-sa-hat-chee River, which heads in the great Okechobee Lake. The whole length of this line of road from Fernandina—a deep-water port eighteen miles south of Jacksonville—is about 350 miles in a nearly south line. Fernandina, next to Port Royal, is the deepest and best harbor on the Atlantic coast south of Old Point Comfort, as Punta Rassa Harbor has the deepest water on the gulf coast of Florida. From Punta Rassa to Havana is only 200 miles due south, and Key West is directly on the line and midway between Havana and Punta Rassa (Rose Point). The railway company propose to put on a line of swift daily steamers, which will run the distance in from fourteen to sixteen hours. They believe that a large part of the ever-increasing flood of Northern visitors to Florida will make the short, quick run to Cuba, and that all the Cubans going North will take this route to escape a long sea voyage. The shortest sea route now used is from New Orleans to Havana, a distance of 650 miles on the stormy gulf, and the time consumed is nearly three days between ports. Compare this with a short scud across of not much more than half a day, and stopping midway at Key West, a good, safe harbor in bad weather. The voyager will scarcely be an hour out of sight of land the whole way. It is believed that Cuba cigars, which greatly deteriorate by the long sea voyage from Havana to New York, will take this short ferriage to Rose Point, and thence by rail to New York, and it is believed that Cuban fruit—bananas, pineapples, oranges, and the like—will also follow this short, quick line, saving so many days' time and the resulting decay to those perishable commodities.

Fernandina is a picturesque old town, founded by the Spaniards in 1632, being, therefore, 250 years old. It contains two or three thousand inhabitants, and is built on the west shore of Amelia Island, overlooking a broad bay, with a splendid harbor. Vessels drawing twenty feet of water come across the bar at high tide, and the largest ships unload at the wharves. The Mallory Line of direct Florida steamers has its Southern terminus at Fernandina, and the Charleston and Savannah steamers call there on their way to and from Jacksonville. The place has now two comfortable hotels, which are crowded in the winter season. A large new hotel is about being built and is needed. The air is pure and bracing, and the town is free from malaria, and is considered by many as the most salubrious point on the entire coast. The Florida Transit Road starts at Fernandina, touches at Jacksonville, twenty-five miles south, and runs to Cedar Keys. The Florida Southern to Punta Rassa, will follow the line of the Transit Road from Fernandina to Waldo Station, ninety miles, and thence south 270 miles to Punta Rassa. The road will thus have a fine, deep, safe harbor at each end of its line. The projectors claim that this road will pass thro' and give outlet to the best agricultural portions of Florida. It traverses the famous Central Lake country, so widely celebrated for its fruit-bearing capacity.

These lakes are hundreds in number and of all sizes, from ponds of an acre to sheets of water twenty or thirty miles in dimensions, fed by springs, and their water clear as crystal. Some have flat, pine shores, others bold bluffs or rolling banks or jungle-clad outlines, and all teeming with fish. The tourist is reminded at every step of the beautiful lake region of Minnesota near St. Paul. All this region is the natural home of tropical fruits and plants, as it is below the frost-line. Potatoes can be produced for market in February and in abundance in March. "Hummock" land is found everywhere in this part of Florida. It would be better understood to call it black-muck land—not wet or swampy, but dry. It is exceedingly rich and fertile, and grows anything, whether grain, fruit, vegetables, or sugar-cane. All the central portions of Florida are comparatively high, and a good deal of it is rolling, and in places clay soil and hardwood timber are found. A tourist who recently went through Central and Southwestern Florida from Palatka to Charlotte Harbor, says that around Brookfield, a county-seat, he found a dark-brown soil, occasionally stones and gravel hard country roads, forests of oak, maple, beech, hickory, considerable hills, wheat, oats, potatoes, cotton, plums, bananas, pineapples, figs, oranges, peaches, all growing on the same farm, and that the country in its general aspect reminded him of Southern Wisconsin, Ohio, or Western New York. He considered it the most healthy and desirable part of the State. The new Florida Southern Road traverses all that region, and a year from now those middle portions of Florida will be accessible to the settler and to market. They are probably the most desirable farming lands in Florida.

For several years a ship canal across Northern Florida has been a favorit subject of speculation. Several lines have been surveyed, and two or three quite practicable routes have been found. The general idea has been to ask Congress to provide the money, but Congress has not thought best to embark in the work. Private capitalists have concluded that a ship canal can be made a good paying investment. A company meaning business was organized not long since, composed of "solid" Eastern men, who applied to the Legislature for a charter for the Florida Ship Canal. The bill passed this session and the Governor has signed it. The company are taking steps to begin work at once. The first thing is the construction of a number of powerful steam dredges. Each of these machines can perform the labor of 1,000 men in the work of excavating a ship channel. The width of the canal on the surface, it is reported, will be 100 feet, and the depth sixteen feet of water, with numerous turnouts for large vessels to pass each other.

The extreme length of the ship canal from the Atlantic to the Gulf will be 160 miles, of which sixty must be excavated and 100 will follow the channel of the St. John's and the Suwanee Rivers. The canal will commence at Nassau Inlet, a short distance south of the Port of Fernandina. Ten miles' cutting through low, swampy ground will connect with the St. John's a few miles below Jacksonville. That river will be followed about twenty miles to a point called Doctor's Lake. A channel will be widened out across the lake; thence following some swamps and low ground and a little creek to the dividing ridge, which is not twenty-five feet above tidewater; thence down and along the course of another creek, widening, deepening, and straightening it, and through some swamps and down the bed of a larger stream to be improved to the Suwanee River at Hatch's Bend; and thence down that deep stream to the gulf. The actual canal cutting will only be fifty miles between the Suwanee and the St. John's. The Suwanee will be followed for fifty-five miles, and will only need a jetty work at the mouth to remove the bar and make a deep-water entrance into the river. The whole cost is estimated at 14 millions of dollars.

The soil being nearly all sand the excavating machines will operate very rapidly in opening a ditch, or widening and deepening a creek, or cutting a channel through a swamp. The time required to complete the canal is estimated at three years, but by using electric lights and working relays of men it can be reduced to two years. It is proposed to push it energetically. Will it pay? The promoters of the work think it will, for these reasons: It will shorten the distance between New Orleans and Mobile and the Atlantic ports, including New York, nearly 1,000 miles, and that portion of the distance around the southern end of the peninsula is an exceedingly dangerous coast, and is strewn with wrecks of vessels that have been lost for hundreds of miles. The Florida reefs and keys can only be navigated with great peril. It is estimated that five or six millions a year of extra insurance is paid by American coasting vessels, and the value of vessels and cargoes annually lost in doubling the Florida Peninsula amounts to eight or ten millions of dollars. Every steamer taking the canal route would save four days' time, while sailing vessels would save a week or ten days on each voyage. The trade of the Caribean Sea and the Gulf of Mexico with the Atlantic cities from Savannah to Boston, it is claimed, will patronize the Florida Ship Canal for the sake of safety and economy in time. Of course the tolls will have to be made low enough to attract and secure this traffic. Self-interest will take care of that matter.

It is proposed to construct a tidewater canal, without locks, and the engineers report to the company that the project is entirely feasible, and the expense will be astonishingly small, considering the length of good navigation that will be secured. More than half the distance, being deep river navigation, will cost the company nothing. This is believed to be one of the most useful and promising enterprises in which Northern capital has recently embarked. It is a legitimate kind of watered stock.

DURING the last nine years the exports of American products to the Hawaiian Islands amount to $18,470,178, while during the same period the exports to French possessions have been only $2,858,704, and to English possessions $8,125,888—that is, Hawaii, owing to the exertions of her little population of industrious Anglo-Saxons and Germans, has used more American goods than the colonies of two of the mightiest Powers on earth.

IT is deemed possible in some quarters, if not probable, that Georgia may become a prohibition State ere long through the adoption of local option by counties. If so, how would it affect the Democratic party? What is a Democratic campaign without whisky?

PERSONALS.

Roskoschny's recent work on Russia claims that there are 300,000 professional beggars in seventy-one Governments of that country, who thrive and make money in this trade. Many of them have farms and live nicely at home, but at the approach of warm weather abandon everything and set forth upon their wanderings, enjoying the variety and vagabond life, and gathering a rich harvest as they hang around the church-doors and market-places. Bigoted, lazy, and fond of drink, the average Russian peasant finds such a life the hight of enjoyment.

John Howard Payne's eldest sister, Eloise, lies buried in an old cemetery at Lancaster, Mass., beneath a large white marble tablet supported by six stone pillars, which stand upon a red sandstone base. The monument was erected by John G. Palfrey, who was her schoolmate, and it bears besides her name and age (31) these inscriptions: "She will be talked of but a little while, and, forgotten by society, will survive only in a few hearts, where the memory of such a being is immortal." "Sink into dust frail covering of a purified spirit! Parent earth, receive thine own! God in Heaven take her soul to Thee!"

The letters of Benjamin Constant to Mme. Recamier have just been published in Paris, edited by Mme. Lenormand, who inherited Mme. Recamier's papers. The work is attracting a good deal of attention, as the grandson or nephew of Constant has commenced suit against Mme. Lenormand, claiming that the letters were never meant for publication, and that at least some explanation should have been inserted, as they reveal the eminent lawyer—in his 50th year at the time—as deeply in love as any school-boy, trying in every possible way to win a return to his affection, and rather sacrificing his dignity in the attempt.

In a letter to a friend in Berlin, Prof. Nordenskjold lately wrote as follows: "As for my expedition to Greenland, it is my intention, starting from Auleitsivikfjord on the west coast in 68 degrees 30 minutes north latitude, to push into the interior. Relying on the fact that all the winds which reach the coast from the interior are dry and comparatively warm, I believe, contrary to the prevailing opinion, that the interior is free from ice. I further believe that, under the meteorological conditions now existing south of 80 degrees north latitude, ice-covered continents are a physical impossibility."

[New York Tribune.]—Senator Vest has had his little experience with some bunko men in this city. A few days ago, in Washington, he received a beautifully-written letter from New York, stating that a new schooner was being fitted out for the life-saving service; that—as was the case with its predecessors—it was to be named after some eminent Christian statesman; and that—it was respectfully desired that Senator Vest would allow his name to be the chosen one. It was further added that it was usual in such cases for the individual who was to be honored to present the vessel with her virgin colors, a complete outfit, to cost not more than $75. The writer concluded with the remark that his wife was a Baltimore woman and knew some of Mrs. Vest's relatives. He hoped that, if in New York, Senator Vest would call personally at an address which he gave. The Senator showed the letter to his wife, and she was enthusiastic over the matter. She saw in imagination the "Vest" daring the sea and storm, in the noble work of life-saving. She, in fact, offered to give the $75 from her pin money. But her husband was more cautious. He forwarded the letter to a friend in this city for investigation. That friend went to the address given, and found it the most pronounced hovel in Squatterdom; and after he had been set upon by a dozen dogs and two dozen goats, and pelted by their owners with stones and superannuated vegetables as an "exciseman," he concluded to report the whole thing a swindle.

"By a thorough knowledge of the natural laws which govern the operations of digestion and nutrition, and by a careful application of the fine properties of well-selected Cocoa, Mr. Epps has provided our breakfast tables with a delicately flavored beverage which may save us many heavy doctors' bills. It is by the judicious use of such articles of diet that a constitution may be gradually built up until strong enough to resist every tendency to disease. Hundreds of subtle maladies are floating around us ready to attack wherever there is a weak point. We may escape many a fatal shaft by keeping ourselves well fortified with pure blood and a properly nourished frame."—Civil Service Gazette.

HEALTHY DIGESTION! CLEAR COMPLEXION! BRIGHT EYES!

Round form, an elastic step, and last, but not least, a happy state of mind, is the dearest wish of dyspeptics, and the weak generally. No other tonic is so well calculated to bring about these results as AREND'S BEEF, IRON, and WINE, with CINCHONA. It promptly invigorates the brain and nervous system, excites the activity of the assimilating and secretory glands, thereby purifying and improving the quality of the blood. Being skillfully made from the best materials, it is as pleasant to the taste as rich and fruity wine, adapting it specially to those delicate organizations which revolt at the ordinary nauseous tonics.

126 WASHINGTON-ST.

EVANSTON.

The issue of the village election April 17 has turned upon the building of a ditch to drain the prairie west of the corporation limits. Of the holdover members two are counted as favoring the ditch and one opposed, so that the future of the measure will depend upon the position of the three members to be elected this year. A numerously-signed petition has prevailed upon Messrs. W. E. Stockton, H. A. Pearsons, and C. H. Remy to allow the use of their names. These gentlemen are all understood to be opposed to the proposed drain. Several names have been suggested, but a ticket in opposition has not yet been decided upon. It may be that a ticket will be made up of those opposed in conjunction with the firemen.

The route of the drain most talked of is from the big ditch down to Emerson street, thence to Chicago avenue, south to University place, then into the lake. In order to cross the ridge the drain will have to be deep, and consequently expensive, the estimated cost being $100,000. The objection is urged that the principal benefit will accrue to the property outside the corporation, while the territory benefited within will be very small, the village being already well supplied with sewerage. Notwithstanding this preponderance of benefit for the property outside, the assessments could only be levied upon the property adjacent within the village. The assessment would, therefore, be out of all proportion to the benefit, and the remainder would have to be levied upon the town at large. Here a new difficulty is confronted, for the village bonded indebtedness is already at its maximum. If the drain were built of brick it is estimated that the balance, which would revert to the town at large, would be $25,000; if of wood, $10,000. The Treasury has now a floating fund of $8,000, but this is relied upon to pay the current expenses of the village until the new taxes come in, nine months hence. So, if this $8,000 were appropriated, the village would be compelled to issue scrip to pay running expenses, which plan would have numberless objections. Another objection is that this drain would bring the stagnant water from the prairie in such proximity to the water-works as to effect the purity of the water supply.

The defenders of the drain, on the other hand, claim that its building is a recognized need. They claim that the property-owners interested have been paying taxes long enough without benefit.

For Village Clerk two candidates are announced. R. N. Freeman, a young lawyer, is pushed by the firemen. J. S. Conwell is also a candidate for reelection. Mr. Conwell has the cordial support of the entire present board. One of the prominent members of the board said that the duties of the office have not been performed so well for years. Finding the office in chaos he has brought out perfect order.

The retiring members this year are C. F. Grey, who has made a good Chairman of the Finance Committee, John C. Allen, and Thomas Lord. The sessions of the board have been very harmonious. The finances are in exceptionally good condition, with no debt but the bonded debt. There is a surplus in the Treasury to pay the current expenses until the new levy, with not a dollar of floating debt.

DUTIABLE GOODS.

The following dutiable goods were received at the Chicago Custom-House yesterday: Sutter Bros., 30 bales leaf-tobacco; Logan & Preston, 125 brown sacks salt; Charles P. Willard, 266 brown sacks salt; L. A. Davis, 725 brown sacks salt; First National Bank, 51 Bessemer blooms; Downing, Sheldon & Co., 12 packages medicinal preparations, 23 crates iron. Collections, $20,-583.74.

FINANCIAL.

The local money market was steady yesterday. The demand for funds continues brisk at 7 per cent as the usual rate. The county orders for currency continue light and money is coming in faster than it is moving out. General business is quiet.

Exchange on New York was easier yesterday, being 60@75c premium per $1,000.

Foreign exchange was firmer at 481@481½ for English documentary, and posted rates on sterling were 483½ and 486.

A Philadelphia dispatch says there is no doubt that the lease of Jersey by Reading has been practically agreed upon, and will be accomplished some time this spring. It is said that the latter will guarantee 4 per cent for the first year, 5 per cent for the second year, and 6 per cent for the third year, and divide all earnings over 6 thereafter.

The exports of merchandise since Jan. 1 to date have increased nearly $26,000,000, and the imports have decreased $2,540,000.

The Iron Mountain Railroad report for 1882-'83 shows gross earnings $7,500,000, net earnings $3,750,000, and a balance of $1,250,000 after payment of interest, etc.

The Gould people are reported to have been purchasing Missouri Pacific extensively last week.

Friends of Denver are reported to claim that they will take $3,000,000 from the earnings of Union Pacific, and $1,000,000 from those of the Burlington, during this year.

It is estimated that about 300,000 shares of short stocks were covered in New York since last Tuesday; and yet comparatively few have been returned to the large lending houses.

Certain New York merchants profess great indignation at Fink's refusal to change the classification of dry goods by the trunk lines, and threaten to appeal for justice at the hands of the State Railway Commissioners.

Government railroading does not appear to be much of a success in South America. In Buenos Ayres, a writer says, the roads are wretchedly attended to, and the rolling-stock is not only insufficient, but good for nothing. The engines were bought in Europe by a lawyer turned engineer, which alone is sufficient to condemn them. Some of the roads are said to be well built, but grossly mismanaged. "Of course, the party most to blame is the Government."

The total value of the imports of foreign green fruits at New York in 1882 was $5,530,734, and the duty paid was $951,924. The value of the imports in 1881 was $1,147,638 below the above figures. Last year oranges and lemons came at the head, the value of the imports of these two fruits being $3,853,007. The bananas were valued at $823,227, grapes at $386,392, and cocoanuts at $353,502.

The earnings of the Gould Southwestern system for the quarter ending March 31, 1883, were $8,500,973, against $6,315,326 for the corresponding period in 1882. Increase, $2,185,647, or 34.6 per cent. The Missouri & Texas earnings for March, 1883, were $634,901, an increase of $162,-854. For the first quarter of this year they were $1,673,374—an increase of $406,489 over the same time in 1882. Texas Pacific earnings for last month were $526,900, an increase of $183,458. From Jan. 1 to March 31 they increased $531,506.

NEW YORK.

NEW YORK, April 7.—[Special.]—The Herald's money article says: If there were any fears last night that the bull movement was growing rickety, they were dissipated by the active trading and advancing prices this morning. With the exception of the Vanderbilt's proper, which were given a rest, probably in anticipation of some fresh climbing to be required of them next week, the general list was positively buoyant and more like "an old time" bull market than has been seen for many a day. The Gould shares may be said to have led the way, particularly the Southwestern system, which was strengthened by certain information known to but few parties, respecting the contemplated arrangements between the Seney syndicate and Gould's Southwestern. It is understood that three propositions will be submitted to the controlling parties—first, the Gould's system lease of the Tennessee system, paying to the East Tennessee Road its net earnings; second, that a traffic arrangement be made for a long term of years; third, that the securities of the East Tennessee Road be exchanged for those of one of the Gould roads. Union Pacific was remarkably active and higher. A story was in circulation that Mr. Rockafellow, of the Standard Company, had been selling puts at 91 for the rest of the year, the animus of the transaction being supposably directed against Mr. Keene for the firm position he has assumed in the Tidewater Company in its resistance to the attacks of the Standard people. Louisville & Nashville rose 1 per cent. There was a report that Gould was to go into the directory, but this was denied at the company's offices. Railroad bonds were largely dealt in at improving prices, particularly the West Shore & Buffalo first mortgages, extraordinary amounts being taken for account for foreign speculators and importers. Western Union remained weak and lower under a hazy rumor that a judicial decision adverse to the company's interests was impending. At the close of business the very highest prices, or nearly so, of the day were made, and the market finished buoyant and bullish.

NEW YORK, April 7.—Money 3@6; closing offered at 5; prime mercantile paper, 5½@6; sterling exchange bankers' bills quiet but steady at 4.83; sterling exchange demand, 4.85¼.

BOSTON.

BOSTON, Mass., April 7.—[Special.]—Money reached 6 per cent at the clearing-house today, and there were signs of a further rise next week. New York funds were at par. Exchanges, $12,019,908; balances, $1,400,713; exchanges for the week, $70,508,476; balances, $8,328,685. The outside call loan rate today is 6@6½ per cent. Paper is quiet at 6@7 per cent. Foreign exchange is higher on continued scarcity of commercial bills and active demand for bankers'. The stock market continues strong, prices being the highest this afternoon that they have been in a long while. Since 2 o'clock Union Pacific has sold at 99@99½, and other stocks are practically higher. The market is only moderately active, with prices firm in sympathy with New York. The most important rise today was in Bell Telephone, which touched with sales of rights as high as 41, and Atchison, which advanced to 84½. The recently declared dividend of the Union Pacific is paid to 3,150 Boston stockholders. Since the books opened four days ago 8,100 shares of the New York stock have been transferred to Boston account, and since the 1st of last October the aggregate amount so transferred has been not far from 5,700 shares. This shows how much weight the succession of bear stories put afloat daily for weeks last winter had with Boston people.

A small banking-house on State street is reported as unable to meet its contracts on Union Pacific, Atchison, and Chicago, Burlington & Quincy. It has for a long time past been on the bear side of the market, and has been caught short of the stocks named. The same house suspended about a year since. Its liabilities are small, and it expects to be able to continue business.

The earnings of the Little Rock & Fort Smith Railway Company for March, as officially reported today, were $47,327, as against $36,706 for the corresponding month in 1882, an increase of $10,621, or 20 per cent. The land sales for the same time amounted to $18,590, as against $11,809 for March, 1882; an increase of $6,781, or 57 per cent.

The Little Rock, Mississippi River & Texas Railway Company in March earned gross $32,-000, or $16,050 more than in 1882. This is an increase of 103 per cent.

PHILADELPHIA.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., April 7.—[Special.]—The general advance in prices has been well maintained today, and in almost every case they show handsome gains over the opening. The sentiment of the street appears to be shaping itself more strongly each day toward a permanent bull market, and the disposition to buy on every slight reaction seems to bear out the assertion. Pennsylvania has continued to be the principal feature of the market, and on comparatively larger sales advanced to 64¼. Reading was without any special snap, but still holding its own at 27⅜. Same trading in the Northern Pacific was based on the general strength, but rather appeared to be neglected. The mysterious exception to this buoyant condition was Western Union, which declined from 84 to 83¾. But it looks as though it was done to mystify the public and create a doubt as to Mr. Gould's real position in the market. The latter gentleman was present at the launch of his new yacht in this city today, and if one can judge by the pleasant expression of his face the rise is certainly not objectionable.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., April 7.—[Special.]—The market closed strong. The following were the closing prices:

COMMERCIAL.

The leading produce markets were very weak on Saturday. Grain was unusually heavy, while provisions yielded slowly to the depression. The cereals fell off owing to the natural heaviness due to fine weather with large stocks, and the markets at one time resembled the streets of Chicago in the early days, when "no bottom" was regarded as an appropriate description. All closed at very nearly the lowest prices of the day, with more people anxious to sell than were willing to buy, even at the decline.

Provisions were quiet and easier, but comparatively firm. There was an early advance of about 2½c all round, and then the market fell back in sympathy with grain. Pork closed 5@7½c lower, at $18.12½ bid for May, and $18.30 bid for June. Lard closed 7½c lower, at $11.25 bid for May, and $11.32½ for June. Meats closed a shade easier at $10.00 for June. There was little change in the tone of foreign advices, and the local hog market was stronger, with a very small supply. Probably the hog situation kept local holders from throwing the stuff in company with grain, though buyers were scarce, and the market eased off slowly under some offerings of the scalping order. There was no outside business in a speculative way to speak of, and a very light demand for shipment. The packing of this city since the close of February aggregates about 169,000 hogs, against 238,000 for the same time in 1882, and 208,000 for do in 1881.

Flour was very dull, but with no material change in prices, holders not being disposed to follow the wheat market downward, while buyers were not disposed to operate unless at concessions. Bran and other coarse millstuffs were lower.

Wheat was active and heavy, declining and closing 1⅝c below the latest prices of Friday, at $1.00⅜ for April, and $1.05⅝ bid for May. The British markets were called steadier at a further decline of 6d per quarter, but private cables reported a firmer tone, and New York opened strong. But the weather here was clearer, and long holders grew tired of carrying. They dumped their wheat on the market at a lively rate, and shorts took most of the offerings. The latter are supposed to have pretty well evened up their deals, as a consequence of which a great deal of money, tied up in margins has been released, though most of the cash goes into the pockets of the recent shorts. There was a little rally about noon, but a fresh batch of selling orders came in, depressing the market again to the lowest point touched previously. The later selling was mostly on the short side. Car-lots were dull, and weakened in sympathy with futures. The decline was probably started by the publication of the news that Oregon and Washington Territory are sure of a big crop of wheat. It was not much of itself, but, coming on an already strained market, the result was unusual heaviness. On the Open Board in the afternoon May wheat sold down to $1.04⅞.

Corn was active and weak. It declined 1⅝c on May, 2⅝c on July, and closed 1¼@2c below the latest prices of Friday, at 52⅞@55⅛c respectively. The British markets were quiet and dull, and private cables called them steadier, while our receipts were a little larger, being more than expected. There seemed to be no special reason for great weakness, and it is probable that the downward movement was started by the decline in wheat, but it was bad enough when it got under way. The early offerings were mostly of long corn that had been held for several weeks, being bought in the neighborhood of 60c for May. The later offerings were chiefly of the longer futures, part being recent purchases, and part short selling. It was this which made the summer futures relatively weak. There was a fair shipping demand, some cargo buying being done at the decline late in the session. On the Open Board May corn sold down to 52⅜c in the afternoon.

Oats were weak, excited, and 2½c lower as a result of heavy sales by large holders of May delivery. Prices opened ⅛c below the latest figures of Friday, and continued to decline till near the close, when a slight upward turn took place, weakness, however, characterizing the final transactions, which were, except for July, at the lowest figures of the day. No. 2 spot and seller the month was quotable at 38⅜@38½c, the latter being the nominal price at the close, and gilt-edged sold early at 42½c. Seller the year sold at 33@33½c, and closed nominally at the inside. Samples were weak and relatively lower.

Rye was quiet and steady, No. 2 selling at 56½c, May delivery at 58¼@59c, closing at 58⅛c, and June being nominally quotable at 60c.

Barley was quiet for spot, with sellers of No. 2 regular at 52c, No. 2 being entirely neglected. Samples were firm.

The dry-goods market was active, with prices averaging steady. There was also an active movement in millinery and white goods. Jobbers of groceries were not very busy, still a fair volume of business was accomplished and at uniformly well-sustained prices. Dried fruits, fish, and canned goods were quoted quiet. Butter and cheese were unsettled. The oil market was quoted steady, with a moderate business in progress. Coal was dull and weak.

Eggs were in good supply and steady at 17c per doz. There was a good demand for all descriptions of green fruits, prices remaining steady. Building materials are in active demand and firm, as are also metals and tinners' ware used in building. The supply of nails is still light, some descriptions being hard to obtain except in small quantities. Hides, grease, and tallow quiet and unchanged. Potatoes quiet and steady. Timothy seed was steady at $1.62 for prime. Cloverseed quiet at $8.00@8.50 for prime to choice, and flaxseed sold at $1.44 on track, closing easy. Hay unchanged from Friday's prices.

Hogs were firm at $7.10@7.60 for light and at $7.10@7.90 for heavy. Cattle were steady at $3.75@7.10. The receipts for the week were 27,800 cattle, 59,300 hogs, and 15,000 sheep, against 26,527 cattle, 103,835 hogs, and 12,953 sheep for the corresponding week last year.

It is understood that there is unchartered freight room in the Chicago harbor for about 1,500,000 bu of grain. This includes the steamer lines. The season of navigation is not expected to open this month, the ice in the Straits of Mackinaw being very thick yet.

It was stated on the floor yesterday that a party in Monticello has shipped corn regularly to Peoria till a few days ago, all of it being graded as rejected. Then he sent five car-loads of the same corn to Chicago, and all of it graded No. 2.

News arrived here yesterday of the sale of 40,000 centals of California wheat in Liverpool at only 3d above the lowest market price ever recorded there. It is consoling to know that the markets always turn on touching bottom. Some people think that the wheat crop of the Mississippi Valley will prove to be poor enough to justify good prices for the article this summer.

The appointment of a State Weighmaster would obviate all the trouble which grain merchants now experience in the matter of weights. Many of them seem satisfied that this would be the best solution of the difficulty.

The sharp downward turn of 2½c in oats yesterday was attended by much excitement, several prominent dealers on the wrong side retiring from the field to contemplate their losses long before the lowest figure had been reached. Several large holders of May delivery, in view of the continued decline in corn and the impression entertained by them that on the drying up of the country roads receipts would largely increase, determined to unload a good share of holdings, which they did to the extent of 2,000,000 bu or more, one firm dropping over 500,000 bu. The sudden drop brought in outside orders to sell, few of which were acted upon or the bottom price would have been much lower. It was generally believed that the Peoria clique was not selling yesterday.

It is now a mooted question whether or not there is enough speculative confidence in pork products to justify capital in carrying them through May. The premium of barely 7½c per 100 lbs now obtainable is certainly not an inducement to invest some $6,000,000 in carrying over stock of lard from May into June. Of course the difference will widen, but it is for the trade to say which will give way.

The following table shows the range of the day on the leading classes of trade in provisions and grain; also the latest (regular) buyers' price for round lots Saturday, compared with the previous day. A star (*) indicates that sellers asked more than 2½c in provisions or ⅛c in grain above the figures bid:

The Northwestern Miller gives a gloomy account of the milling interest in Minnesota. Millers are making very little flour now, as there is no profit in the operation.

A BUSINESS PALACE.

A Tour Through the Quarters of Morgenthau, Bauland & Co.

A Wonderful Display of Stylish Bonnets and Other Novelties.

The Restaurant and the Reading-Room for the Accommodation of Patrons.

The new store of Morgenthau, Bauland & Co., importers and dealers in dry goods, fancy goods, and millinery, at Nos. 174 and 176 State street, will be formally thrown open to the public tomorrow. The firm, which is a newly organized one, is composed of Messrs. Maximilian and Gustav Morgenthau and Jacob H. and Joseph H. Bauland. The establishment, which has an advantageous location on State street, will be known as the the "Bee-Hive." Elaborate preparations for the grand opening have been in progress for weeks, and from a tour of the premises made last evening it was apparent that the occasion will be a significant one in business circles.

The basement is devoted to a large display of house-furnishing goods of every description, and is fitted up with lunch-rooms and dressing apartments for the employés. The first (or store) floor is elegantly painted and papered, and is provided with shelves of mahogany and cherry wood, and with counters, mirrors, etc., of equally ornate designs. In this department are displayed silks, dress goods, linings, linens, gloves, jewelry, handkerchiefs, ladies' neck-wear, collars, cuffs, laces, embroidery, trimmings, as well as stationery, perfumery, and many other varieties of fancy articles. The second floor is a veritable garden of millinery, and an enumeration will give but a faint idea of the many styles of plumes, flowers, ribbons, laces, and skirts that are on exhibition. Among the hats, there are some that deserve particular mention, especially one of English white straw, with gold and white plumes, and amber ornaments. Of the other Parisian mysteries of design and color may be mentioned a small bonnet with full pleatings of gold and cashmere lace, and narrow velvet slips; a bonnet made of gold material, with pleatings of gold lace and cashmere, and garniture of flowers; an evening hat shirred with white Oriental lace, with trimmings of narrow velvet lilac ribbon, and crown of lilacs; and a little bonnet with pleatings of gold lace and scarf of lace, with large, round gold dots.

This floor is provided with reading and writing-rooms, a trimming-room, and a restaurant. The restaurant is designed especially for the benefit of patrons, and, although it is not directly under the management of the firm, its prices and its facilities are regulated by contract. The reading-room, where ladies may spend their leisure moments, is handsomely furnished. The tables will be covered with the latest magazines and periodicals. Everything will be done which will contribute to make the apartment a pleasant retreat from the bustling crowds.

The third floor is devoted to cloaks, ladies' and children's shoes, carpets, rugs, upholstery goods, lace curtains, and bric-a-brac. The dresses are all made by the employés of the firm, and range from the simplest to the most elaborate designs. One costume, made in imitation of Worth, is an evening dress of silk with Princess train and brocaded with satin. There are also walking costumes and wrappers of the latest styles.

The fourth floor contains the wholesale receiving and shipping rooms and the private offices.

AN INSTANTANEOUS LIGHT.

Such in a word is the unique apparatus on exhibition at the rooms of the Portable Electric Light Company, 22 Water street, Boston. It occupies the space of only five square inches, and weighs but five pounds, and can be carried with ease. The light, or more properly lighter, requires no extra power, wires, or connections, and is so constructed that any part can be replaced at a small cost. The chemicals are placed in a glass retort; a carbon and zinc apparatus, with a spiral platinum attachment, is then adjusted so as to form a battery, and the light is ready. The pressure on a little knob produces an electric current by which the spiral of platinum is heated to incandescence. The Portable Electric Light Company was recently incorporated, with a capital of $100,000, under the laws of Massachusetts. The usefulness of the apparatus and the low price ($5) will no doubt result in its general adoption. Some of the prominent business-men of the State are identified with this enterprise. In addition to its use as a lighter, the apparatus can also be used in connection with a burglar-alarm and galvanic battery.—Boston Transcript, Dec. 30.

A Fact That Will Open the Eyes of Business Men of the Northwest—How They Can Obtain Immunity from the Threatened Peril.

JOLIET, Ill., April 5.—The report made to the Governor by the Warden of Joliet Prison shows that during the month of March thirty-six convicts were discharged, and that during the present month the following Chicago crooks will be released to prey upon the community: Prince Albert Jones, who killed his brother and has served a year; Adam Schaffer, alias "Baldy" Shafrath, a third-termer and "bad man"; Tim Healy, alias Mike Harmen, a third-term night-worker; Matt Furlong and his brother Dick; Sam, alias "Fuss" Dudley, a third-term negro thief; Johnny Allen, a noted burglar, formerly a pal of Dave Raggio; James Oratt, convicted of murder in Jackson County in January, 1873, and sentenced for life, and who had his sentence commuted to eighteen years by Gov. Cullom. Sixty-two convicts will be released during the month, making an addition of nearly 100 to the already overcrowded ranks in two short months. Is it to be wondered at, then, that our leading manufacturer of burglar-proof work should be overrun with orders from all over the Northwest? Mr. Jno. W. Norris Vice-President of the celebrated Diebold system of "Protection," who was interviewed yesterday regarding the feeling of bankers and business-men generally throughout this part of the country who had money and valuables to protect against this class of people, says that there is a general feeling of insecurity very noticeable among the smaller class of bankers and larger mercantile houses throughout the Northwest, who heretofore have seemed to think that anything that was called burglar-proof would do, so they got it cheap. Mr. N. said (and the lists of prominent sales the newspapers have published from week to week during the past years seemed to warrant it) that nearly every important bank in the Northwest already use nothing but the Diebold burglar-proof protection—the only safe that has resisted all attempts of burglars; and while these bankers feel that their valuables are as safe as it lays in the power of man to make them, with chrome steel, "time" locks, etc., still they would feel more comfortable were they not obliged to use such extraordinary precautions during business hours against such a rapidly-increasing gang of desperadoes.

C. B. GIBSON,

Analytical Chemist for the Chicago College of Physicians and Surgeons, Gives His Opinion of Dr. Price's Cream Baking-Powder.

CHICAGO, March 31, 1883.—Messrs. Steele & Price—GENTLEMEN: After the examination of many samples of baking-powders which I purchased in the open market, I find Dr. Price's Cream Baking-Powder to be a superior article, free from any adulterant or deleterious chemical, such as terra alba, alum, etc. I find it to be composed of articles of a superior quality combined in such proportions as to render the greatest volume of carbonic acid gas, which shows it to be a perfect powder, based on scientific formulæ. I find it to contain no ammonia compounds, which are products of animal and vegetable decomposition, and which I would consider unhealthful, inasmuch as it is absorbed by the dough to a certain extent in the baking process. In fact, by my examination and experiments I am led to believe "Dr. Price's Cream Baking-Powder" to be a superior article and one for efficiency and healthfulness I would not hesitate to recommend. Respectfully,

C. B. GIBSON,
Analytical Chemist, College of Physicians and Surgeons.

MEMORIAL OFFERING.

The Building of a Magnificent Memorial-Home in Chicago Being Seriously Considered.

The key that unlocks the plans of the Mosher memorial offering to Chicago is a book that ought to be read by every business man. It contemplates building a memorial home in which is to be the grand opera-house of the nineteenth century, and the finest art galleries in the world, with libraries of useful, practical books, pertaining to business, trades, and professions, improved music-halls, and a memorial-security legacy bank for keeping sacredly trust funds of estates, where man's last will and testament can be carried out honestly, and his wife and children not left penniless; and it has many other suggestion of vital importance to mankind.

The Spread of Pneumonia.

The remarkable increase in the number of deaths from Pneumonia in recent years is attracting no little attention among medical men. And well it may, for in 1860 there were 1,326 deaths from this cause in New York City; in 1865, 1,706; in 1869, 2,100; in 1875, 2,892; and in 1882, 3,472. In other words, while the population has increased since 1860 a little less than 50 per cent, the deaths from pneumonia have increased nearly 200 per cent. The New York Herald has lately printed the views of several prominent doctors, so far as they had any to offer. Their general idea is that the increase of deaths from this cause is probably due to the habit of living in warmer houses, and to a want of care in properly protecting the chest and head when going out in the cold. Two circumstances appear to confirm this view. The first is that the principal months for pneumonia are the first four of the year. Another point is, that this disease is particularly fatal to men, and especially to men past middle life.

The Market.

It has been a long time since the Chicago real-estate market has experienced as many drawbacks as during the last week. At the close of the previous week indications were favorable to a most satisfactory trade, but the weather, the election, and the bricklayers' strike combined to make the market almost featureless. In nearly every office the searcher for news found nothing but idle agents, who had no end of business in hand with which they could do little or nothing on account of the circumstances referred to. There were quite a number of sales effected and the total transactions for the week exceeded that of the previous week, but the majority of the transfers were small. The most important transaction recorded was that of the lot at the southeast corner of Wentworth avenue and Eighteenth street, 36 x157 feet to Arnold street, by P. D. Armour to I. C. Colet for $60,000. Just what is to be done with the property could not be learned from either Mr. Armour or the purchaser, but the statement was made by the former gentleman that an important improvement would probably be made. The negotiations that have been pending for the purchase by the Washington Park Club of land for a driving park, were closed, and the tract has been transferred to the club. The Executive Committee of the organization will hold a meeting some time during the week, at which the plans for the arrangement of the park will be discussed and perhaps decided upon.

Aside from these transactions there are very few that are worthy of notice. The outlook for the near future is very bright, however, and there is little doubt that until midsummer a very lively business will be done. Among the other sales of the week worthy of note were:

Martin Dawson sold to Washington Porter a lot on West Madison street, 164 feet west of Hoyne avenue, 42x173 feet, with buildings Nos. 842 and 844, for $17,000.

Samuel Porter purchased of Turner & Bond a lot on Western avenue, near Grenshaw street, 200x125¼ feet, for $10,000.

A lot on North Clark street, 120 feet north of Chicago avenue, east front, 27x150 feet, improved, was sold by C. and H. Gauler to W. Heinemann for $19,850.

Josiah B. Reeves sold to Mary A. Brooks a lot on Wabash avenue, 209 feet south of Sixteenth street, west front, 68x172 feet, for $22,500.

Collot & Schmidt have sold a lot 40 feet front on Clinton street, for $2,400; premises No. 404 Garfield avenue for $2,600; lot 50 feet front on North Clark street, north of Wrightwood avenue, for $5,000, to E. J. Lehmann. This lot adjoins one purchased last year by Mr. Lehmann for which he paid $18,000.

Bogue & Hoyt report the following sales: Premises at No. 2737 Butterfield street, for $3,000; lot on Division street, west of Noble, north front, 25x175 feet, for $1,200; lot on Noble street, north of Blackhawk, east front, 40 x125 feet, for $1,200 cash; house and lot on the northwest corner of Noble street and Fifty-fourth place, Hyde Park, for $8,200 cash; four lots on Wolcott avenue, between Forty-second and Forty-third streets, Hyde Park, for a total of $3,850; lot at the northwest corner of Fifty-first boulevard and Greenwood avenue, Hyde Park, 100x200 feet, for $7,000; lot on Madison avenue, 100 feet north of Forty-ninth street, west front, Hyde Park, for $2,500; lot on Oglesby avenue, Woodlawn, 100 feet south of Fifty-fourth street, Hyde Park, 200x165 feet, for $38,000, and adjoining lot, 200x165 feet, for $4,500.

F. C. Vierling sold 25 feet on Third avenue, near Harrison street, for Mr. Jacob Mayer to Joseph Alcock, for $6,600 cash.

Adolp Kraus has bought the building and lot, 50x100 feet, on DeKoven street, west of Canal, north front, for $20,000.

Albert R. Fox has sold 395x125 feet, on the northeast corner of Campbell and Lexington avenues, to William Gurley, for $25,000.

B. F. Jacobs sold 200 feet on Greenwood avenue and Forty-eighth street for $10,000.

A. Loeb & Bro. sold 125 feet on Twenty-second street, west of Hoyne street, at $40 a foot, $5,000; also three lots on Chicago avenue, west of Western, $2,100; also two houses and lots on Bissell street, near Centre, for $9,000; also eleven lots on Wolfram street, George street, and Diversy avenue, Lake View, at $600 each; also three lots on Sherman street, near Forty-fifth, at $3,000; also two lots on Drexel avenue, between Fifty-fifth and Fifty-sixth street, at $2,000; also house and lot on LaSalle street, near Division, at $13,500; also a house on LaSalle street, near Grant, at $9,000.

W. C. D. Grannis sold to Allen, the jeweler, fifty feet on Michigan avenue, east front, between Thirty-second and Thirty-third streets, for $400 a foot, the highest price ever paid below Twenty-sixth street. Mr. Allen will build a very fine house on the lot.

D. S. Taylor sold to M. G. Townsend and Truman M. Godfrey 50x125 feet on the southwest corner of Halsted and Jackson streets for $20,000 cash.

E. S. Dreyer & Co. sold a two-story marble front, with lot 20x165 feet, on North Clark street, between Wisconsin and Centre, for $8,500; a two-story and attic brick house, with lot 18x55 feet, at No. 751 North Park avenue, for $5,000; also No. 749 North Park avenue, with two-story brick house and lot 18x60 feet for $5,000; 25x100 feet on Fourth avenue, near Fourteenth street, at $200 per foot; 25x145 feet on Belden avenue, 168 feet east of Halsted street, for $59 per foot; and five 25 foot lots in Baxter's Subdivision at from $400 to $450 per lot.

An instance of the decided growth in the value of property in the South Division during the last fifteen years is furnished by an administrator's sale of a lot 22x100 feet at the northwest corner of Thirty-first street and Indiana avenue for $22,000, or $1,000 per foot. In 1866 this same lot was disposed of for $25 per front foot. The last purchaser is Mr. Bloom, of the Board of Trade, who will erect a very fine residence upon the lot during the present year.

Messrs. D. H. Keys and David A. Thatcher purchased the univided three-quarter interest in the Blackstone quarry, at the corner of Ohio and Seymour streets, for $23,000, which gives them entire possession of the quarry, they having previously purchased a quarter interest. The stone from this quarry is that of which Messrs. J. V. and C. B. Farwell's new houses on the Lake-Shore drive are to be built. The purchasers now propose to work the quarry for building purposes more than has previously been done.

Loans were quite active during the week, several large amounts having been placed on good realty at 6 per cent. Brokers generally report plenty of money seeking investment; and one gentleman said he would not be surprised to see some Eastern money placed as low as 5 per cent.

Building Notes.

Among the new structures now approaching completion on the North Side is the very neat residence of Mr. John Kranz, the candyman, on the south side of Huron street, just west of State, which has been erected after plans drawn by Architect W. L. Carroll. The structure is three stories and basement in night and constructed of cut stone. The dimensions are 24x62 feet, and the front is almost upon the street. Entrance is gained to the vestibule by a flight of marble steps, and from this to the main hall is a short flight of steps of marble and Menton tile, which arrangement has enabled the architect to give the structure a much higher basement than could otherwise have been done. Running from the main hall to the second story is a staircase of unique and attractive pattern, constructed entirely of solid oak. The parlors are finished in gum and cherry, and the entire structure is finished in natural woods, gum and yellow pine being employed in the second story, and yellow and white pine in the third. The mantels in the parlors are of Mexican onyx and German marble, and the other furnishings of the house have been selected to correspond with the features already mentioned. Special attention has been paid to plumbing and ventilation, as well as light, the result in the latter respect being particularly satisfactory. The structure will be in shape for occupancy by the last of the month, providing the weather clears up soon.

Mr. Carroll will also finish in a few days the flats and stores which he has been erecting for Messrs. Call and Johnson at Nos. 1311 and 1313 State street. The structure occupies a lot 48 by 80 feet, is three stories in hight, and is constructed of Chicago pressed brick. There are three commodious storerooms and eight flats of from three to six rooms in the building, nearly all of which are already rented. The structure, when complete, will cost about $20,000.

The fine addition to the Hammond Building, at the southeast corner of La Salle and Monroe streets, which has been constructed by Mr. Carroll, is now about completed, and many of the offices in the building are already occupied. Although apparently hemmed in on all sides by buildings, light-shafts have been so arranged as to make all of the rooms as well lighted as though they were outside.

The same architect is also at work upon plans for a very elegant residence which he will construct, if nothing happens to prevent, for Mr. Thomas Mackin. There is a danger, however, that something will occur to prevent the erection of the house this year at least. The lot upon which it is proposed to build it is at the corner of Diversy and Sedgwick streets, on the north end of Lincoln Park. Some time ago it was proposed by the Commissioners to take this lot into the park when a proposed extension was made, but up to the present time no definit action has been taken in the matter. The location is a most desirable one for residence purposes, and it is not likely that Mr. Mackin will surrender it without objection. Should it be taken from him, however, he will probably build elsewhere.

P. W. Ruehl, the architect, has finished plans ready for estimating the following structures which will be erected during the present season: Three three-story and basement and attic stone-front buildings for Schmitt, Bros. & Cossmann, on West Twelfth street, 75 by 75 feet; estimated value $25,000; a two-story with mansard roof residence, for J. L. Hoeber, on Ashland avenue; estimated value $10,000; three three-story basement and attic store buildings, with flats above, for Kuhnert & Lassmann, on Halsted and De Koven streets; three-story store building for C. Mench on Archer avenue; three-story stone-front building, store and flats above, for B. Harris, on West Twelfth street.

The same architect let the following work during last week: A three-story flat building on West Taylor street for J. Dworak, to cost $7,500; a two-story store building on Twenty-second street, for Hy. Valk, to cost $7,000; two three-story flats on Ewing street, for J. A. Craig, to cost $8,000; double store, three-story building, flats above, 50x75 feet, for C. Rosulek, to cost $15,000; three-story building on Archer avenue for R. K. Mueller, to cost $6,000. C. Pfeifer's residence on Lincoln avenue is nearing completion and will be ready by May 1. It presents a fine appearance and is one of the best structures on the avenue.

Work upon the new business building that will be erected by Mr. J. H. Swart will not be begun as early as was anticipated, it is said, for the reason that it is hoped that an arrangement can be made with owners of property adjoining to erect a larger building than the one at first contemplated. It will be remembered that Mr. Swart purchased the vacant lot on the south side of Madison street, at the east end of the bridge, and that at the time the purchase was made he was desirous of also gaining possession of ground just back of the lot secured, but was unable to do so. The plans already drawn contemplate a six-story business building of either pressed brick or stone, arranged so as to be adapted to the use of a wholesale firm.

There is now approaching completion on West Madison street, between Ann and Elizabeth streets, the most imposing and substantial building that has ever been erected in the West Division, and one which will compare most favorably with the more important structures in the South Division of the city. The building is being erected quietly by the Pullman Laundry Company and E. Jennings & Co., shirt manufacturers, and is an ornament to the West Side. It is constructed of Chicago pressed brick, with iron and terra-cotta trimmings, and is truly an attractive work of architectural art. When completed it will be used as a laundry and general manufactory by the Pullman Company and Jennings & Co. It will be ready for occupancy by June 1.

Building Permits.

The execrable weather of the last week would have been sufficient to have prevented outdoor work on new buildings had not the bricklayers' caused an almost entire cessation of operations early in the week. The result of the existing condition of affairs is that no new structures were begun, and there was even a greater dearth of news in the building line than in real-estate matters. The only building permits of importance issued during the week were the following:

To F. Grinnell and H. Desselhaus, for a two-story dwelling, 24x55 feet, at No. 95 Fowler street, to cost $10,000.

To Anna Halsted, for a two-story dwelling, 40x52 feet, at No. 490 Belden avenue, to cost $15,000.

To J. M. Allen, for three two-story flats, 25x37 feet, at Nos. 1326 to 1330 West Lake street, to cost $7,000.

To H. Rumsfield, for three-story flats, 49x 88 feet, at Nos. 171 and 173 Sedgwick street, to cost $20,000.

Among the building permits issued yesterday were the following: H. H. Gardner, two-story dwelling, 23x70 feet, No. 20 Walton place, $12,000; same party, two-story barn, $2,500.

Why They Strike.

Speaking of the present strike of the union bricklayers, which is now the subject uppermost in the minds of builders and those interested in building operations, a prominent contractor yesterday said: "The great trouble with mechanics of the present day is that they are devoting much of the time that they should devote to improvement in skill to figuring how they can best secure highest wages for the least labor. This is directly the result of the lessons learned in union meetings. These unions, as a rule, are in the hands of men who never were and who never care to become skilled workmen. Instead of teaching those whom they control to better fit themselves for the duties which they will be called upon to perform, they are constantly talking of oppression and the necessity of strikes. The result is very natural. It could not be otherwise. I have been a contractor and builder in Chicago for more than twenty years, and I have seen many strikes, but I have never seen one engineered by a superior mechanic. A man who is skilled in his work never needs to think of striking. He is always in demand and can always get what work he desires and the highest wages paid without asking for them. It is among mechanics the same as among men of other branches. Some are competent workmen, while others are not able to earn one-half the money those alongside them are. That being the case, why should we or any one else be obliged to pay a scrub who knows little or nothing of his trade as much as a man who is capable of earning the highest wages, simply because he belongs to a union. The proposition is absurd, and will never be acceded to again. We can't afford it, and a sensible man, whether he belongs to the union or not, will readily see that we cannot. There are men who are getting $4, and some as high as $4.50, per day for laying brick; but they are men who are worth that amount and do not have to demand it. It is the men who are unable to earn scarcely one-half of $4 who are loudest in their demands for that figure. The only possible basis for a settlement of the present difficulty is to grade the prices, and the sooner this is done the better they and we will be off, for strikes will then be out of the question."

The Connecticut Mutual's Real Estate.

In his annual report for 1882 President Greene, of the Connecticut Mutual Life-Insurance Company, speaks as follows of the company's real estate, the most of which is located in Chicago:

During the year the company sold real estate taken under foreclosure at a cost of $906,569.89 for $1,029,468.81—a net profit of $122,898.92. In the fall of 1879 these pieces were appraised by the persons employed by the insurance department at only $655,316.68, or $249,253.21 less than they had cost the company, and $374,152.13 less than they sold for. The property sold at an advance above the appraisal of over 57 per cent.

Only one piece sold at a loss of $3,679.12, and this sold for $5,000 more than the appraisal mentioned.

That appraisal covered property representing to the company at that time a cost of $13,272,943.84; the price of it in 1879 by this appraisal was $11,764,027.26, a shrinkage on the cost of $1,508,916.58. Our members will remember that we then protested that an appraisal made at the very entreme point of the longest and worst depression in business and in all kinds of property that has been seen in two generations at least, was no fair or reasonable measure of the value of the property which we did not need nor intend to sell until all the conditions should be favorable for selling; and that to apply such an appraisal as its actual value to the company was a gross injustice and absurdity.

Without making the least effort to push sales, we have since sold of that property so appraised pieces then costing us $1,899,003.64 for $2,288,858.09, an advance above the then cost of $389,854.45; these pieces were appraised at only $1,646,745.34, or $252,258.30 less than their cost; they sold for $642,114.75 more than the appraisal, an advance of nearly 40 per cent. This includes only sales that close out all of the property taken under any one loan, and not partial sales of the property so taken.

Lake View.

The real-estate market continues to be very active, and a large number of sales are being made. Prices are also firm, and, as a rule, no reduction is made from the price asked by the owners. There is also considerable inquiry for acre property, and a number of sales have been made during the last week at about $2,500 per acre. Mr. John Bader has sold 50x125 feet, with improvements, on Commercial street, near Wrightwood avenue, for $3,200. Mr. Joseph Cook bought twenty-five front on Lincoln avenue, near Dunning street, at $50 per foot. E. J. Lehmann has purchased fifty feet front on Clark street, south of Wrightwood avenue, for $100 per foot. This property adjoins what is known as the Walker homestead, which was purchased last year by Mr. Lehmann for $18,000.

Building operations are being pushed, and many frame houses are being erected. Mr. Meyer, of the Commercial National Bank, has just commenced the erection of a fine residence on Barry avenue from plans prepared by Mr. E. Baumann, the architect. Public improvements are also being carried forward. A water-pipe is being laid on Surf street, and others will follow as already ordered by the board in different streets of the town. If the water-supply pipes are extended anywhere near as fast as the demand is likely to be the coming season it will be necessary to supply additional power at the water-works before long.

Hyde Park.

Notwithstanding the gap caused by election-day, the market was quite active during the week. The transfers of North-End property filed for record aggregated $183,000. These figures, which are largely in excess of the average, were due to the transfer of some fifty acres in the vicinity of the corner of Sixty-third street and Cottage Grove avenue to the Washington Park Club, a sporting and driving association organized during the winter by a number of well-known citizens of Chicago. Bogue & Hoyt report the following sales: House and lot northwest corner of Noble street and Fifty-fourth place, $8,200 cash; four lots on Walcott avenue, between Forty-second and Forty-third streets, for $3,850; a lot 100x200 feet, corner of Greenwood avenue and Fifty-first street boulevard, for $7,000; a lot on Oglesby avenue, 100 feet south of Sixty-fourth street, 200x165 feet, $3,800; adjoining lot same size as above, for $4,500. A. Loeb & Bro. report the sale of two lots on Drexel boulevard, between Fifty-fifth and Fifty-sixth streets, for $2,000 each. B. F. Jacobs sold a 200-foot lot on Greenwood avenue and Forty-eighth street for $10,000. H. C. Morey & Co. and F. C. Vierling sold 98 feet on Calumet avenue, near Forty-third street, for $4,000.

J. W. Farlin has sold six lots in his subdivision on Fifty-eighth street, near School street, Englewood, at $390 per lot. B. G. Caulfield sold fifteen acres southeast corner of Wallace and Fifty-eighth streets, Town of Lake, to the Commercial National Bank, for $23,000. An effort is being made by the men interested in the Cheltenham Beach property to revive on a sounder basis the project of the construction of a hotel on the lakeshore near Fifty-seventh street. The plan is that those subscribing to the project shall elect their own officers and control the property. A tract of fifteen acres with 2,000 feet of beach is the site for the proposed hotel. Each subscriber to the amount of $750, will be entitled to a fifty-foot lot in the vicinity of the hotel grounds. The subscription, if completed, is to amount to $200,000. Sixty-one lots have been sold for $38,000, and the subscribers, after paying $110,000 for the remainder of the tract, will control 182 lots, exclusive of sixteen lots for hotel site. These 182 lots are then to be sold at the rate of $750 per fifty feet front, which sale, less the $110,000 for land, will give $163,000 for the construction of the hotel. Hyde Park needs a hotel badly, and this project, if carried through, would undoubtedly benefit property in this vicinity greatly.

Evanston.

A dull week is reported in real-estate transactions. Very few transfers have been made, but a good deal of inquiry is reported, which may make transactions lively soon. There continues a sharp demand for rents. Tenant-houses of all classes are scarce. During the last week S. H. McElwain sold his house and lot, corner of Lake street and Judson avenue; price, $5,500. The house occupied by R. H. Ashton, owned by H. C. Wicker, on Wesley avenue, near Davis street, has been bought by H. B. Hurd for $5,000. The Hinman-Avenue Village Improvement Association, an offshoot of the Evanston Village Association, W. P. Kimball, President; James H. Raymond, Secretary, has issued a series of recommendations which ought to be followed by the property-owners of all the avenues, as well as of Hinman. Hinman avenue, with its uniform width, lined as it is with handsome residences, will, under the efforts of its energetic association, make one of the most beautiful avenues of Evanston.

Mr. E. L. Chapman has sold his home on Chicago avenue to William Burt, of the firm of Gray, Burt & Kingman. The consideration was $10,000. Mr. Burt expects to make it his home.

Hyde Park Redeemed.

HYDE PARK, April 7.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—The numerous articles published in the Chicago papers before the election concerning the ring in Hyde Park and its extravagance naturally led many to suppose that this suburb was not the best place to move to. The result of the present election, which was the victory of the taxpayers' ticket over the ring ticket, will be to inaugurate necessary reforms and to cut down needless expenses.

It is due to property-owners in Hyde Park, whose interests have suffered by the actions of those now superseded by better men, that this fact is now understood. THE TRIBUNE, which has aided the people in clearing out the objectionable Trustee, is entitled to the gratitude of all good citizens of the village, who can only regret that it did not also succeed in clearing out objectionable officeholders in the city.

FOR SALE—MY COTTAGE HOME.
My home, my home, my cottage home—a fair and lovely spot,
How sad and lonely is my soul when I can view thee not.
The vines may blossom in my path, and flowers I most adore,
But what are all those charms to me if not beside my door?
Home is a name we never forget, like other names of earth;
We never grow too old to love the spot that gave us birth.
And when in dreams of faded years of all our youth and pride,
How sweet to dwell beneath the roof where our dear parents reside.
My home, my home, my cottage home, I'll love thee ever more,
And every heart that greets me when I reach thy humble door;
And though my mother's smiles be gone; my father's watchful care,
I love to dwell beneath the roof, for home was always there.

BALLADE OF LIGHT HOUSEKEEPING.

'Tis a subtly sweet, suggestive phrase;
But the simple soul who is lured thereby
Will make a sorrow for many days—
In secret oft will he moan and cry,
And vote the thing a tremendous lie—
For it means, this phrase that sounds so fair,
A world of trouble, and toil, and care,
And a wild, distracting wish to go
Away from it soon, and anywhere:
I speak of the things whereof I know.

It means all little, transparent ways
To hide away from the common eye
The fact that your bread-and-butter stays
In your desk; that you bake, and boil, and fry
In a single dish. It means to try
To hang your garments, the best you wear,
In a folding-bed, that last despair
Of honest souls; and, bitterest blow,
It means a kitcheny-parlor air:
I speak of the things whereof I know.

It means to shrink, neath the stern amaze
Of the lordly butcher's and baker's eye,
Apologizing in meek dispraise
For your modest wants. To rave or sigh
Over the fangs of the boughten pie.
'Tis to pray a strong, Heav'n-reaching prayer
For the meal a man pronounces "square,"
And to be once more in life below,
Free from that peace-destroying snare:
I speak of the things whereof I know.

ENVOY.

Ye who are tempted this life to share,
Pause ere ye enter the tiger's lair;
Consider the truth I fain would show—
For, with hand on heart, I firmly swear
I speak of the things whereof I know.

—Carlotta Perry in Good Cheer.

WOOING.

For The Chicago Tribune.

O when you would a wooing go,
Fond lover, be discerning—
Else you may hear the fateful "No," Chapfallen quite returning.
The maiden is a castled queen,
Who scorns the rude retainer;
But manly words and gentle mien
May touch the heart, and gain her.

Then, when you would a wooing go,
Knock gently at her portal;
Intuitive her glance will show
The chastely-suing mortal.
And, if she swings the drawbridge down
To pass you safely over,
The queen within will give her crown
To grace the chosen lover.

MARCH, 1883. C. B. CARTER.

Cincinnati boasts, and very justly, of one of the best European hotels and restaurants in the country, the St. Nicholas—long known as "The Delmonico of the West." It is pleasant to know that it has been enlarged by seventy-five suites.

RELIGIOUS.

The History of the Holy Books of the Eastern Nations.

Church Notes in Chicago and Throughout the World.

A Sketch of Scriptures of Different Nations and Religions.

Prof. H. A. Ford, a Detroit divine, recently gave a sketch of the sacred books of the world, from which the following is taken:

Certain religious instincts, as the consciousness of a Supreme Being, of a life beyond the grave, of future rewards and punishments, of a sense of sin and a need of sacrifice, are common to humanity. So, also, wherever a nation has had a literature, its religion has usually based upon sacred books—there is the assertion of a written revelation. Every great religion has its Bible.

The best known of these books, says the Jewish and Christian, is the Koran of Mohammed. The title of this means "The Reading," from the Arabic verb for "to read." Other names are Al Kitab, or the book: Al Moshaf, the volume; Al Dhikr, the admonition or reminder; and Al Forban, or the salvation. The 114 suras or chapters of the Koran were professedly given to Mohammed during the twenty-three years of his residence at Mecca and Medina, by the angel Gabriel in human form, as an inspiration from Allah, or the Almighty. They were written upon leaves, bits of leather, or paper, shoulder-blades of mutton, and whatever else was at hand, and thrown loosely into a box, from which they were taken the year after the prophet's death and put together with equal looseness and disregard to connection of topics, in volumes. The chapters bear such titles as The Cow, The Fig, The Star, The Towers, The Congealed Blood, and the like, giving some hint of contents. Each begins thus: "In the name of God the merciful, the compassionate," and a note is made of the revelation at either Mecca or Medina. Not only is the God of the Christians recognized, but also Jesus, though not as the Son of God, and Abraham, Jacob, and Mary, and the Old Testament worthies. The style of the Koran is of singular elegance and beauty, constituting it the classic of Arabic speech. It is the text-book of Moslem faith and likewise of civil government in all the Moslem countries. Copies of it are greatly revered, and are sometimes written in gold and bound most richly in gold and jewels. It is never held by the believers below the girdle or touched without previous purification. Nothing is more hateful to the Mussulman than to see a copy in the hands of a giaour or infidel.

A much more ancient collection of writings is the Vedas, the oldest books in the Hindoo literature, and dating far back of the time of Christ. The oldest hymn of the oldest book, the Rig-Veda, is thought to date from B. C. 2400. The Upanishads, or treatises of theology, are later, and are almost the only part of the Vedas now read. The four divisions of the Vedas contain in all 1,010 hymns, which every Brahmin must learn by heart. They are recognized in the Laws of Manu, which form the text-book of Brahminism. They were written in twelve books ten to nine centuries before Christ. The mythology of the Hindoos is comprised mainly in two great epic poems, the Ramayana and the Mahabharata, containing respectively 50,000 and 120,000 lines, and together filling eighteen large volumes. These are now almost exclusively read as the sacred books of India, with the Puranas, of similar character but much later date. The Shasters or Shastras ("books") is a general term for all the authoritative religious and legal works of the Hindoos.

The Buddhist sacred books are also very numerous, but I find no name for them except the "Pitchas," or Buddhist Scripture, in the Pali language, found in Ceylon.

The Zend-Avesta (i. e., the text or scripture with a zend or commentary) is the Bible of the ancient Parsees or fire-worshipers. It is supposed to have been written in Bactria or Eastern Persia, 1250 to 1300 B. C., by Zoroaster or Zarathustna. Unlike most other sacred books, it is not a body of divinity or dogmatic religion, but it is a liturgy—a collection of hymns, prayers, invocations, and thanksgivings to many deities. It is a manual of worship, to be recited by the priests in public and read privately by the laity. The Bunde-Nesch is a later book of the same religion, and details the Parsee doctrine from old texts now lost.

The religion of Confucius, the principal faith of China, is taught in the five and four books of the Kings. "King," in Chinese, means simply a web of cloth, or the warp that holds threads of cloth in their place. The five Kings contain history, poetry, and rites of religion. They seem to have been in existence before Confucius, whose last years were devoted to their editing. His own teachings are otherwise embodied in the four Kings which were promulgated after his death. The last of these includes the works of Mencius, another Chinese reformer. Taoism, or the religion founded by Lao-tze, in the same age with Confucius, rests upon the books called the Tse-Lao, or "Old Teacher," and the Tav-te-king, which specially represents the notions of the illustrious Lao-tze. It is an interesting fact that the Tae Ping rebels of 1863-'64, although not professing to be Jews or Christians, took our Bible for their book, and proclaimed that if their insurrection succeeded it would be substituted for the writings of Confucius and Lao-tze.

The ancient Egyptians had forty-two sacred books, in five classes, containing hymns in praise of the gods, instructions in morals, religious rites, the education of priests, and related matters.

The Greek and Roman mythology had no sacred books, unless certain poetical works may be taken for such.

The two Eddas set forth the mythology of the Norsemen, or ancient Scandinavians. They originated in Iceland, the poetic or elder Edda comprising thirty-seven religious poems of religious and heroic history, and the younger or prose Edda giving a full synopsis of the Norse mythology. The term "Edda" means "great grandmother." Both these collections date long after Christ.

This is a pretty full list of the books of sacred or semi-sacred character known to the world, except the Bible of the Jews and that of the Christians. Those which may be deemed living Scriptures today are the Koran, the Shasters, the Buddhist writings, the Kings of the Chinese, and, to a very limited extend, the Zend-Avesta.

The Church in General.

The Rev. J. E. Wright, late pastor of the Jefferson Park Presbyterian Church, has received a unanimous call to the Market Square Presbyterian Church of Germantown, a suburb of Philadelphia, which is a strong organization of 520 members.

The Churchman report of the first of a series of mission services in Pittsburg, Pa., says: "In answer to inquiries Mr. Bonham explained the nature of the proposed service in a lecture delivered at St. Andrew's Church in the presence of the Bishop and a very limited congregation, the majority of the religious churchmen in the city being engaged in Lenten duties at the opera, where Patti was inculcating morality and self-denial in the edifying rôle of 'La Traviata.'"

The Chicago Congregational Club at its meeting of Monday, April 16, tenders a reception to Joseph Cook at the Palmer House at half-past 5 p. m. Ladies will be welcome at this meeting, and tickets may be procured of the Secretary for friends of members at $1 each. Under the vote of the club, the Secretary has authority to enroll about twenty-five more names. To secure a membership before these vacancies are full early application is necessary.

The Rev. Charles Blanchard, President of Wheaton College, will preach this morning and evening at the Chicago Avenue Church. President Blanchard is the son of the former President of Wheaton, the corner-stone of which institution is anti-Masonry. He is the minister who created a row at a Washington funeral which he conducted last week, in the course of which he indulged in one of his tirades against Jubilo, jubila, jubilum. He will probably be the candidate for the Presidency of the United States on this issue in 1884.

The Churchman discourages the attempt to discipline the Rev. R. Heber Newton. While it does not mention him by name, it speaks of the attempt on the part of certain clergymen of this city "to present one of their brethren for trial because he has displayed a certain lack of scholarship in some of his recent sermons, or because that lack has led him into error." This is considered a very mild way of putting the case, and it will probably surprise that gentleman and his adherents to have it hinted that he, who claims to have expended so much profound research and careful study on his Biblical investigations, should have displayed "a lack of scholarship." The Churchman regards ecclesiastical trials as productive of unwholesome sensationalism, and says that the religious journals which try to stir people up to engaging in these trials are like the "men of an inferior sort" who "urge on dogs or boys to fight."

President Eliot, of Harvard, has excited the ire of some religious newspapers. The Guardian delicately observes: "As the maudlin President of Harvard once said in a post-prandial speech." The Christian at Work says: "It is simply untrue that 'seminaries bid against each other for young mendicants.' The language is as slanderous in spirit as it is offensive in form. While the evangelical denominations have 'Boards of Education' organized to help needy and worthy young men into the ministry, it is their purpose and mainly their practice to guard against the mendicant disposition and ignoble motives. If a tree can be judged by its fruits, this system of beneficiary aid, granted under suitable safeguards, is certainly one of the most beneficient and far-reaching in its happy influences that the wisdom of the Church of Christ ever planted, or is likely to plant. It has not degraded, as Mr. Eliot charges, the Protestant ministry, nor destroyed its influence. Nor does the clerical profession show, as he asserts, a dearth of 'great men.' Compared with other professions, it exhibits as much learning, as much oratory, as much dialectical skill, broad knowledge, wit, and literary activity as any in this country. And every public gathering where questions of history, scholarship, philanthropy, and international humane relations are discussed, as well as publications of manifold kinds, gives proof of the efficient presence and abilities of clergymen."

The New York Observer says: "Prof. S. H. Kellogg, formerly resident as a missionary in India, but now of the Western Theological Seminary, has addressed the following communication to the editor of the Pittsburg (Pa.) Telegraph: 'Many friends of Dr. Herrick Johnson, formerly pastor of the Third Presbyterian Church in this city, will be interested to know that he has practically retracted opinions once expressed by him, and often quoted as authority, concerning the recognition in the Bible of such a thing as 'unfermented wine.' The Philadelphia Record of March 10 quotes his words on the 'two-wine theory' from the Cincinnati Christian Standard, as follows: 'There seemed to be some evidence for it, but the more I investigated the more I became satisfied that the theory could not stand, and years and years ago I abandoned it altogether. A fuller study of the subject has satisfied me that the use of unfermented wine is without recognition in any respectable authority.'"

The American Literary Churchman says: "There has been a series of admirable articles in the last three numbers of the Episcopal Register on the temperance question which we heartily recommend to our readers. It is, in effect, a much-needed protest against the kind of 'bullying' to which the clergy are incessantly exposed by the more rabid teetotalers. To assume that a clergyman is indifferent to the shocking and destructive vice of intemperance is a gratuitous insult. To demand that he shall pledge himself to become a teetotaler is an insufferable impertinence. To say that the moderate use of stimulants is poisonous and the like, in face of the fact that they are used habitually by every civilized nation under heaven, is mere nonsense. But, anyhow, a clergyman is to judge for himself how best to counteract the habit of intemperance; and if teetotalism is to be made a condition of ordination or rectorship, it is only too certain that the supply of competent clergymen will be far more limited than it is even now. We can do God's work in the world without being in holy orders. The fact is that the people who 'pose' as 'weak believers' are among the strongest and most pugnacious of all known animals. It is precisely by its moderation and common sense that the Church Temperance Society commends itself to intelligent men."

Pious Smiles.

A traveler in the Holy Land announces that he has discovered Jacob's Well. This will be gratifying news to a number of Chicago citizens, who have been deploring the rumor that Jacob's dead.

"Mamma," said a little Sunday-school scholar, "do we all go to Abraham's bosom when we die, if we are real good?"

"Yes, my child, so we are taught."

"All of us, mamma; all the little boys and the little girls, and the grown-up people, too?"

"Yes, darling, everybody."

"My eye, mamma, what a great big hotel sort of a bosom Abraham must have, mustn't he?"

The other day a bright little girl was listening to her mother, who was reading stories to her, in one of which the name of his Satanic Highness was given.

"Mamma," she exclaimed, "who is the Devil?"

"Why, my child," the mother answered, hesitatingly, "I can't tell you exactly!"

"O well, never mind," was the interruptive exclamation of the little one; "I'll ask grandpa, I've heard him mention him!"

"What Newton is it that the papers are talking about?" asked a gentleman just returned from Europe of a friend in one of our up-town clubs the other evening. "Is it my old friend Gen. Newton, of the army?"

"Not exactly," was the reply, "but I am not surprised at the mistake, for both the Rev. R. Heber Newton and Gen. Newton are engaged in the same business."

"What's that?" asked the late arrival.

"Why, removing obstructions from Hell Gate." Tableau!

This anecdote comes from Scotland: Two fishermen—Jamie and Sandy—belated and befogged on a rough water, were in some trepidation lest they should never get ashore again. At last Jamie said: "Sandy, I'm steering, and I think you'd better put up a bit of prayer." Sandy said: "I don't know how." Jamie said: "If ye don't I'll just chuck ye overboard." Sandy began: "O Lord, I never asked anything of Ye for fifteen year, and if Ye'll only get us safe back I'll never trouble Ye again." "Whisht, Sandy," said Jamie, "the boat's touched shore; don't be beholden to anybody."

A certain minister of the Kirk of Scotland, now deceased, had prepared with great care a series of discourses on the parable of the ten virgins, and had made use of them rather oftener than some of his brethren thought he should. On the evening of a communion Sabbath, when assisting a brother clergyman in the same presbytery, he delivered one of his series, which his friend had heard more than once. When the services were over and the two ministers were on their way to the manse, the one said to the other: "Man, John, I really think you should gie up thae virgins; ye're fairly makin' auld maids of them!"

The Rev. Murphy Wilson, an Austin divine, recently had occasion to visit Dallas, the Chicago of the Southwest. On arriving at Dallas, Wilson asked the first gentleman he met, who happened to be an Alderman, if he knew where Bishop Garrett lived. "Never heard of such a man. He don't keep a saloon, does he?" "O no; but can you tell me where the Episcopal Church is?" "Don't know nothing about Church. There was a man by that name here last fall, but he ran off with another man's wife. I know less about Church than I do about the first fellow you mentioned, and I never heard of him before; but I can show you where the boss variety show in this State is located, if that's the kind of place you are looking for," responded the Alderman."

THE MANY, NOT THE FEW.

For The Chicago Tribune.

That Kings might be, the Millions see
Beneath their burden lie!
That Power its monuments may rear,
The future years its blazon bear,
The Many toil and die!

And Glory's call that speaks to all,
Unheard is by dulled mind;
For tears and suffering, wrong and pain,
Of generations, cloud the brain
Of serf and peasant-hind.

And sadder still the fettered will,
The stolid, brute content,
That finds the heart to laugh and sing
While clank of chain and whip-lash ring
O'er bodies dwarfed and bent.

And this the plan since time began,
E'en in our Nation new,
Where the giant King Monopoly
Binds yet the strong arm of the Free—
The Many for the Few.

And will not Men arise again
To right the old, old wrong?
Not with the sword of Anarchy,
But with the ballot of the Free—
The Many, brave and strong!

WE SHALL MEET AGAIN.

For The Chicago Tribune.

Full many a scene, full many a flower,
May yield the bosom sweet delight—
Then perish with the passing hour,
And leave us groping in the night:
But O how precious, in the hour
When parting with the friends we love,
Whose tenderness found sweet employ,
To point them to the hope above;
And, while the pearly tear-drops well
From eyes, the heart is free from pain;
We slowly speak a sad farewell,
And trust to meet in Heaven again!

We know there is above the skies
A Kingdom where bright Seraphs reign;
Where blessed ones, who go from Earth,
In endless love shall meet again!
And, when we reach that blissful land,
And sweetly sing His praises o'er,
Amidst a blest and sinless band,
We know that we shall part no more!
So look we up where sweet Truth dwells—
So look we down on false Earth vain;
And e'er when taking last farewells,
We say, "In Heaven we meet again!"

Home Manufactures.

It is with just pride we can point to America's success in manufactures, and especially so is this the case with that most durable of all known floor coverings, "Linoleum." It has so completely superseded the best foreign article that only the poorest qualities can now be imported. In use the foreign goods will continually look dirty and dingy, the Domestic, bright, clean, and pleasing, while the designs and artistic effects are beyond comparison. All carpet dealers keep these remarkable goods and the Walton Trade Mark with the word "Linoleum" is on the back of every square yard of American make.

GREAT BRITAIN.

MR. SMALLEY'S LETTER.

London, April 7.—[G. W. Smalley's Cable to New York Tribune.]—The dynamite disclosures yesterday and today fill many columns in the newspapers, but are received by the public with a degree of composure which may fairly be called amazing. The police entertain no doubt that Whitehead, Norman, Gallagher, Wilson, and O'Connor are all directly concerned in a plot on a great scale, aiming at simultaneous explosions in various parts of London. They believe that these arrests have baffled the conspiracy for the moment, but decline to affirm explicitly that they will be able immediately to break up the whole gang. They admit that they have other information on which active steps are taking. They wisely withhold from the public further accounts, having probably published already several things that would have been better kept secret. The public calmness is due in some degree to the conviction that the police have shown unusual energy and acuteness in tracing the criminals. The only serious mistake known thus far has been the premature arrest of Norman, whose confederate, Fletcher, believed to be the more important person, has escaped in consequence.

OPINIONS OF THE PRESS.

The press discusses the matter with coolness and good sense. No human being doubts that the plot was Irish-American, the direct connection of nearly every prisoner with America being clearly proved. Featherstone, who has been arrested in Cork, already claims protection as an American citizen. The identity of the operators in Cork, Liverpool, Glasgow, and London is probable. American dispatches are scanned with interest to discover what line the American Government under these circumstances will be likely to take. The Standard, misled by its New York correspondent, observes that the American press never seems to rise superior to the satisfaction of contemplating friends in misfortune.

Sir William Harcourt's bill to amend the present law relating to explosives, which was designed mainly to prevent carelessness, proposes to make the possession of explosives prima-facie evidence of guilt, and the penalty penal servitude. It may be expected to pass both Houses next week.

THE BUDGET.

Mr. Childers' lucid budget statement proved unexpectedly favorable, and was well received by everybody except the Tories, whose unsound finance in past years it exposed. The announcement that the whole expense of the Egyptian expedition has been paid out of the year's revenue is welcomed by Liberals as the putting in practice of Mr. Gladstone's principle of "pay as you go." Mr. Gladstone himself is really entitled to this credit. The surplus for the current year, nominally over £2,500,000, is really little over £500,000, the Ministry being pledged in advance to abolish an extra penny half-penny of the income tax levied on account of Egypt. The Tories complain that the remaining surplus is so used as to create a suspicion of popularity-hunting, the budget being devoted mainly to securing six-penny telegrams and to the abolition of a portion of the railway-passenger duty, both objects having been resolved upon by both parties as practicable whenever an occasion should permit. The falling-off of £5,000,000 sterling in the spirit duties rejoices Sir Wilfrid Lawson considerably, but rejoices less those paying direct taxes.

PARLIAMENTARY WORK.

Parliament this week has gone through rather an unusual amount of work, though it has been mostly talk. Mr. Jacob Bright's motion forbidding the Government to proceed with the proposed treaty recognizing Portuguese sovereignty on the Congo was rejected, but his object was practically attained, the Ministry accepting an amendment binding them to terms which Portugal is regarded as certain to refuse. The House showed a deeper distrust of Portugal than of French adventurers like Brazza. The Attorney-General's Criminal Law Amendment bill is regarded by the legal profession as wholly inadequate. It limits the right of appeal to capital cases, but is suggested by reformers on the half-leaf principal. The opponents of vivisection secured Wednesday afternoon for airing their sentimental objections to the advance of physiological science. They talked out the debate. They have strengthened the general conviction of the adequacy of the present law for the regulation of research, even the Spectator admitting that it will be contented if licenses can be more carefully granted. The truth is, that scientists are now so harassed by State interference that nearly all experimenting is pursued abroad.

The expected question in the House of Commons touching Mr. Parnell's Paris account of the Kilmainham negotiations elicited the admission that the report was correct. There was a curious dialog between Mr. Gladstone and Mr. Parnell, each affirming that the other made the first proposal for compromise.

The attempt by Coleridge Kennard to revive the controversy over the Alabama surplus evoked a decisive statement from the Ministry that they consider that England has no concern in the disposition of the money by America. Public opinion condemns Mr. Chamberlain's committee for inquiring into the expediency of the Channel tunnel, which was carried with difficulty under the pressure of party discipline, the Ministry, though not favoring the tunnel, oddly fancying themselves under such obligations to foreign Powers as to be unable to forbid the enterprise without Parliamentary sanction. No committee is likely to approve of the project to which an immense majority in both Houses of Parliament is notoriously hostile.

LORD CHURCHILL.

Lord Randolph Churchill's escapade, which enlivened the beginning of the week, is already nearly forgotten by the public, but not by the Tory members of the House. They seized the occasion of Lord Randolph Churchill's attempted overthrow of Sir Stafford Northcote to emphasize their loyalty to the regular leader, and their thorough distrust of his would-be successor. The Marquis of Salisbury's prompt repudiation of Lord Randolph Churchill's proffered alliance, followed by the adhesion of the ambitious nobleman's three comrades of the fourth party to Sir Stafford Northcote in the confidence memorial, leaves him as solitary as Selkirk.

The chief book of the week is another volume of Sir Henry Maine on "Early Law and Customs," like the others, learned, original, and thoughtful.

Mr. Herbert Spencer's health causes his friends some anxiety. It has been impaired, apparently, by his American journey. Since his return he has been unable to perform his usual quantity of work, and he declines all invitations.

Mr. Alma Tadema is suffering much from overwork. He has left London for Mentone, expecting to be absent two months. The exhibition of the pictures which he has last completed, including his American commissions, opens Monday at the Deschamps Gallery.

MR. JENNINGS' LETTER.

London, April 7.—[Mr. Jennings' Cable to New York World.]—Nothing that could with propriety be called a "panic" exists in the public mind here respecting the discoveries that have been made here of plots and dynamite factories during the week, but I have the best authority for saying that great uneasiness is felt in official quarters, where many important facts are known that for the present are of a necessity kept a secret from the world without. It is certain that a wide-spread organization for the destruction of public buildings exists, and that as yet only its subordinate agents have been arrested or tracked, and the Government officials are aware of the existence in London and the other cities of the Kingdom of large masses of explosives, all definit trace of which, however, they have temporarily lost. At any moment, therefore, the public may be startled by the news of a successful raid, for not only is it probable that some of the "avengers" in custody will "inform," but the police are working upon scores of clews, to say nothing of the close watch they have set upon every avenue of travel. Every approach to London is guarded, and even the luggage of passengers upon the railway trains is examined quietly in the guards' vans. All these precautions, however, cannot prevent conspirators from manufacturing explosives here, especially as several papers have given full directions for the preparation of nitro-glycerine, panclastile, and similar destructive compounds. I need hardly say that much soreness is felt here at the fact that all these operations are carried on by means of money which is openly collected in the United States for the purpose and remitted by the well-known agents of the Dynamite party in New York. That these agents should be allowed to pursue their operations without let or hindrance by the American Government is regarded as an unfriendly act, which the United States would not tolerate in its own case from another nation. I have reason to believe that this sentiment will, in all likelihood, find a vigorous expression next week in the House of Commons.

TROOPS SENT FORWARD.

Troops have been sent forward today to Birmingham to guard against the rescue of the Fenian prisoners there, but I may say that the class in England which is at present in the most imminent danger is the Irish population of London and our large manufacturing cities. Should any lives be lost by another explosion of dynamite, it is not too much to say that a literal war of extermination would probably be waged, and the Irish driven out of every town. Already I notice that employers are getting afraid to take them, and a movement for their discharge is going on steadily in many large factories, so that, as I have already intimated, the blow of the next explosion will be certain to fall more heavily on the Irishmen than on any other class. Mr. Parnell, dreading to be compromised by the O'Donovan-Rossa faction if he should go to the Philadelphia convention, remains here. Most of the Home-Rulers, including "Head-Centre" Stephens, strongly condemn the dynamite policy, fearing that it must ultimately bring about a frightful reaction in the public mind in England against the Irish. I may add that the general opinion here is that the first serious disaster brought about by the "Skirmishers" or "Avengers" will settle "the Irish question" for the next fifty years in a sense adverse to the people of the sister island.

UNEASINESS REGARDING THE QUEEN'S HEALTH.

The Queen's general health, I hear upon inquiry, remains good, but the local trouble—the sprain or bruise upon the knee—is not mending as it should. This fact naturally gives rise to some uneasiness, not, however, amounting to alarm. It is nevertheless thought necessary—or, at least, advisable—that Sir William Jenner should remain permanently at Windsor Castle, and all the engagements made for her Majesty have been indefinitly postponed. The official accounts are almost silent, but it is pretty widely known that the doctors are both surprised and disappointed that the injury has not yielded to their treatment. No apprehensions concerning the Queen's eventual recovery are, however, reported.

HIGH LICENSE ON EXPLOSIVES.

The new bill which has been introduced by Sir William Harcourt will oblige all manufacturers of explosives to take out licenses, and render liable to penal servitude, for a long period, if not for life, all persons found in possession of explosive substances for unlawful purposes. At present two years is the maximum punishment that can be inflicted, and this is felt to be entirely inadequate. The bill will certainly be pushed through next week.

Mr. Lewis has gained the victory in the Atlantic & Great Western fight, and Erie now rules the roost. A determined effort is being made to bull both stocks. We shall see the results of it next week.

Lord Randolph Churchill has given great offense to the great mass of the Conservatives by his attacks on Sir Stafford Northcote, and as a consequence the party in Manchester has publicly withdrawn its invitation to the "Wasp of Woodstock" to stand at the next election. This is by all odds the severest rebuke that Lord Randolph has yet received.

I hear that your townsman, Mr. Rufus Hatch, is organizing a "personally conducted party," whose members are to be of different European nationalities, for a grand trip through the United States next fall. Many invitations have already been issued, and to very prominent men.

THE LATEST OUTRAGE.

London, April 7.—[Special.]—The outrage offered to Lady Harcourt by sending her by mail a piece of the sheet upon which a woman had died of small-pox has aroused the deepest horror and indignation. Perhaps the leader of the dynamite party and his followers will make haste to assume the credit of this new form of warfare.

A PRACTICAL DEMONSTRATION.

The belief among the police is that the explosion at Westminster was designed to be a practical demonstration to the members of the dynamite conspiracy of the ease and safety to themselves with which they could act. They are convinced that the intention was to blow up a large number of public structures simultaneously at night, and to procure, at all hazards, an explosion about some part of Windsor Castle, where the Queen is at present living. It is also intimated that it was designed to reach as nearly as possible some of the members of the Government. The information of the police upon all of these points appears to have been singularly accurate, and explains the extraordinary vigilance with which the dwellings of ministers and several personages have been lately guarded. Perhaps it came from among the ranks of the scoundrels themselves. Of such assasins as these a large proportion may be depended on to add treachery to their other infamy.

New York, April 7.—Mr. J. Pierrepont Edwards, the British Consul, said today that he knew nothing whatever of any request having been made by the British Government to the American Government for a force of skilled detectives to assist in tracking the dynamite agitators.

PRECAUTIONS.

London, April 6.—Harcourt and Asheton are arranging for the speedy passage of the bill to restrict the use of explosives.

CAUSTIC COMMENT.

The Times says: The hirelings and fanatics who come from Irish-American slums to use the dagger and dynamite, though not directly hounded on by Irish orators, are encouraged by the absence of any honest attempt on the part of the Irish leaders to denounce the outrages committed or in contemplation.

MERE EXPERIMENTS.

The police are convinced that the former trifling outrages, like the attempt to blow up the Mansion House, were undertaken by Irishmen resident in London, instigated by persons in America. The smaller attempts are regarded merely as experiments.

RETAINED.

William Doveton Smyth, counsel for Norman, got a retainer and instructions from De Tracy, an American lawyer in Bow street.

PRECAUTIONS AT MANCHESTER.

London, April 7.—Renewed threats have been made to destroy the Manchester Town-Hall by means of explosives. The authorities, in consequence, have taken great precautions to prevent the destruction of the building.

WHITEHEAD GUARDED BY TROOPS.

The Mayor of Birmingham, fearing an effort to effect the release of Whitehead, has asked for and obtained troops to assist in guarding the jail in which he is confined.

ANOTHER ARREST

was made today in connection with the conspiracy to destroy life and buildings. The man apprehended is named John Kirton. He was taken into custody this morning at Euston railway station, London. It is stated that Kirton had only recently arrived here from the United States. He refused to submit to peaceable arrest and made some resistance.

THE HEAD CENTRE.

Kirton was trying to escape from London when arrested. From papers found on the prisoner there is little doubt that Kirton was selected to commit the actual deeds of destruction. On Kirton's arraignment it was proved that he corresponded with Gallagher, arrested at Lambeth, and delivered a letter addressed to Gallagher yesterday at Charing Cross Hotel. Kirton was remanded until Thursday next.

The police of Birmingham have certain evidence that Whitehead and the prisoners arrested in London were implicated in the recent outrages in London. They claim to be able to show that Whitehead has been for many years one of the principal Fenians in England. It is expected that he will be tried in London with the other prisoners.

THE DENIAL.

The story is denied that an infernal machine of ingenious mechanism had been discovered.

IMPRISONED AT MILLBANK.

Norman, Gallagher, Wilson, and Dalton have been removed from the jail at Clerkenwell to the prison at Millbank. The transfer was made under a strong escort of police, as it was feared that an attempt would be made to liberate the prisoners.

FENIAN DOCUMENTS DISCOVERED.

A large number of Fenian documents have been discovered at Salford and forwarded to Sir William Harcourt, the Home Secretary. The papers include letters from members of Parliament.

THE CONSPIRATORS FROM CORK.

Liverpool, April 7.—Deasy and Flanagan, arrested recently for bringing infernal machines and explosives into England from Cork, were arraigned today. The crown announces its intention to ask that the prisoners be committed on the charge of having explosives in their possession, with felonious intent, and also on the charge of conspiracy, with a view to felony, with various persons known and unknown to the crown.

STARTLING EVIDENCE.

Witnesses deposed that the box Deasy had when arrested contained materials for making explosives, and also a preparation of arsenic and dynamite and parts of an infernal machine, consisting of apparatus by which sulphuric acid could be allowed to slowly soak through into a mixture the principal element of which was chloride of potash. It was explained that with this combination an explosion could be produced within a maximum time of forty minutes. The machine is exactly similar in construction to those used in Glasgow and in the attempt on the office of the London Times. The police cross-examined, but the evidence was not shaken in any respect. It is stated in the evidence that "the dynamite" found with the prisoners was a similar compound to that contained in the infernal machines seized on their importation into Liverpool in 1881.

HELD WITHOUT BAIL.

Deasy and Flanagan were committed for trial at the Assizes, bail being refused. The prisoners reserved their defense.

FLAHERTY.

Birmingham, April 6.—The man known as "Flaherty," under police surveillance as a suspicious character, has openly expressed sympathy with Whitehead. In consequence of these expressions, an angry mob attacked his residence, smashing in the windows and doors. Flaherty fled to the police station for protection.

A TEST.

About a grain of dynamite found among Whitehead's stock was exploded today as an experiment. The report was deafening.

EIGHT ARRESTS IN IRELAND.

Dublin, April 7.—The magistrate at Ennis, Clifford Lloyd, and a strong force of police, made a raid in the Crushen district, and arrested eight young men. The charge preferred against the prisoners is conspiracy to murder. More arrests on the same charge are expected.

CHARGED WITH CAUSING AN EXPLOSION IN SCOTLAND.

Glasgow, April 7.—The police have taken into custody a man named Bernard Gallagher, who is charged with causing the explosion at the gas-works here. Gallagher is an Irish-American, and is a brother of the man of the same name arrested at Lambeth last Thursday. He was arraigned at the Police court, when he declared that he was innocent of the charge laid against him, and that he only left the United States on the 8th of last February. He was remanded to prison for eight days.

SEARCHING HOUSES IN IRELAND.

Tralee, April 7.—The police searched seven houses here occupied by persons against whom information had been lodged. They arrested a man named Kelly, formerly a Land-League organizer, and another man, who had in his possession firearms and compromising papers.

TRADE STATISTICS.

London, April 6.—The imports decreased in March as compared with March of last year by £4,432,000. The exports decreased in the same time £882,000.

THE TURF.

Betting against Keene's Foxhall for the City and Suburban Handicap, is 20 to 1.

FAILED.

Richard Musgrove, a merchant and bill-broker of Liverpool and Manchester, failed. Liabilities, £120,000.

THE LEADERS.

O'MEAGHER'S OPINIONS.

Washington, D. C., April 7.—[Special.]—Capt. Edward O'Meagher Condon, who is in the Government service here very frankly says that the Irish people have suffered till any sort of retaliation is justifiable. He says: "While placing no reliance on the sensational cablegrams sent by the British Government, I believe that the Irish people, driven to desperation by the failure of their peaceful efforts to obtain some amelioration of their condition, are turning their attention to the only means left to bring their persecutors to terms. When a man has been driven from his little home—seen it burned to the ground lest he might steal back and find a night's shelter in it—seen his wife and little ones thrown out to perish on the roadside, and often to die of hunger and exposure before his eyes, it is not perhaps unaccountable that he should become inspired with a longing for vengeance, and should gratify that longing when opportunity offered."

"But do you believe that those engaged in the plots spoken of seek to be revenged on the people as well as on the Government of England?"

"Certainly not. They, I believe, wish sincerely to avoid doing anything that may cause injury to those who are not responsible for the injuries inflicted on them. But wherever an armed enemy is engaged in an act of war, as an English ex-Cabinet Minister has designated an eviction, resistance becomes a duty. Evictions have been called acts of war by an ex-Cabinet Minister, and sentences of death. Perhaps it is hoped that by practicing retaliation the British Government may be deterred from perpetrating those terrible crimes in Ireland."

"Do you think that the action of sympathizers here will lead to any trouble between this country and England?"

"By no means. All Irish-American citizens owe their first allegiance to our Government, but they may reasonably claim the right to extend to their suffering kindred the same help which was given by England to the South during the late unpleasantness. We do not expect that members of the President's Cabinet will imitate the example of English Cabinet Ministers during the event alluded to and subscribe to an Irish revolutionary fund, but we do not think that our Government is required to show more zeal that the British did on that occasion. Whenever any one undertakes an act not authorized by the Constitution or laws on behalf of Ireland he will be prepared to accept the consequences."

O'DYNAMITE-ROSSA.

New York, April 7.—[Special.]—O'Dynamite-Rossa sat with four of his impecunious friends in the office of the United Irishman today waiting for more contributions from equally impecunious servant-girls and laborers. A letter addressed to Rossa brought a draft for $65 from Capt. Thomas Phelan, of Kansas City, Mo.; another brought a contribution of $50 from the Clan-na-Gael; and another one of $15 from people who believe in the "Resources of Civilization." These sums will probably enable the party to free Ireland in a proper manner on Monday. Mr. Patrick Crowe, of Peoria, Ill., sent a long letter to Rossa, but as it contained no money Mr. O'Donovan hadn't read any portion of it but that which said that money ought to be showered into his (O'Donovan's) office from all quarters. O'Donovan, who is better known as "Rossa," said he couldn't be interviewed on the dynamite question because "I'm under bonds to keep quiet, and I'll be blown up by dynamite myself unless I do. Rossa showed an alleged cable dispatch from Mezzeroff dated Havre, France, April 7. Mezzeroff is the Russian Nihilist who has been in New York some time past instructing the Rossaites in manufacturing explosives. This dispatch stated that he couldn't reach Moscow until the 21st inst.; that experiments at Fort Lee (near New York) must cease; that before the end of the month he would give a good account of himself in two nations, etc. [This is a sample of manufactured news which the dynamite chief from Skibbereen passes off on his ignorant dupes. Mezzeroff is not in France. He is now in this city.]

JAMES STEPHENS, THE HEAD CENTRE.

London, April 7.—[Special.]—A correspondent of the Standard has had a highly important interview in Paris with James Stephens, well known as the founder of the Fenian Society and the central organizer of the "Irish Republican Brotherhood." Mr. Stephens' attention was called to the statement recently published that in the diary of one of the men charged with complicity in the Phenix-Park murders, he (Stephens) was spoken of as to be consulted regarding the formation of the "Invincible Association."

Mr. Stephens replied: "It is altogether without foundation. The fact is well known that for several years past I have been living in quiet seclusion."

"But of course you follow the course of events in England and Ireland, and are well supplied with the English and Irish papers?"

"I can hardly say that, because I devote most of my leisure to literature rather than to politics. Of course I am not inattentive to passing events in the British Empire, but I derive my information as it comes to me filtered through foreign channels. I do not take a pin's interest in the doings of the Irish Parliamentary party. I have no particular affection for the oratory or statesmanship which coquets with Irish nationality and pledges public and solemn fealty to the British Crown."

"Then you do not approve of the policy of the present Irish leaders?"

"They may be right," replied Mr. Stephens, "but I do not think so. They may do good, but I decline to believe it."

"Have not the efforts of the party, led by Mr. Parnell, resulted in securing from the English Parliament beneficial legislation for Ireland? Such laws, for example, as the Land act?"

"The agitation headed by Mr. Parnell has had much less to do with the granting of reform measures for Ireland than is generally supposed. Whatever in the way of improvement or reform they may think they have achieved is not due to their eloquence or it genuity or humor—of which latter gift, I am told, they do not possess much—but to the consciousness of the sullen physical force behind in Ireland, and in the greater Ireland beyond the seas."

"You have no faith, then, Mr. Stephens, in the ultimate success of home rule?"

"No; I hold to the opinion I started with, to which I am consistent, and in which I hope to die."

"And that is?"

"That nothing will save Ireland but utter separation, and that can be won neither by poetry nor rhetoric, nor yet by heroic watchfulness on the well-stuffed cushions of St. Stephens."

"Then you still believe in the doctrine of Fenianism?"

"I do; but I have outlived my strength, although some say that I have not, unhappily, survived my illusions. How can I do otherwise while Ireland is still a mendicant at the gate of Dives with the wallet periodically hung out for doles. My aspiration, like that of Thomas Francis Meagher, was to lift the island up and make her a benefactor to humanity, instead of the meanest beggar on the face of creation."

"But you must admit that Ireland alone would be an insignificant speck and could not stand against a neighboring power which is rich and strong, with an army and navy and populous colonies?"

"Yes, it could as an ally on perfect equality of partnership. Besides, these colonies are certain to fall away and become independent in name, as they are now virtually independent. Fenianism helped to put down sectarian bigotry, if it did naught else. What the Fenians aimed at was an Ireland which would be peopled and administered by kindly Irish of the Irish, neither Saxon nor Italian. No just cause was ever served by villainy. While I had control of the Fenian organization there was never an assasination by one of its members. I would not permit it, and if I had been in Ireland on a recent occasion and the notion had entered any fanatic's mind it would have been peremptorily stamped out. The Phenix Park murder was one of the basest and blackest crimes ever perpetrated. It was more than a crime; in Fouché's words, it was a political fault. I look upon it with utter and thorough abhorrence. The only bright spot which one can rest on in the whole appalling transaction is the benign and tender letter of that brave, good woman, the wife of Lord Frederick Cavendish."

GERMANY.

THE FLOODS SUBSIDING.

Danzig, April 7.—Several steamers at great risk effected a passage through the ice at the mouth of the Vistula today, after the attempt had failed to break the ice by hand grenades. The waters have since commenced falling, and the danger to this port and the stores of timber here, valued at £750,000, is considered averted. There was another large stoppage of ice today below Dirschau, and an accumulation 6,000 metres long is reported below the town. The Villages of Bohnsack and Neufaeller and a portion of the Danzig causeway are still entirely submerged by the overflow of the Vistula.

There are four breaches in the embankment of the river above the Village of Plehnendorf. One of them extends 500 metres. Most of the villagers sought refuge in the adjacent towns. A number, however, are isolated on the embankment of the river, and pioneers are arranging to rescue them. The people are short of provisions, the supply being only sufficient to last two days.

THE TRIPLE ALLIANCE.

Berlin, April 7.—The Norddeutsche Zeitung, reverting to the subject of a defensive alliance of Germany, Austria, and Italy, against France, says the only reason for the formation of such an alliance would be the fear of French aggression, and such fear would only be justified if a military adventurer seized the power of France. It would be natural that three pacific Powers should intervene to preserve the peace if one of them was threatened, but such intervention would require no treaty.

NO HOPE FOR CONRAD.

It is stated that the Emperor, who usually commutes the sentences of death, has decided not to interfere in the case of Conrad, who killed his wife and four children.

THE DUTIES ON CORN.

The Norddeutsche Zeitung says the Bundesrath will soon consider the question of increasing the duties on corn.

HERBERT BISMARCK.

Herbert Bismarck, son of the Chancellor, had an audience with the Emperor. He will return to London shortly.

BISMARCK'S APPETITE.

The Norddeutsche Zeitung says the reports of Bismarck's great appetite are untrue. The chief cause of anxiety among the physicians is the want of appetite.

ECONOMICAL CONGRESS.

The German Economical Congress will meet at Königsberg the 3d of September and remain in session three days.

COMMERCE.

The Government have under consideration the commercial relations between Russia and Germany since the introduction in Germany of the duty on corn. One hundred and thirty thousand more tons of grain were sent last year by way of Liban for shipment than was sent through Danzig.

FRANCE.

UNEASINESS IN PARIS.

Paris, April 7.—The arrests in London and other cities of England of men who have explosives in their possession causes considerable uneasiness here. There are fears that attempts may be made to blow up buildings in Paris. To prevent the introduction into their houses of anything of an explosive nature, the owners of large establishments are stopping up the openings to their cellars, as was done in the time of the Commune.

ATTEMPT TO WRECK A CHATEAU.

Dynamite fiends are still at work in the vicinity of Montceau les Mines. Last night a cartridge containing dynamite was placed in a cavity in the tower of Chateau Plessis, near that town. The cartridge exploded, but did very little damage. The chateau is not now inhabited.

AN AUTHOR DEAD.

Paris, April 7.—Louis Veuillot, the celebrated French author and journalist, is dead.

[Louis Veuillot, author and journalist, son of a cooper, born at Boynes en Gatinais (Loiret), in 1813, was sent to an humble school near Paris and at the age of 13 entered the office of a lawyer. He set resolutely to work to instruct himself, and with such success as to be able to gain a subsistence by his pen at the age of 19, and he held various appointments on the provincial press, where the stinging vivacity of his style involved him in several duels. Before going to Rome, in 1838, he was, he avows, almost devoid of faith, religious or political; but he returned an altered man, and in the Univers, which he was selected to edit, became the uncompromising champion of the church, dealing blows right and left in defense of the papacy. In 1842 M. Veuillot went to Africa as Secretary to Gen. Bugeaud, and on his return entered the Ministry of the Interior as Chief Secretary. The revolution of 1848 was at first hailed by him as a providential event, though he afterwards took a different view. His polemics in the Univers, of which he again became editor in 1848, were so violent, that he incurred the censure of the Archbishop of Paris, and in 1853 the Bishop of Orleans expressly forbade his clergy to read that journal. He was sincere in his opinions, and wrote with great precision, but his style was often disfigured by offensive personality. The Univers, after having been thrice warned by the Government, ceased to appear in January, 1860, and was replaced by the Monde, which was written in a more placable spirit. In April, 1867, the Univers was revived, and from that time to the present it has been the leading representative in the press of the advanced section of French Catholics. M. Veuillot has composed novels, polemical pieces, and hymns, and a large collection of articles under the title of "Mélanges Religieux, Historiques, et Littéraires," published in 1857-'59. Perhaps the most brilliant productions of his pen are "Le Parfum de Rome" and "Les Odeurs de Paris," published respectively in 1865 and 1866. A collection of the most striking passages in his works was published in 1868 by the Abbé Charbonnell under the title of "Pensées de M. Louis Veuillot."]

FIRE RECORD.

An Agricultural Warehouse Burned at Peoria—Paper-Mill at Troy, N. Y., Destroyed—Other Fires.

Peoria, Ill., April 7.—[Special.]—The large agricultural-implement warehouse of G. W. Rause & Son, with the three-story building in which it was contained, was destroyed by fire at an early hour this morning. The stock of agricultural implements, valued at $30,000, is an entire loss. The walls of the building are being torn down. The building was worth about $12,000. The insurance on stock is thus divided: Home of New York, $2,500; Springfield of Massachusetts, $2,500; Royal of Liverpool, $4,000; Hartford, $2,500; Imperial, $4,000; Guardian, $2,500; Commercial Union, $2,500; total, $20,500. The building, owned by H. N. Wheeler, was insured for $8,000 in the Orient of Hartford and the North American. The adjoining buildings were damaged to the extent of about $1,500; fully covered by insurance.

Troy, N. Y., April 7.—[Special.]—The Mount Vernon Paper-Mill, a five-story brick structure owned by Orrs & Co., was burned this afternoon. The fire originated among a quantity of tow and other materials in the third story. Volumes of smoke that hung over the city poured from the windows an hour before the blaze burst forth. A raceway in front of the mill prevented the firemen from directing an effective stream on the flames, which threatened another large mill on the north, also owned by Orrs & Co., and one on the south, the property of Manning & Paine. The fire was fortunately confined to the burning building and controlled. The loss on the building is $17,000 and on contents $33,000. There was $15,000 on the building—$2,500 in each of the following companies: Hartford, Phœnix, Phenix of London, Harvard, and Imperial. The stock was also insured for $15,000, divided among the following companies: Ætna, Liverpool London and Globe, Guardian, Long Island, Firemen's, German, American National of New York, and the Union of California. It is supposed a spark from the pipe of an employé caused the fire.

Sioux City, Ia., April 7.—A fire this morning gutted Peavy & Stephens' furniture store. Loss on stock, $15,000; insurance, $10,000. Loss on building, $2,000; insured.

Boston, Mass., April 7.—The losses by the fire in the Hotel Berkeley aggregare $170,000, of which $150,000 were personal property and $20,000 were on the building.

IN CHICAGO.

About 2 o'clock yesterday morning a fire broke out from some unknown cause in the rear on the first floor of the two-story and basement frame building No. 449 West Chicago avenue, owned by Conrad Ubele and occupied by C. L. Lonnefeld as a dry-goods store and dwelling. An alarm was turned in from Box 458, and the fire was extinguished after about $5,000 worth of Mr. Lonnefeld's stock had been ruined and the building damaged to the extent of $1,000. The building is insured for $1,000 in the Phenix of Boston, and Lonnefeld's stock is covered by an insurance of $2,500 in the Fireman's Fund and $2,800 in the Union of California. The police report says that the fire probably started from a defective chimney, but Bullwinkle's report says the cause of the fire "will bear investigation."

At half-past 9 o'clock last night fire was discovered in the area under the sidewalk in front of Col. W. P. Rend's stables, Nos. 268 and 270 West Randolph street, and an alarm turned in from Boxes Nos. 348 the 347. The fire started in some mysterious manner, probably from a lighted cigar-stump carelessly dropped into the hay that is stored under the walk, and in a very short time the large building was filled with a blinding suffocating smoke. Something like one hundred horses are stabled in the lower part of the barn, while a large number of trucks and wagons are crowded upon the main floor. Upon the discovery of the fire the employés were aroused, and a successful attempt made to clear the place of the frightened and snorting horses. All were taken out in safety, and the fire was extinguished without much difficulty. Damage, $100.

At 1:15 o'clock this morning Sergt. Gory, of Pinkerton's night watch, discovered flames on the fourth floor of the five-story building No. 174 East Madison street, and turned in an alarm from Box No. 37. The fire originated from some unknown cause and had smoldered for some time probably before it was discovered. The damage to the building will be about $175. R. H. Sanborn, agent for an Eastern celluloid firm occupied the third and fourth floors, the factory being on the latter floor. The damage to the stock and machinery is estimated at $200. A gents' furnishing goods and jewelry dealer named Tripp occupied a portion of the third floor but was not damaged. There is a full insurance. J. E. G. Scott & Co., neckwear manufacturers, occupy the second floor, but there was no damage to their stock, which was well covered by Bullwinkle's patrolmen. No water beyond that from the chemicals was used, and a serious loss from damage by water averted.

TRADE AND LABOR.

The Master Masons Satisfied that the Bricklayers' Union Will Collapse.

Secret Meeting of the Amalgamated Association of Ironworkers at Pittsburg.

A Determined Strike Among the Erie Railroad Switchmen at Buffalo.

The Master Masons Satisfied that the Bricklayers' Union Will Go to Pieces.

The Master Masons' and Builders' Association held a prolonged session yesterday afternoon at their rooms in Arcade Building, during which the strike of the union bricklayers was fully considered, and plans for future action were adopted. If the strikers or their sympathizers have had an idea that the bosses contemplated yielding to their demands, they can have their minds disabused by a perusal of an advertisement in another column of this issue, which was the result of yesterday's deliberations.

President Tapper occupied the chair at yesterday's meeting and Mr. George C. Prussing acted as Secretary. After the meeting had been called to order Mr. George Fox, from the committee appointed at a previous meeting to ascertain the feeling of the people for whom buildings were being erected on the subject of the strike, reported that the committee had called upon Mr. P. D. Armour, of Armour & Co., Fowler Brothers, Maj. Brockway, President of the Consumers' Gaslight & Coke Company, and Mr. George M. Pullman, all of which gentlemen represent corporations that have extensive buildings under way or in mind, and that each had expressed sympathy for the position held by the bosses, and had stated that they would delay further work on their buildings indefinitly if desired by the association. Other parties had also been seen, and the committee gave it as their idea that the majority of people who were building, or contemplated doing so, would do as those who had been seen had done.

The committee also reported that a large number of union men would resume work on Monday morning for wages ranging from $3 to $3.75 per day. It was then decided that the members of the association should issue cards to such men as thus went back to work, so that in the future they could secure work in preference to others, whether there was a strike or not.

The Secretary mentioned it as a significant fact that when the first meeting was held to consider the strike there were but ninety-two members, and that at the second meeting and that of yesterday nineteen accessions were received.

In the course of the meeting numerous speeches were made and indorsed that would indicate that the association meant business, and would not surrender to the union.

A Tribune reporter encountered a builder soon after the adjournment and asked him if he thought the association would be able to hold out against the strikers. "Certainly," said he, "for we are obliged to hold out. We can't do otherwise. Suppose we submitted to them now, what could we expect in the future? Nothing but trouble growing out of their supposed supremacy. We are disposed to do what is right by the bricklayers, and always have been; but we cannot and will not submit to dictation from them. We have always given them all the wages we could afford, and will continue to do so, but when they attempt to compel us to pay wages to men who cannot earn them we must call a halt. We are going to stop this thing here or else declare our weakness. We have the support of all good people, and especially those who propose building, and we cannot help but succeed. By Monday morning a very large number of members of the union will go to work, and we have made arrangements for their protection. And before the close of the week I would not be surprised to learn that the Bricklayers' Union was disbanded. This is not idle talk. It would only be the natural result of a most foolish move if it did go to pieces. There are men in the union who have too much sense to sanction the action of the body, and the time is not far distant when their voices will be heard. One thing is certain, we are backed by the men who will employ us, and we cannot help but come off victorious. If we had our contracts made and were simply making a fight against the strikers because we were in danger of losing money, the matter would be presented in another light. But we have no contracts made for this year, and our only desire is to resist a gross injustice."

"Then you have no doubt the association will succeed?"

"Certainly not. It can't fail, for the reason that those who have buildings to be erected are in hearty sympathy with us and will wait until we do succeed."

Meeting of the Amalgamated Association.

Pittsburg, Pa., April 7.—[Special.]—This has been a fateful day for the iron trade of the United States. At 10 o'clock this morning thirty-six men representing the Amalgamated Association, which has branches in nearly all the iron-mills of the country, assembled to decide the rate of wages to be demanded for the year beginning June 1. Sixteen of the delegates represented the Pittsburg district. The others were from all parts of the West, and the whole body represented nearly 100,000 men, whose earnings amount to $5,000,000 a month. The action of the manufacturers Wednesday in declaring that there must be a substantial reduction in wages, and the well-known disposition of the workmen of this district to insist on a continuation of present wages at least, and the possibility that an increase might be demanded, caused the greatest interest to be manifested in the meeting, and during the thirteen and a half hours the convention was in session nothing else was talked of on the streets or in the places where men congregate. At noon the first recess was taken.

President Jarrett stated, in answer to inquiries, that business had gone along smoothly, no antagonism had been developed, and up to the time of adjournment there had been no demands for increased wages.

"Then it is safe to say the present scale will be reaffirmed?" asked your correspondent.

"We are not through yet, but I think you may safely state that there will be no demand for change in any particular," was the reply.

This statement was bulletined from the newspaper buildings, but only increased the anxiety of the public to learn the final action.

The delegates reassembled at 2 p. m. and did not leave the hall until nearly midnight. Then it was announced that the convention had adjourned sine die, but that it had been decided to make none of the proceedings public until a conference was had with the manufacturers. A committee has been appointed to meet the manufacturers, but the meeting will not be held for a week or more. Their refusal to state the result of the meeting was a great disappointment to the crowd in waiting. A majority of the persons who are abroad at this hour of the night think the resolution to withhold the action of the convention is an evidence the workmen have not adopted any scale, but have decided to learn first exactly what terms the manufacturers want, and if the reduction is not too great to accept it quietly. This belief is strengthened by a statement just made by President Jarrett that no scale was adopted. On the other hand it is urged that the workmen have resolved to stand out for present wages or an increase, and wish to strengthen their lines as much as possible before making their action public.

Manufacturers state that they are comparatively indifferent concerning the action of the association; that, unless it agrees to accept a substantial reduction the mills will be shut down after the 1st of June. Exactly what the manufacturers want it is learned this evening is that the scale, instead of being based on a two-and-a-half-cent rate for iron, shall be based on a two-cent rate. This will reduce the price of puddling from $5.50 to $5 per ton, and all other classes in the same proportion.

Erie Railroad Switchmen on a Strike.

Buffalo, N. Y., April 7.—[Special.]—About 3 o'clock this afternoon it was reported in the city that there was a strike in progress among the Erie employés at East Buffalo. The trouble, as the employés state, grows out of the action of Charles D. Oyer, lately yardmaster for the Philadelphia Road, but since yesterday assistant yardmaster of the Erie. He has, they claim, announced that he could get plenty of men at greatly-reduced wages, and could get along with two switchmen to an engine instead of three, the present number. They seem to have been aware of his intentions before he left the Philadelphia yard, and have been getting ready for him. He has been for several days looking over the yard, and on his taking charge yesterday and stating his terms the switchmen prepared for their side of the play, and at noon today the whole number of switchmen, about 110, in all, stopped work. This includes the night-men, who are to act in concert with the day-men. At the office the men were told that they could have their pay at once. The delegation, on receiving this defiance, sprang upon the 3:25 train that was just pulling out and returned to the yard at East Buffalo. The Erie Company state tonight that the matter will be settled to the satisfaction of all interested, but just how they do not say. They claim the men are prejudiced against Oyer.

A Chicago Assignment.

Martha Wimmerstedt, doing business under the name of C. W. R. Wimmerstedt, at No. 110 Chicago avenue, made an assignment yesterday to Eugene Skoglund. She had been dealing in clothing, millinery, and notions, and she puts her liabilities at about $6,000, her assets being the goods she had on hand, to which no valuation is fixed in her schedule. Her principal creditors are Meyer, Strauss, Goodman & Co., to whom she owes $2,412; D. B. Fisk & Co., $1,121; Sweet, Dempster & Co., $647; C. Hinchliff, $441; Garson, Meyer & Co., of Rochester, $408; L. Sinsheimer, of New York, $398; and John V. Farwell & Co., $308. The failure appears to be a bad one, and the chances are that the creditors will get very little.

Wage Questions Settled.

Reading, Pa., April 7.—The striking iron-workers accept a reduction of wages. The mills will resume Tuesday.

Philadelphia, Pa., April 7.—The painters accept a compromise rate of $2.75 per day.

TERRIBLE CALAMITY.

A Texas Hotel Caves In, Burying the Inmates in the Ruins, Which Then Take Fire.

Sherman, Tex., April 7.—About 2 o'clock this morning the Ende House, a three-story brick hotel at Greenville, the county seat of Hunt County, fell, burying the inmates between its walls. Fifteen persons are known to have been killed. A few others escaped unhurt. The ruins took fire and many bodies were roasted in the flames. Greenville has no fire-engine, and a dispatch was sent to this city, asking the Fire Department to come to her relief. A fire-engine was sent from there by special train and prevented the spread of the flames. Up to 4:30 this afternoon four bodies had been taken from the ruins, but were charred beyond recognition.

The following business firms were burned out: James Armsted, hardware; K. L. Lenstein, agricultural implements; J. J. Cooper, machinery. Business-houses are all closed.

"PREACHER" BELL'S CASE.

Tarboro, N. C., April 7.—[Special.]—Intelligence was received here today of a terrible affair at Scotland Neck. It seems that a short time since Mrs. Bell died suddenly and was buried by her husband. Suspicions were aroused as to the cause of her death, and parties went to the grave to exhume the remains that an examination might be had. Bell met them at the grave with a shotgun, and threatened to shoot them if they attempted to open the grave. The crowd went off and got reinforcements, returned, took Bell's gun, and dug up the corpse. The neck had been broken. Bell has been arrested and lodged in the county jail. It is said that he killed his wife because she would not sign a deed he told her to sign, and upon her refusal he became so enraged that he assaulted her, with the result above stated. Bell has lived in this section many years and is known as "Preacher" Bell. He was formerly a member of the Primitive Baptist Church, but he has long since ceased to be a member of this church, from which he was expelled for his misconduct.

SENATOR SHERMAN.

HE MAY ENTER THE GUBERNATORIAL RACE IN OHIO.

NEW YORK, April 7.—[Special.]—The talk about Senator Sherman and the Ohio Governorship increases rather than diminishes here. Political leaders of both parties are both discussing the situation in Ohio now, and the action of the two parties next summer will be regarded in the East with no little interest. The result of the recent municipal elections is not regarded among those who have watched affairs in Ohio as throwing any stronger light on the situation than was obtainable before. But Eastern Republicans do not hesitate to express their alarm at anything that looks like hazarding the Electoral vote of Ohio in 1884. It is that fact rather than who is elected to any office in that State this year that has aroused the Republican leaders there to the full appreciation of the condition of affairs there now. A number of these gentlemen, including not only those who favored Senator Sherman's nomination at Chicago three years ago, but many of Mr. Blaine's New York friends as well, have, it is said, taken it upon themselves to urge Mr. Sherman's nomination. The matter has been discussed here among Mr. Sherman's friends in an informal way, but at some length, during the last few days, and an effort has been made to elicit a favorable response from Mr. Sherman on the subject. So far Mr. Sherman is known to have discouraged rather than favored the idea of his being a candidate for any office in Ohio this year, and while in New York a few days ago he did not hesitate to say openly that he thought his nomination would be an exceedingly unwise one. One of Mr. Sherman's personal friends, a Brooklyn politician, said today: "Mr. Sherman's personal preferences ought not to be permitted to overweigh his party's needs. It is a question with us only as to whether Ohio can be saved this year, and whether Mr. Sherman is the man to do it. We who have known Mr. Sherman as Secretary of the Treasury and as United States Senator believe he can, and we want to see Ohio placed in line for the Presidential contest, and we believe Mr. Sherman is the best man for the undertaking."

"But will this not look like placing Mr. Sherman in line for the Presidential contest rather than Ohio?"

"No, I think not. That, at any rate, is not the intention of Mr. Sherman's friends. I think Mr. Sherman got enough of the Presidential fever, and, while they say a man never recovers from that, I think Mr. Sherman has. I was for him at Chicago, but I am not urging him to accept or court this nomination, because I want him nominated in 1884. In fact, I have talked with more so-called Blaine men here than I have Sherman men, and of the two I think the Blaine men are more desirous of seeing Ohio go Republican this fall than anybody. The argument put to Mr. Sherman that, inasmuch as he owes all he is to the Republican party, he ought to be ready to lay aside his office, to leave Washington, and make his home in Columbus, if needed, if by so doing he can render the party any service. Mr. Sherman very naturally does not want to hazard the very small Republican majority in the Senate by resigning; but I think from what I hear from correspondents in Ohio that he could be induced to make the contest if he believes the necessity which is apparent to us does in reality exist."

"If Mr. Sherman," said another gentleman, in conversing on this topic today, "is nominated at all, he will resign his place in the Senate at once, for he is utterly opposed to anything that would look as though he did not mean to serve his full term for the office for which he is nominated. This," he added, "I have from Mr. Sherman himself."

DUST TO DUST.

NEW YORK CITY HONORS THE MEMORY OF PETER COOPER.

NEW YORK, April 7.—There is a general display of flags at half-mast throughout the city in honor of Peter Cooper, whose funeral took place today. The funeral was largely attended. As the hour for the services approached the crowd increased and additional police were sent for. The police had no difficulty in preserving order, for the mass of people was well conducted. All the seats in the church not reserved for the family, friends and delegations were filled at noon, and many secured standing-room in the rear of the church two hours before the services began. Shortly before 3 o'clock the bells began tolling, and the Rev. Dr. Robert Collyer, the Rev. Dr. Howard Crosby, and the Rev. Thomas M. Peters took their places in the pulpit. Mr. Cooper's family entered, and the services began with singing, "I Heard a Voice." The Rev. Mr. Peters read a selection from the Scriptures, and the hymn "I'll Praise My Maker," was sung. The eulogy was pronounced by the Rev. Dr. Collyer, and it was followed by a brief address and a prayer by the Rev. Dr. Crosby. The hymn, "Guide Me, O Thou Great Jehovah," was sung, and the services concluded with the benediction. The remains were taken to Greenwood Cemetery. The bells of the city tolled as the great procession moved to the ferry, where it was dismissed. It seemed as though the population of New York not in the procession had gathered upon the sidewalks. They respectfully uncovered as the body was borne past. Only one carriage, containing the male members of Mr. Cooper's family, accompanied the body to the cemetery, where it was deposited in the vault. The remains will be interred the coming week. Among those present at the services were Gen. Hancock, Whitelaw Reid, William M. Evarts, S. L. M. Barlow, John Jay, Senator John J. Kiernan, Albert Bierstadt, David Dows, the Mayor and Aldermen, and the heads of the different city departments, David Dudley Field, Algernon S. Sullivan, ex-Mayor Grace, and Howard Potter.

A DARING JUMP.

THE JUMPER FAILS TO GET AWAY, HOWEVER.

NEW YORK, April 7.—[Special.]—Bernard Reinach, a collector for the Baur & Betz Brewery Company, who absconded on the 20th of last month with $1,000 of the company's funds and was arrested in Chicago, where he had been negotiating for the purchase of a saloon, arrived in this city this morning in charge of a detective of Pinkerton's agency. When Reinach was arrested he agreed to come on here without requisition papers, and as soon as it was learned that he was in custody an indictment was found against him. One of Pinkerton's detectives left Chicago with his prisoner last Wednesday at 5:40 p. m. Reinach seemed very penitent, and succeeded to a certain extent in winning the sympathy of his custodian. The prisoner behaved in a quiet manner until about 9 p. m. on Thursday night, when the train passed Mount Union, a station on the Pennsylvania Railroad west of Harrisburg. There Reinach obtained permission to go to the closet. The train was an express, and at the time was running at the rate of about forty miles an hour, while the night was very dark and a rain-storm was raging. Although the detective kept a sharp lookout, the prisoner managed to crawl through a window and escaped. He was seen by the detective just as he was disappearing from the window and the train was immediately stopped. No trace of the missing man could be obtained during the night. In the morning the officer got on track of his prisoner, and soon overtook him trudging hatless along the highway. Reinach's face and body were bruised and his clothes torn and dirty. He made no resistance when the detective came upon him, but complained of feeling very sore. He was handcuffed to his captor and brought to this city without further adventure. The prisoner's injuries were not thought to be serious. Mr. Robert Pinkerton says that Reinach's case is the second that has come to his knowledge where a man has jumped from a train running at thirty-five or forty miles and hour without losing his life.

ALLEGED FRAUD.

THE ASSIGNMENT OF A CLOTHING FIRM.

NEW YORK, April 7.—[Special.]—An assignment for the benefit of creditors was made today by Abraham B. and Herman D. Goldstein, composing the firm of Goldstein Brothers, dealers in clothing at No. 183 Eighth avenue, to Marcus Kronfeld. The preferences amount to $7,934.25; of this sum $1,650 is in favor of Mary David of Chicago. An attachment against the property of the assigners by Judge Barrett in the Supreme Court chambers, in a suit in which Messrs. Julius, Edward, and Samuel Hammerslaugh allege that the Goldsteins have for several weeks been engaged in the fraudulent practice of procuring goods on credit, and of sending them to Chicago for sale at auction for much less than their real value. One of the plaintiffs avers that Abraham B. Goldstein confessed the fraud to him, and told him he could take away from the Eighth avenue store goods sufficient to satisfy the claim of his firm. He says that he was about to avail himself of Abraham's permission when Herman Goldstein appeared and told him he could remove no goods from the store unless he used force. The amount claimed by the Messrs. Hammerslaugh to be owed by the Goldstein Brothers is $1,732.

WEST-BOUND FREIGHTS.

THE TRUNK-LINE COMMISSION AND DOMESTIC DRY GOODS.

NEW YORK, April 7.—[Special.]—The Trunk-Line Commission having refused to make the reclassification of domestic dry goods in western-bound freight rates asked for by the dry-goods merchants of the city, the whole matter will now go to the Railroad Commissioners of the State for a hearing. This hearing is brought about upon a petition to that effect from the Chamber of Commerce, the petition being based upon the theory that the existing classification makes an unjust discrimination against a certain class of business. The relief asked for will be the establishment of rates based upon the intrinsic value of the goods shipped; this is, for instance, the placing of a lesser rate upon a $75 case of sheetings than upon a $4,500 case of silks, both of which by the present classification are charged at the same rate, although the risk upon the former is, of course, very much less than upon the latter. In other words, a rating upon a basis of valuation is what is asked for.

ITEMS.

THE STOCKHOLDERS GET LEFT.

NEW YORK, April 7.—[Special.]—An investigation of the affairs of the suspended Manhattan Fire-Insurance Company just completed by an insurance expert establishes beyond question the fact that there is not one cent left for the stockholders. The expert reports that Lewis F. Carman, the former Secretary, and who acted as Cashier for the main part of the time of the company's existence, is a defaulter to the amount of $39,143. He also reports among the liabilities $70,000 due the Phenix Fire-Insurance Company under the reinsurance contract, whereby all the risks of the Manhattan were assumed by the first-named corporation, the total liabilities being $123,864. The total assets aggregate $108,206. But this sum includes $2,719.85 cash appropriated by Carman and others and $9,794.22 "uncollected premiums supposed to be good." Deducting these amounts, the gross assets figure $95,746.04, or $28,118.18 less than the total liabilities.

MR. BENNETT AND THE MANDEVILLES.

It is announced that Lord and Lady Mandeville will occupy Mr. James Gordon Bennett's residence at Newport this season, and the announcement has created something of a breeze in fashionable society. Mr. Bennett and Lord Mandeville have been intimate friends ever since 1874, and there used to be a story that Mr. Bennett once befriended his Lordship when he was placed where he could most appreciate friendship.

DIED OF GRIEF.

Patrick Taafe, a bachelor, who has been employed in Peter Cooper's glue-factory, Hunter's Point, and who lived in Bushwick avenue, Brooklyn, with his sister, went to his home and died of grief after hearing of his employer's death.

PERSONAL.

Among the departures for Europe in next Wednesday's Cunarder will be Miss Catherine L. Wolfe, who is often called the American Baroness Burdette-Coutts, not only on account of her great wealth, but because of her charities as well. Miss Wolfe will travel with a party until September, when she will return to Newport, where she is having built a villa worth $250,000.

ERASTUS BROOKS.

It was rumored in New York tonight that Erastus Brooks was dead. On inquiry at his home at New Brighton, Staten Island, it was learned that he was ill, but that his condition was not dangerous. He has been working hard at Albany this winter, and was feeling so badly that he left on Thursday and went home for rest.

CUSHION-CARROMS VS. BALK-LINE.

The managers of the billiard tournament in this city which is to follow the one at Chicago today decided to change the style of play from the proposed champion game to that of cushion-carroms. They considered that this would give the players more of an equal chance than the balk-line game, in which handicapping would have to be resorted to in order to place the contestants on anything like an even footing.

A SWELL WEDDING.

The marriage of Miss Edith Fish and Mr. Oliver H. Northcote, son of Stafford Northcote, will take place, it is said, in the month of June at Mr. Fish's country seat at Garrison's on the Hudson.

NOTHING DEFINIT AS YET.

NEW YORK, April 7.—Secretary Samuel Wilkerson, of the Northern Pacific Railroad, was seen tonight in regard to the truth of the report that the Northern Pacific Road had leased the Wisconsin Central Railroad. Mr. Wilkerson said that, although negotiations have been in progress with such an object in view, no decided action whatever had as yet taken place.

NEARING THE END.

Summing Up in the McLean-Scripps Case at Detroit.

DETROIT, Mich., April 7.—[Special.]—Otto Kirchner opened the tenth day of the trial of the MacLean-Scripps libel suit today with an elaborate and well-sustained argument for the plaintiff. He spoke all the forenoon, court taking a recess at 12:30 until 2 p. m., when Judge Marston began his argument for the defense. This is the first appearance of the Judge as a trial lawyer since he resigned from the Supreme Court bench a few weeks ago, and to the interest naturally felt in the progress of the trial was an added curiosity to hear him before a jury. He spoke for two hours and a quarter, his argument traversing the whole groundwork of the case, and being an especially plausible and clever plea for the defense. On Monday morning Col. John Atkinson will close the case for the defense, and will be followed by Levi T. Griffin for the plaintiff in the afternoon. Nobody expects a verdict much before Tuesday afternoon, as the jury will not be charged until the morning of that day. The court-room has been crowded heretofore, but it was packed today, and the interest increases as the case approaches nearer and nearer its end.

DETROIT, Mich., April 7.—[Special.]—In yesterday's report of the Detroit libel suit the statement is made that Dr. MacLean testified he was the author of the Brenton letter. It should have read: He testified that he was not the author, and upon this very point rests his whole case. His testimony in denial of its authorship was very positive.

STEAMER AGROUND.

PORTLAND, Me., April 7.—The steamer Brooklyn ran ashore on Hog Island last night. The passengers were taken off. She is badly aground and full of water. All the cargo must be discharged, a hole in the bow patched, and the vessel pumped out before she can be moved. The cargo, valued at $171,000, consisted of 235 sheep, 423 cattle, 40,700 bushels wheat, 8,000 bushels peas, 270 bags oatmeal, 1,140 barrels apples, 44 cases leather, 44 cases spools, 5,200 bags flour, 170 tierces pork, 155 boxes bacon, 580 cases canned meats, 1,200 quarters fresh beef, and 10 packages sundries. The vessel and cargo are insured.

LATER—The remaining live stock from the steamer Brooklyn has arrived here.

JAY GOULD'S YACHT.

Launched Yesterday, and Christened by Miss Nellie Gould "Atalanta."

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., April 7.—A special train from New York arrived at Cramp's shipyard at 12:25 this afternoon to witness the launch of Gould's steam-yacht Atalanta. Among those on board the train were Mr. and Mrs. Gould, Misses Nellie and Annie Gould, George Gould, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Hoffman, R. L. Baldwin, Cyrus W. Field Jr., Miss Annie Hendricks, E. S. Jeffrey, Howard Jeffrey, William H. Bingham, John T. Terry, and E. O. Harris. The yacht was successfully launched at 1:12 p. m. The vessel was christened by Miss Nellie Gould in the usual way.

Notwithstanding a heavy, damp atmosphere, a large crowd witnessed the launch. In addition to the party from New York, there were many prominent Philadelphians present. It was expected that Gen. Grant and Gen. Diaz would be present, but they were absent, owing to the delay of their train. Only workmen were permitted on board the craft, the launch being witnessed from the spacious platform constructed around the yacht, from which floated the Stars and Stripes. The owner of the yacht and the party occupied a position on the platform at the bow of the vessel. Shortly after 1 o'clock a long file of workmen, arranged along either side of the keel of the Atalanta, began driving in wedges, preparatory to cutting away the last fastening which held her on the ways. The vessel did not move at once upon the removal of the fastening, and a murmur of disappointment went through the crowd, but a few minutes later she glided smoothly and gracefully into the Delaware amidst cheers from the assembled multitude and the whistles of the boats in the river. As her bow left the ways Miss Nellie Gould christened her Atalanta by breaking the traditional bottle of wine. The launch was a complete success, and Gould was warmly congratulated. After luncheon at the office of the builders, Gould and party returned to New York by special train.

Competent judges say Gould's new yacht is a most perfect and complete specimen of steam craft in construction. As to seaworthiness she is considered superior to Bennett's Namouna. Upon her deck her length is 225 feet, and on the water-line 218 feet. The yacht is fitted up in most magnificent style, the cabins being finished with all that art can suggest for comfort and convenience. The whole ship's company to be provided for are as follows: One Captain, two mates, four quartermasters, two boatswains, eighteen seamen, one chief engineer, two assistant engineers, three oilers, six firemen, three coal-passers, one steward, three cooks, and six servants. Besides her engine propelling power, the Atalanta will be able to spread as much canvas as a three-masted schooner. Her standing rigging will consist of the best of charcoal wire, and canvas specially made will whiten her masts. She will be propelled by a compound inverted direct-acting surface-condensing engine with two cylinders, one of thirty and one of sixty inches in diameter, with thirty inches stroke of piston. The engine is fitted with steam reversing gear, patented by Cramps, by means of which it can be immediately reversed from full speed ahead to full speed astern. The Atalanta will be ready for service by the middle of May, and will cost her owner $250,000.

THE WEATHER.

Enormous Fall of Rain at New Orleans—Danger of Inundation.

NEW ORLEANS, La., April 7.—[Special.]—A violent thunder-storm, accompanied by a gale of wind and tremendous rain and hail, raged from an early hour this morning till late in the forenoon, and with slight intermission the rest of the day and evening. A total rainfall of six inches is recorded. The river in front of the city rose four inches and is still rising, having passed the high-water mark of 1874, the highest point ever known. About 7 o'clock a break occurred in the levee of the right bank just below the Gouldsboro Depot of the Texas & Pacific Railroad Company, nearly opposit the head of Thalia street. This opening was rapidly widened, and in an hour or so became a crevasse seventy-five feet wide and from three to seven feet deep. This crevasse will inundate to a considerable extent both Algiers and Gretna and wash the tracks of the Texas & Pacific and Morgan Railroads. It occurred just above the boundary line between the Parishes of Orleans and Jefferson, on the right bank and in the concave of the bend which the river makes in sweeping around Algiers Point. It is evident that the unruly stream has a strong desire to cut through the point and leave Algiers on an island. Gangs of railroad laborers and city employés were thrown upon the work as soon as the alarm was given, and, by driving bulkheads and stowing sandbags, before night the break was under control, and it will probably be mended today. The side of Algiers nearest the crevasse is under a foot of water. The are several other points between the crevasse and the Algiers point where more dangerous breaks are threatened. At half a dozen of the points on this front of the city proper the water is running over the levees into the streets, notably at Stann street, French Market, Montegut street, in the Third District, South Rapurn street in the Fourth District, and several points in the Sixth. Great fears are apprehended of a cave at Carrollton, which if it occurs now will place the entire city several feet under water immediately. A watchful eye is being kept on the entire front, and Street-Commissioner Fitzpatrick has disposed his forces to the best advantage so as to rally his men in such localities as the emergency demanded. In the rear of the city the streets were flooded and the canals brim full. A break in the bank of the Carondelet Canal near Clairborne street was apprehended at one time, and 3,000 sacks ordered to be kept in readiness in case they should be required. The rise in the canals is due to the rain, and no great danger is to be feared from the rear. It is the front of the city that bears the brunt of the attack. This high water and the higher water coming, and the disasters that are impending are the first fruits of the engineering sagacity which dictated the closure of the Bonnet Carre crevasse, which was for many years the safety-valve of the city, carrying off the surplus waters of the river into Lake Pontchartrain and the Gulf of Mexico. Judging by the volume of water still pouring down upon us from the West there is no reason why the streets of New Orleans will not be all under water in another week, the natural overflowing of the banks. The situation thus far is the gloomy side, which is not illumined by the fact just announced by Gov. McEnery that the State, with characteristic imbecility, or worse, could make no further expenditure from the levee fund for the protection of the people.

Other Storms.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., April 7.—[Special.]—During a thunder-storm today at Jasper, Tenn., Tobias Netherland was killed by lightning and Postmaster Rankin severely shocked. Two horses were killed instantly and several other persons severely shocked. Netherland's flesh was opened to the bone from the point of the shoulder down to the end of the right foot. The greatest excitement prevails, as all of the victims are prominent citizens.

SHREVEPORT, La., April 7.—The heavy rain of yesterday was general throughout this section. Streams are all out of their banks, and roads are almost impassable. Telegrams from Fulton and other points on the Upper Red River report heavy rains. The indications are that the coming rise will exceed the one just passed, and which submerged many plantations. Those who have finished planting are alarmed at the outlook.

LATTER-DAY SAINTS.

Second Day's Conference of Monogamous Mormons at Kirtland, O.—Delegations Present from a Large Number of States.

KIRTLAND, O., April 7.—Today was the second of the conference of Latter-Day Saints. Permanent organization was accomplished at the afternoon session, as follows: President, Joseph Smith Jr.; Vice-President, R. M. Elvan; Secretary, Heman C. Smith. The Committee on Credentials reported delegates present from the following districts: Pittsburg, Northern Illinois, Iowa (Little Sioux district), Southeastern Illinois, Michigan, Northern Indiana (Decatur district), Illinois (Kewanee district), Massachusetts, Florida, Missouri (St. Louis district), London, Canada, Northern Nebraska, Western Iowa (Pottawattomie district), Iowa (Tremont district), Western Missouri, Illinois (Nauvoo district), Northern Illinois (Chicago branch church), Idaho, Nevada, Central Texas, Kansas, Georgia. Counselor W. W. Blair reported the program of working in the Far West, and said in the Nevada district there were large numbers of Utah Mormons and but a few Latter-Day Saints. In Idaho he said there were 10,000 Utah Mormons and several small branches of the reorganized church. The financial condition of these branches was excellent and the missions self-sustaining. Reports were read giving the condition of affairs of the church in various localities East and West. Elders Joseph Love and H. N. Hanson, of Utah, made a report of the progress of the work in the Territory. These missionaries have been working the heart of the polygamists' camp and converting many to the Latter-Day faith. The afternoon services were closed by the President reading a lengthy memorial presented to Secretary Frelinghuysen some months ago and asking that distinction be made by the Government between the Utah Mormons and the reorganized church. Tomorrow's services will consist of preaching only, by Joseph Smith, Elder W. W. Blair, Elder Gurley, and others.

TRUMAN YOUNGLOVE JR.

"A Perfect Gentleman," but a Forger All the Same.

ALBANY, N. Y., April 7.—[Special.]—Last week Truman Younglove Jr., Secretary and Treasurer of the Cohoes Straw-Board Company of Cohoes, disappeared, and his continued absence gave rise to ugly rumors, some of which have proven true. An investigation of his accounts showed that he had forged the indorsement of his father-in-law, Nicholas Clute, to a note for $15,000, and had negotiated other forged paper to the amount of about $9,000. The affairs of the company were almost entirely under his control, and it is thought he also appropriated all the ready funds he could obtain for his use. It is reported that the books have not been fully written up since Jan. 1, so that an examination will not reveal the extent of his embezzlement. Younglove, who is about 24 years old, is connected with some of the leading families of Cohoes, and has always been most highly respected. His wife is the daughter of Nicholas Clute, a Director of the Manufacturers' Bank of Cohoes, and a man worth about $150,000. Younglove was not dissipated or extravagant, and was not suspected of having any bad habits. It is rumored, however, that he speculated in stocks. Suffering heavy losses of over $30,000 led to his ruin. His friends and relatives are attempting to settle the matter and have agreed to make good the losses to the banks. The forged paper is held by the Saratoga County Bank of Waterford and the National Bank of Cohoes.

CREWS ACQUITTED.

The Verdict of "Not Guilty" Meets with Hearty Approval.

BELLEVILLE, Ill., April 7.—[Special.]—The trial of the Hon. Seth F. Crews on an indictment charging him with obtaining $3,000 from Edward Abend, a banker of this city, by means of the confidence game, has just been concluded in the County Court, and has resulted in the complete vindication of the distinguished defendant. The evidence for the prosecution developed a weak case from the start, and when the witnesses for the defense were introduced the claims of the prosecution that the value of the securities purchased by Mr. Abend had been misrepresented were completely refuted, it being shown by a number of witnesses that he had been fully and explicitly advised of the prior incumbrance on the land. When the verdict of "Not guilty" was returned, the jury being out but a short time, it was received with demonstrations of approval on the part of the spectators. Maj. Orendorff, of Springfield; C. H. Patton, of Mt. Vernon, and Messrs. J. M. Dill and R. S. Wilderman, of this city, conducted the defense. Capt. R. H. Halbert assisted the prosecution.

ART AND ARTISTS.

The Bohemian Club Exhibition of Sketches and Paintings.

A Very Creditable Showing by a Society of Amateurs—Art Notes and Gossip.

The chief event of the week in art circles has been of course the reception given by the Bohemian Club Tuesday evening on the occasion of the formal opening of their collection of paintings and sketches at the Art Institute. The club being partly composed of young lady amateurs in art, it would not be fair, and certainly not gallant, to apply to their works severe canons of criticism, but this at least may be honorably said: that even thus judged a considerable proportion of the exhibits deserve more than the conventional "honorable mention." To him who believes in the rich possibilities of Chicago; in its rapidly-growing importance as a great centre, not of commerce only, but of letters, and culture, and art, the existence and rapid development in our midst of such societies as the Bohemian Club, against which the only charge one can bring is the curious inappropriateness of its name, are full of encouragement, interest, and promise. As to the present collection it is replete with specimens of conscientious workmanship, not unenlivened by works deserving of higher praise—works not only marked by much originality and power, but suggestive of the possession on the part of their authors of that rare and indefinable faculty which we call genius. Within the limits assigned these notes it would be impossible to particularize at great length, and only those pictures that happened to attract the visitor's attention are noticed.

Among the exhibitors one of the most prominent is Miss Marie Koupal, who is represented by nine oil colors and ten charcoal sketches. Beginning with a general criticism of her work, it may be said that its chief virtues are marked originality of conception, boldness of treatment, brilliancy of drawing, and poetic suggestiveness of idea and expression. Knowing nothing of Miss Koupal, and judging entirely by her work in the Bohemian Club collection, it would be no rash prediction to say that she ought to have a brilliant future.

Coming down to particulars, one of her contributions entitled "Dreaming of the Future" may be accepted as a fair illustration of this general criticism. A bare-armed, olive-complexioned beauty, her luxuriant dark hair chapleted with flowers, dressed in loose robe of yellowish white, is seated sideways on a crimson-covered seat, her fine side face in the shadow, from out of which her honest, brilliant, dark eyes stare thoughtfully, dreamily, wistfully into space. Though so young, she is a mother, and, judging from her own expression and that of her two little ones, her castles in the air are more of a serious than a painful nature, and are not the result of domestic infelicity. A young girl with the easy carelessness of love, and that fine negligence that suggests affection, leans on her lap in a loose gown of light blue, gazing down upon her fair-haired, barelegged brother who is seated on a cushion at his mother's foot, watching the beads slip one by one down a string which he holds up in his left hand. The painting is infused with a fine poetic feeling, suggestive of those thoughts that lie too deep for tears of which Wordsworth sings, and perhaps the first thought suggested to the observer is, What is she dreaming about? And in the impossibility of answering the question lies one of the chief charms of all highest art, be it poetry, painting, or sculpture—suggestiveness. If inclined to be severe, the critic might possibly object to portions of the drawing, the limbs of the boy, for instance, being somewhat unpoetically scraggy and lean. The coloring is particularly rich and mellow.

No. 19, by the same artist, and entitled "Simply a Letter," is similar in character and texture. It has the merit of telling its own story at first sight, and if there is nothing particularly original or fresh in the conception, the splendor of the color, the correctness of the drawing, and the poetic delicacy of the expression might well atone for greater defects. The picture is that of a black-haired beauty, of somewhat dusky complexion, full face, and Spanish type of feature, who sits sideways, as usual with Miss Koupal's heroines, to the audience, dreaming of a letter which lies in her lap and has evidently proved rich in association and memories. And here again one notes the suggestiveness of the expression, it being hard to guess from her dreamy eyes and thoughtful face, the nature of the thoughts that soften the usual brilliancy of her eye and have called up the least little delicate flush to her cheek.

The third specimen of Miss Koupal's genius is an attempt to illustrate Mr. Tennyson's "Mermaids," although, surely by a mistake, it is suggested in the catalog as being from his "Idyls of the King." There are sirens enough and to spare in these idyls, but no mermaids, which is the title of a stupid and puerile little piece of rococo and affection in one of the earliest of the Laureate's publications, and one, moreover, which his natural good taste led him subsequently to excise. Of Miss Koupal's illustration the best that can be said is that it is too good for the "poem," though, like it, meretricious in treatment and puerily conventional in conception. A number of naked women, who are neither women nor girls, their faces suggesting the latter and their busts the former, are depicted disporting themselves in a particularly dark-green sea, the darkness of which is relieved by a Turneresque streak of brilliant crimson against the horizon. The grouping is admirable, the general effect bold, and the coloring, as usual, mellow and rich; but the subject is unworthy of the artist's powers.

Mrs. Mary A. Wright sends several specimens, almost all of which are inspired by the characteristically American fondness for the sombre splendors of the dying year. In days gone by, when life was fresher and science had not robbed Nature of half her gladness and beauty, the early artists and poets loved to revel in the spring, and with Dan Chaucer walk ankle-deep amid the dew-wet daisies on an April morn. In early poetry and art there is a dædal spontaneity and freshness a general joyousness in birth, and greenness, and freshness, that we miss in the works of a later civilization, and, while Tennyson devotes his noblest poem to departed worth, Poe, among our own poets, sings of the "sere October," and Bryant reaches the high-water mark of his genius in "Thanatopsis." And so Mrs. Wright seems never so much at home as when surrounded by the russeate splendors of the fall and the rustle of leaves, dying and dead. "October" and "When the Leaves Turn Gold" are the titles she loves, and with an exquisitly faithful and loving hand does she portray the thoughtful attractiveness of autumn. In the management of foliage and trees she is particularly happy, and her paintings are full of broad effects and a sort of Carlylean effrontery of treatment that if not restrained within due limits might degenerate into mannerism.

Miss Annie C. Shaw contributes six oil-paintings and one water-color, all marked by fidelity to Nature, boldness of treatment, daring of coloring, and an unconventionality as delightful as it is rare. Her works come upon one with the surprised delightsomeness of a July shower or violets in December, and no one with a true feeling for Nature can study No. 55—"An August Afternoon"—without acknowledging the combined vigor, breadth, and truthfulness of the composition. Miss Shaw is no photographer; she deals only in those broad results and artistic generalizations which are truer and more suggestive than any of the photograph style of picture. Her "August Afternoon" represents merely a few trees against a whitish sky, with a strip of meadow in front, but so effective are the contrasts, so powerful the treatment, as to make the observer oblivious to the absence of what in a less vigorous work might cause lack of human interest.

There remain many pictures that call for kindly notice, but room can be made for five only, and these, like the others, selected with that random that ought to leave unnoticed artists no ground for suspecting favoritism. In No. 92 we have a charming little sketch of water, field, and sky, by Miss Tripp, entitled "Sketch in Oakfield, Wis.," in which, in an unpretentious way, some admirable effects are obtained from simple materials. The sky is capital in feeling and the contrast of wood and sky nicely rendered. In No. 34 we have "In the Lowlands," by Mrs. Pullman, an exceedingly vigorous work, in which the skill of the artist has effectually triumphed over the generally uninviting nature of the scene, and snatched an interest from a few simple effects that denote talent of a high order.

No. 35, by Miss Stella L. Platt, gives us under the title of "Twilight" a very pleasing picture of still life, water, wood, and sky, full of repose and truth, and Miss Tripp, in her modest little "Mill Pond," catches the true Wordsworthian feeling, and expresses it with delicacy and grace. A picture specially deserving notice is Mrs. Pullman's "Through the Woods." No. 75—one of the most faithful transcripts of woodland life that has been exhibited for a long time, while Mrs. Mary A. Wright's "A Gray Day," No. 98, is an exquisit picture, in water colors, of still life. The subdued feeling and quiet harmony of the tints are admirable, and the slender trees on either bank of the stream nicely limned against the sky.

Notes.

The Detroit Sketching Club has given up the female model in its life class "in deference to public opinion."

Onslow Ford, the English sculptor, has completed in clay a life-size figure of Mr. Irving, seated, in the Danish dress which he wears during the soliloquy in "Hamlet."

Rough on rising talent: Brown—"Don't think you are doing as well as you were last year, old man." Robinson—"But I was not painting at all last year." Brown—"Exactly so! That is just it!"

A much-felt want is to be somewhat relieved in Boston, where a building is erected on Hamilton place, to contain a number of studios, and the University Building is to be converted into a studio building.

The sixth annual exhibition of the Society of American Artists at Kurtz Gallery, New York, has been generally damned with faint praise, as showing a distinct falling off from the standard set last week and the year before.

On the 28th ult., was celebrated at Urbino, Italy, the 400th anniversary of the birth of Raphael, who was born on the 28th of March, 1483, and died on the 28th of March, 1520—both birthday and deathday falling upon Good Friday.

She had just visited the studio of an artist famous for painting interiors, and she was going into raptures over his work. "Then you think him a great painter?" "Delightful! So much feeling. Such good color. His insides are just too charming for anything."

Among the paintings on exhibition at the Art Institute one by Mrs. Alice C. Walker, entitled "Picture of a Little Girl," attracts favorable attention. The subject was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Franklin MacVeagh, who died a year ago, and the portrait was loaned by them to the institute.

Says the New York Tribune: "Cottier, on Fifth avenue, has a Millet, the 'Sower of Seed,' for which the price is $30,000; he has a Corot, the subject probably a Sappho, for which the price is the same; and a Doré, with four fine heads in it, life-size, representing the 'Mocking of Christ,' and cost only £150. Such is fashion."

Apropos of the Bohemian Art Club, so great public interest has been shown in the collection, that the Directors, yielding to the solicitations of many friends, have decided to continue their exhibition beyond the 10th inst. and keep it open until Saturday the 14th. Another evening reception also will be given on Tuesday, the 10th, at 8 o'clock.

Readers of THE TRIBUNE need hardly be reminded that the Illinois Art Association opens in this city on the 25th, one day after that fixed for the opening of the San Francisco Art Association. As, by the way, the exhibition of the Bohemian Club collection closes on the evening of the 10th, those who wish to inspect it should lose no time in paying it a visit.

The proposed exhibition of American water-colors in London is rapidly assuming definit shape. Towards the end of next week or beginning of the following an English gentleman now in New York (Mr. Stanley Philpot) will return to London, taking with him a collection of pictures for exhibition at one of the West End (London) galleries. Works must be sent to Mr. Philpot not later than April 14.

Mr. William C. Stevens and Mr. Charles F. Haseltine have issued cards of invitation for the opening reception of the Stevens Art Gallery, 22 and 24 Adams street, to come off tomorrow evening, April 9. The paintings will represent De Neuville, Détaille, Diaz, Corot, Jacque, Gérôme, Daubigny, Van Marcke, Palmaroli, Gustav Doré, Boldini, Gallart, Goubre, Ziem, Rico, Edward Frere, Fortuny, Rosa Bonheur, Meissonier, and others.

The latest journalistic venture in art is a large, eight-paged monthly entitled "The Art Age," published by Arthur B. Turnure, New York, at the reasonably low rate of $1 a year. One new feature in this department of journalism is the first person style of criticism, though whether it will prove a success in the refined realms of art time only can show. The paper is very handsomely printed and admirably edited.

Recent Paris prices are: Rousseau, "Road in the Forest of Fontainebleau," 20,500 francs; Delacroix, "Calvary," 19,000 francs; Daubigny, "The Grass-Burners," 12,000 francs, and "The Banks of the Oise," 10,300 francs; Diaz, "Women at the Bath," 15,000 francs; Corot, "The Road to Coubron," 6,300 francs; Fortuny, "Return of the Procession to Madrid," 8,200 francs; Isabey, "The Alchemist," 9,505 francs; and Troyon, "The Woodcutters," 8,055 francs.

A Washington letter says: "The Capitol is fearfully littered up, and three of the vast expanses of paint and canvas known as Trumbull's historical pictures are being restored. The intense light coming from the dome would ruin any pictures, and it has alternately scorched and bleached them until not only are the colors destroyed, but there are great cracks in the canvas. A local artist is doing the work, and it will probably not be finished until September."

The bas-relief executed by Miss Edmonia Lewis (colored) for the colored Chapel of St. Mary the Virgin, in Baltimore, was unveiled March 26, in the presence of a large congregation. It represents the adoration by the three wise men of the Infant Jesus. The central figure is the Virgin Mary holding the Infant in her arms and gazing upon Him with smiling fondness. Of the three Kings or wise men the Ethiopian King is kneeling in the foreground and reverentially presenting the Infant with gifts. The other Kings are in the background, but are clearly outlined.

It is said that the gigantic statue of Germania to be placed at Niederwald, near the Rhine, is to contain forty-five tons of metal. The blade of the sword alone weighs one ton. On the tip of one of the fingers of the left hand of the figure is the imperial crown of Germany, and the body is clad in chain-armor. A figure of the Moselle is to stand opposit; another, representing the Rhine, at the foot of the statue; and each of these will be eighty feet high. Different portions of this bronze Colossus and its attendant groups are being cast in Berlin, Dresden, Nuremberg, and other places.

Alma Tadema will be represented at the British Royal Academy this year by only two works, and those not of large size. One of these is a Roman girl, with hair flowing over her shoulders, selling figurines at the doors of a temple; in the background a sacred procession is passing. The other contribution will probably be a full-length portrait of the painter's younger daughter, holding a bowl of white peonies in her hand, and standing in a dark dress against one of the elaborately-decorated doors of her father's house. Alma Tadema is also painting, for an exhibition of pictures of children to be held shortly by the London Fine Art Society, a "Venus and Mars"—an infant Venus of 4 years old, carrying a doll in ancient Greek armor, by the shore of the sea.

The Society of American Artists is holding its sixth annual exhibition in New York. The two pictures that attract the most attention are John H. Sargent's "Portrait of a Lady" and T. W. Dewing's "The Prelude." The National Academy of Design is holding its fifty-eighth annual exhibition in the same city. Fourteen hundred pictures were sent in, and 746 have been hung. The New York Sun says: "It is not worth while to give up space to the acres of spoiled canvas at the Academy of Design;" and states that the best picture in the show is one by Frank D. Millet—a quintet of pretty girls ranged on a sofa in a variety of charming attitudes, one of the girls reading to the others the story of Ænone. The New York Herald says: "During the invitation day-view and evening reception of Saturday forty-six works were sold for a total, according to catalog-prices, of $14,585. Last year the amount for exactly the same number of pictures was $13,835. In 1881 seventeen works sold for $3,700. While the financial promise is so good, it seems a pity that the exhibition shows so little evidence of the rapid strides which are being made in American art year by year. These are to be noted yearly at the small displays made by the Society of American Artists. However, even there, though the system of selection of works looks very fine on paper, the result is not an exhibition of the best works that can be produced by American artists. While it is safe to say that fully half the works at the Academy are not worth showing, it is also true that the jury of the society rejected works which might, with great advantage, have taken the place of some of those on the walls. However, the society sometimes discovers a new man; while the academy rarely does, and is apt to sit upon him until he reverses the operation."

SINGULAR RAILROAD ACCIDENT.

ST. LOUIS, April 7.—About 8 this evening, as the Southern express train of the Iron Mountain Railroad was turning the curve from the levee into Poplar street, en route to the depot, the engine left the track and plunged into the three-story brick building, 123 and 125 Poplar street, breaking a big hole in its front. The coupling between the tender and the engine broke, and the latter shot off in the opposit direction, and tore down the entire front of No. 120 on the south side of the street. Both buildings were dwelling-houses, but none of the inmates were injured. None of the cars left the track, and no damage was done except to the buildings and engine, the latter of which was stripped of all its outer works.

THE EMIGRATION WAVE.

How It Is Sweeping to the Other Side of the Rockies.

ST. PAUL, Minn., April 7.—[Special.]—The tide of immigration to the Northwest has set in at least a month earlier than in former years, and thus far has surpassed anything ever known. All roads to the Northwest are taxed to their utmost capacity, and the freight-yards and side-tracks are filled with cars of immigrants and movables en route to Minnesota, Dakota, and Manitoba. Arriving and departing trains are taxed to their utmost to supply the demand for accommodations, and the resources of roads centering at St. Paul are daily drawn upon to their farthest limit. In conversation with railroad men on the subject they express themselves as surprised at the daily accessions made to the city's floating population. Nothing like it was ever before seen. At present it is thought that not less than 10,000 passengers are received here per week and forwarded to Northwestern points by way of the Northern Pacific and Manitoba lines. The traffic over these roads the last week has been so unexpectedly large that at times it was found absolutely impossible to procure the complition of rolling-stock necessary to their transportation. The classes who come hither as the starting point for explorations further west are composed of settlers, as distinguished from immigrants, emigrants, or those from across the sea, prospectors and tourists. Heretofore the first-named have not made their appearance in St. Paul prior to about the middle of the present month, and hailed generally from points east of the Alleghenies. This season presents an exception to the rule, both as to time of arrival, whence coming, and composition. The first appeared here a month ago, and represented constituencies distributed at all points of the National compass, from Maine to Virginia and from Pennsylvania to Utah, not to mention the thousand and one distinguished subjects of her Majesty who have passed through here from Canada to Manitoba. Already invoices of this class of citizens have been received here and shipped to the Territories. The largest proportion of them incline to settlement in Dakota, where they engage in agricultural pursuits. They are mostly young and middle-aged men with families, and present that thrifty appearance indigenous to representatives from the fatherland. Advices from abroad to the Northern Pacific and Manitoba emigrant agencies here indicate that the number will be unprecedentedly large, not less than 5,000 a week or 60,000 during the season will arrive at and depart from St. Paul to their new homes on the hither side of the Rockies and beyond. These emigrants say that those familiar with the facts are represented to come from the best classes, and include those who will, by their brawn and financial resources, develop and build up the latent wealth of the country. Railway officials incline to the opinion that the number of tourists who will visit this city and vicinity this season will reach 10,000, and it is believed 125,000 people will pass this point en route to find homes in the Northwest.

KNOCKED DOWN TWENTY-ONE TIMES.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., April 7.—A prize-fight occurred this morning near Nanticoke between Tom Slavin and Mike Cavanaugh. The fight was a long and bloody one. There were twenty-two rounds. Slavin was knocked down twenty-one times. Cavanaugh was the winner. Both men were terribly disfigured.

THE Admiration OF THE WORLD: Mrs. S. A. Allen's WORLD'S Hair Restorer IS PERFECTION!

Public Benefactress. Mrs. S. A. ALLEN has justly earned this title, and thousands are this day rejoicing over a fine head of hair produced by her unequaled preparation for restoring, invigorating, and beautifying the Hair. Her World's Hair Restorer quickly cleanses the scalp, removing Dandruff, and arrests the fall; the hair, if gray, is changed to its natural color, giving it the same vitality and luxurious quantity as in youth.

COMPLIMENTARY. "My hair is now restored to its youthful color; I have not a gray hair left. I am satisfied that the preparation is not a dye, but acts on the secretions. My hair ceases to fall, which is certainly an advantage to me, who was in danger of becoming bald." This is the testimony of all who use Mrs. S. A. ALLEN'S WORLD'S HAIR RESTORER.

"One Bottle did it." That is the expression of many who have had their gray hair restored to its natural color, and their bald spot covered with hair, after using one bottle of MRS. S. A. ALLEN'S WORLD'S HAIR RESTORER. It is not a dye.

THE VANDERBILTS.

Gossip by "Gath" About the Richest Family in America.

Charcoal Sketches of Its Principal Members by Blood and by Marriage.

NEW YORK, April 4.—[Dispatch to Cincinnati Enquirer.]—Since the Vanderbilt party new interest has been awakened in this wealthy family. On this occasion I dismiss the interview form and give some rumors in the first person.

WILLIAM H. VANDERBILT,

according to my advices, is only 62 years old. He has to a large extent given up active interest in railroads and other property. He made a large investment in Government bonds in order not to have his mellow years harassed with business. Not exactly a hypochondriac, he is so much delighted with this life and his large revenue in it that he gives much of his time up to doctors, and annoys his friends by his sensitiveness about his health. With the health of a bull he has the nerves of a woman. For some time past he has had the movement cure, or the rubbing cure, whatever it may be called, involving somebody to come and scrub his muscles over and delude him with the idea that friction is health. He is also a victim of the homeopathic people, and bothers his friends by taking out of his pocket papers of No. 1, No. 3, and No. 9 and swallowing them in the midst of his ordinary social demonstrations.

He is so far free from railroad occupations now that he does not go more than twice in one month to the New York Central Railroad Station. Indeed, he is out of New York Central stock. He recently said that he and his family altogether had not over 100,000 shares of Central. I am told that his son George, who is just about coming to be 21 years old, possesses 20,000 shares of this stock, left him by his grandfather. Therefore Mr. Vanderbilt has not over 80,000 shares of New York Central. This at par would be only $8,000,000. So we may say that he has but $9,000,000 at present in New York Central stock. I have inquired what has been done with the money he obtained by selling out his New York Central. Some say that he bought his long line of Government bonds with it. Others say that he possesses long lines of stock in the Granger railroads, in the Mexican railroads, etc.

From what I hear, William H. Vanderbilt and his grown-up sons do not always look through the same glasses. William's father left the boys large sums of money, in general; 20,000 shares apiece. This has brought them for several years past an annual income of $160,000. But to Cornelius Vanderbilt, the old Commodore's eldest grandson, he left 60,000 shares, giving him an income of almost $500,000 a year. These incomes, being independent of their father, the boys have used as they pleased. Cornelius, the elder son, is very conservative, plain, and straight. He has built himself a very noble house; but it does not show the architectural taste and quality of that of his next brother, William K., who is the positive member of the family in the third generation. Cornelius Junior, as he is called, has very good qualities, but no very dashing or innovating ones.

WILLIAM K.

is a positive spirit—a sort of Don Cameron among the Vanderbilts. Don Cameron is celebrated for contradicting his father, and saying No when the old man would say Yes. William K. is the Don Cameron of the Vanderbilts. When he sits down to play poker with his father, he makes his sire ante up every time. "Father," he says, "you have not anteed." "Yes, I have, William," says the old man. "I beg your pardon," says the son; "you anteed last time, but not this time." Then the old man begs the son's pardon and antees up. Nevertheless, William K. is described as being ruled by his wife. His wife is a voluptuously-formed woman, rather of the dark order, round and flush; and exercises that nameless power that the dark women always have over the men who come to have their fortunes told. William K. would be very much miffed if he read this notice, because he is not aware that he is governed by his wife; but that is the tradition around the Vanderbilt house, and, being a faithful reporter, I must tell it.

There are four sons in the Vanderbilt household and four daughters. The four sons are Cornelius, William K., Fred, and George. The four daughters, all married, are Mrs. Elliott Shepherd, Mrs. Sloane, Mrs. Twombley, and Mrs. Webb. To start with the sons:

was much better put up for by his grandfather than any of the others, because he took his grandfather's name, and the old man saw more of him as he developed than he did of the young sons. There was an idea for some years that Cornelius was the railroad genius of the family; but recently a theory has developed that William K. is more of a business-man than Cornelius.

William K. I have already described. He is a fine poker-player; he is a game man; he feels his oats, and is an innovation, and does not consult his father about business or pleasure. He is a club man, and likes his game, and is a hard man to tackle at the game. His house is a fine demonstration of how thoroughly he does anything. His father has been compelled to help him make money, because William K. is not troubled with bashfulness, and goes right in and asks the old man what is a safe thing, and tells him that if he sells him out he will lose the confidence of his greatest son.

NEXT AS TO FRED.

Fred is an impressible, amorous, feminine kind of fellow, according to my information. He had a cousin named Torrance, who was married to a pretty woman. Torrance and his wife did not get along well together. Fred came on the horizon, felt the splendor of Mrs. Torrance, incontinently caved, and ended by marrying his cousin's wife. This made more excitement in the Vanderbilt family than anything that has happened since William K.'s horse kicked off his horseshoe. The great subject of that house is the behavior of the horses. But, when Fred married his cousin's wife, William, his father was not able to tell the day whether the horse kicked a shoe or not. The orthodox Dutch-Reform principles of the house were seriously assailed.

William, the sire, having married a clergyman's daughter, and knowing that his wife is always right, particularly on the morals, left the question to her. She had severe views on divorce, etc. William and his wife laid awake of nights for some time, wondering whether they should discard Fred for having made such a match. It was a serious time in the family. Fred had only $2,000,000. The idea of that poor boy being poverty-stricken with $2,000,000 moved the sympathies of his father and mother. They wept. For some nights, it is said, there was very little sleep in the house. Finally a dismal picture was presented to the couple—of poor Fred, with only $2,000,000, wandering around the streets and unable to find a boarding-house! It was resolved to forgive him on account of his poverty. Yet still it is a sore spot in the family. The family is plain and tranquil, and can stand anything but a social mistake. Fred's wife, it is said, has no children. We hear very little of poor Fred. Yet he is taken back into the household, and is not going to starve on the streets with only $2,000,000. There is a great deal of human nature in our parents, after all.

FINALLY, WE COME TO GEORGE.

George has been a ward for some time. He is just now coming of age, and his 20,000 shares of New York Central stock are going to be available. So George will make his entry into this life with $160,000 a year income; and when I think of the lush and elegant girls roving around these streets and going to matinées, who will hardly look over the head of a fellow with only $5,000 a year, I begin to see that George is going to get the woman destined for some other man. George is thirty-two times better off than the $5,000-a-year man. We all know that women are made for men, and a man thirty-two times more of a man than ordinary will have made a very great mistake unless he gets something fine for that income.

AS TO THE VANDERBILT DAUGHTERS,

they are child-bearing women. They do not belong to the race of cheap-retail-merchant-begotten women in our time, who think that one child is more than enough unless the father has to bear it. They bring their children into the world timely and frequently; and consequently the Vanderbilt house is not like the Chuzzlewit house, full of meanness, and treason, and backbiting. William, the great sire of all, does not really know how many grandchildren he has. When he drives his horses out on the road, and is rallied on that question at times by his compeers, he tries from mere good nature to sum up his grandchildren, and finally says, "I really don't know how many I have. I know the mothers are all doing well, and the fathers have a new grin on their faces every time I see them. What a happy family that is! Wealth does not scrimp them. Income does not stop its outcome. It preserves the two great laws of increase and multiplication.

MR. SHEPHERD,

who married the oldest daughter, is a queer character. He is now finishing a building on Fifth avenue occupying a part of the old Rutger's Institute block, which has for its signs "The Safe Deposit Bank," "The Rutger's Bank," "The Bank of Banks." We all stop and read that last several times, and ask what "The Bank of Banks" is. The friends of the Vanderbilt family smile and say, "That is one of Shepherd's cranks."

The next daughter is Mrs. Sloane.

SLOANE

is the leading carpet-man in New York. He constructs articles on which mankind and womankind walk. That rather gives him a black eye in the superstition of New York as one of the Vanderbilt family. If he could only make ceilings, on which people could not walk, it might be different; but to put beautiful articles under our feet seems strange from such a very rich person. So, on the whole, the Sloane element of the Vanderbilt family is a little looked down upon, particularly by the William K. element. At the same time the Sloanes rank very high in the mercantile world. The magnificent building of the Sloane family on Upper Broadway hardly has its match in the world for a store of any sort; and, as a carpet-store, it is beyond comparison.

The third daughter is Mrs. Twombley.

was in the paper-making business in Massachusetts, and was not worth $10,000 when he married one of William H. Vanderbilt's daughters; but he was a gentleman. The Vanderbilts say they do not demand money as a qualification to come into their family; but they do demand respectability, good nature, good manners, and good feelings. It is to the credit of William H. Vanderbilt and his wife that they regard their own fortune as amply sufficient for all their posterity; but they will not have adventurers, vulgarians, or cold-hearted people of the world to marry their children. The nearer approach to a worldly person who has come into that family is Mrs. William K., who gave the great ball the other night. The old folks say nothing about her operations; but her father-in-law went to that ball in a plain black suit, and was the only person present in such a suit. From what I pick up he does not think much of fancy balls; but he cannot control his sons in everything, much less his daughters-in-law. Twombley was a Boston young man, who struck the heart of Vanderbilt's daughter; and, when the old folks were satisfied that he was a true-hearted young man, they asked no further questions. When he entered their family they set about giving him large and creditable occupation at once.

I hear that in the Vanderbilt household the sons, the daughters, the sons-in-law, and the daughters-in-law all stand on the same foothold—respected, beloved, and given an equal chance by the fine old Knickerbocker who is so much richer than any of them. William's fortune is at least $200,000,000. He has $60,000,000 in Government bonds. He told some of his friends about four years ago that his income was $10,000,000 a year. He has never been beaten by any stock-operator, and has made every one of them who tackled him squeal. So I would not be surprised if he had an income of $20,000,000 a year, which is about equal to the capital of any of his competitors.

The youngest daughter of William, the sire, married the son of James Watson Webb. Old Mr. Webb—who is still alive, but a daily candidate for the obituary column—was a great editor of New York City before the advent of the elder Bennett. Webb made Bennett possible. Webb was of Connecticut stock settled in New York State, son of a Revolutionary Colonel or General, fine-looking, aggressive, saucy; and he took the great Whig organ in his day, the Courier and Enquirer, and made it the principal Whig paper in America. The Richmond Whig, the Louisville Journal, the Cincinnati Gazette, and the Philadelphia American were second fiddles to it. Webb was the political father, to some extent, of William H. Seward. He had all the intrepid and vain qualities which have since been abused by the Bennetts and others. He fought a duel with Tom Marshall, of Kentucky, and suffered a wound and a conviction in the court. He was a splendid-looking old man—not too good to live, but just good enough. He thought the laborer was worthy of his hire. He was twice married, and ran off with his second wife.

The son of this wife is Dr. Webb, who has married Vanderbilt's daughter. He had nothing to speak of. He probably had enough money to rent his office and buy a second-hand gig to drive around and see his patients. He struck the heart of the youngest daughter of Vanderbilt. She was a tall, lithe girl, who could roll ten-pins magnificently. She could stand up in a ten-pin alley at Saratoga, and beat her father, her mother, all her brothers, and all her sisters, and all the company that was brought in, rolling ten-pins. Every time they rolled with her they had to pay the shot. Not particularly beautiful, but of a fine, healthy figure, a splendid horse-woman, and ready for any exercise, she had the good sense not to pick out a money-grub, but a bright young professional man.

When Dr. Webb entered the family they made it agreeable for him at once. He saw clearly enough that it would not do for him to be going around New York practicing on small-pox patients, scarlet-fever children, and mumps, when he had a wife worth at least $2,000,000. So they put him into a banking-house of some kind, and made it nominal for him. Thus, with the mists and fantoms dispersed from his mind, he ceased to feel strange in that household, and has had at least one child if not more. The philosophy of the Vanderbilt family is to take the scare out of the sons-in-law and the daughters-in-law, so they will speedily produce an increase.

The question may be asked whether Mr. and Mrs. Vanderbilt prefer this or that son or daughter. I understand that there is no discrimination at all among the children by the parents. The children, while genial and wholesome, take up their own career; and the parents, in the American style, let them run their race. A fine democracy exists in the Vanderbilt circle. William, the sire, is chiefly occupied driving his horses, keeping disease away, and making his posterity happy. His wife is a thorough mother, wife, and woman. She has no affectations—no passion for ecstatic society. She has borne a large family of children without flinching, and loves them all; and her husband takes his cue from her. She is not much concerned about the world's opinion, but hopes and expects her children to be honest, faithful, pure, and to avoid scandal.

The excrescence in the family is

who gave the great party recently. She was a Miss Smith, and her father was named Murray Smith. He lived in Mobile, Ala., and had an Irishman's face. He was worth nothing, or next to nothing. He loved the South, and came here as a cotton-broker after the War. His wife, however, was a Virginia woman, and superior to Smith, of a good family. Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt inherits the parvenu element from her father and the blue-blood element from her mother. It was she who guided her husband into building the magnificent house where the late ball was given—a house that probably has not its equal as a private residence in the world. Having been the genius of its construction, she naturally wished to give a party to warm it such as would honor the mansion.

There remains to say only that

who is one of the Vanderbilt family, is the eldest son of the Duke of Manchester. The Dukes of Manchester are Montagus, and in the civil war of England were Cromwellians. Lord Kimbolton, one of the founders of this house, had Oliver Cromwell for his subordinate in one or more battles. One branch of the Mandeville family occupy the patrimonial home of the Cromwells in Huntingtonshire, and are called the Earls of Sandwich. The Manchester branch not only fought King Charles I. on the battlefield, but assisted to drive out James II. and bring in William of Orange. An ancestor of the present Duke of Manchester cut a large figure in the conquest of Ireland and the battle of the Boyne.

The present Duke of Manchester married an untitled woman, looking more to beauty and health than to family and wealth. His eldest son takes the title, by courtesy, of Lord Mandeville. He is said to be a thorough democrat, frank, affable, kind. He married a sister-in-law of Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt's brother, if I correctly remember. He has by this wife, who was an Yznaga, a son. If Lord Mandeville lives till the death of his father he will be the Duke of Manchester; if he dies his son by Miss Yznaga will be the Duke of Manchester. I know a number of persons in New York who are acquainted with Mandeville, and they say that he is plain, straightforarwd, and delightful. No wonder that the Vanderbilt family appreciate a man of his rank, who likes them for their up-and-down merits.

GATH.

CREEK AND CHEROKEE.

A Nice Little Indian War Imminent—An Odious Cattle Law.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., April 7.—[Special.]—From the advices received here today from Indian Territory it is evident that trouble is brewing between the Cherokee and Creek Nations, and the apparent quiet and harmonious feelings now existing are liable to be ruthlesly disturbed at any moment. The latter nation has a large number of malcontents, who have been so from some time before the distribution of the Creek orphan money, but it was thought that the distribution would remove all trace of dissatisfaction, and the normal relations be restored between the two nations. These expectations have not been realized. Those who recall the attitude of Spi-ca-che at the distribution will remember that he declined voluntarily to come to the agency as had all the other bands, and when United States Agent Tufts sent for him he came, but came as if to the presence of an enemy. He and his band came armed, with "corn-husks" in their hat-bands, as a mark that they belonged to Spi-ca-che's discontented band. Many will recall the trouble that has followed the attempt to capture that band, the bad feeling created in the Creek Nation at the persistence on the part of what is known as the "Constitutional party," composed entirely of Cherokees, to arrest Spi-ee-che. Another cause of bad feeling among the Creeks was the killing, and the manner of the killing of their medicine-man, Sleeping-Rabbit. This they have not got over, nor does it appear likely they will. Now comes the Creek Nation with a law that is likely to encourage the bad feeling existing between these two nations, and which bears on its face a desire to create a cause for a disturbance. The Creek Council have passed a law confisicating cattle belonging to Cherokee citizens living on the line between the two nations, when those cattle chance to stray over the open ground of the Creeks.

Chief Chicote has been notified of the passage of this law by the Creeks, and he in turn has notified Principal Chief Bushyhead of the existence of the law, and has published it to the citizens that he (Chicote) will have to enforce it.

There is an impression that for a disturbing element, a more serious one could hardly be found. That it will produce a disturbance does not admit of a doubt, and the Cherokees look upon it as having been passed for that express purpose. The latter nation has no such law; when cattle belonging to Creek citizens graze on the Cherokee lands their owner, when he wishes, drives them to his own lands without hindrance or ill feeling. But under the Creek law, if any cattle from the Cherokee citizens wanders but six inches on the Creek lands they are confiscated! This state of things will cause a good many disturbances, and, as the Cherokee Council does not meet till the middle of May, when a law to offset this one might be passed, yet enough time will elapse before it could be done to get up a fuss that would require months to settle. The Cherokees claim they do not want to entertain anything but the most generous sentiments for the Creeks, and think that a feeling of fraternity should have prompted a conference on so grave a subject before the law was passed.

SANDY FLORIDA.

Jacksonville, Its Bitter Oranges and Poor Streets.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., April 4.—[Special Correspondence.]—Jacksonville is the commercial metropolis and chief city in the State, containing about 14,000 inhabitants. It is the point where anybody visiting Florida first stops and last leaves on returning home. It is located at the great elbow of the St. John's River, which, after flowing 250 miles due north, makes a sudden bend to the east and discharges itself into the sea over a fourteen-foot bar at its mouth, distant eighteen miles from the city. Jacksonville rests on sand, and is surrounded by sand. Ride out in any direction from your hotel and it is through deep, yielding sand. It is as sandy around Jacksonville as about Michigan City, although the sand is not blown up into high hills at the former as at the latter place; but when a strong wind from the ocean blows over Jacksonville it whirls the fine sand through the streets in blinding quantities, and into every open door, or window, or crevice in the houses. There are no paved streets, or good driveways, or roads in any direction, except one called the shell road along the marshy, seedy shore of the river; but there is a bad mile of yielding sand from the hotels before reaching it, and it is in rather poor condition when reached. The inhabitants appear to be unconscious of the wretched condition of their streets and driveways, and make no intelligent effort to mend their ways. The streets are lined with shade-trees which are very pleasant to the eye. They consist chiefly of live oaks—many of them very large ones in the older parts of the town—forming arcades of embowering green in winter as well as in summer. Thousands of orange trees also line the streets and shade the sidewalks, and cover the grounds of many tastefully-constructed residences and neat cottages, each tree hanging full of golden, luscious-looking fruit, tempting the tourist as he passes underneath to reach forth his hand, pluck, and eat. But those who succumb to this temptation once in Jacksonville, or Palatka, or Enterprise, or St. Augustine, or Tallahassee, or any other town in Florida whose streets are lined with orange-trees, never fall a second time. One bite and one suck of the bitter-as-gall fruit works a cure and prevents repetition. These street oranges are all for show and nothing for taste. They are the untamed, wild-woods variety and as uneatable as crabapples—more so, because they are sour and bitter instead of sour alone; but they are very fair and beautiful to look upon.

In the gardens and grounds of Jacksonville and St. Augustine are many other kinds of trees, including the magnolia, the palmetto, the palm, the pride of India, pepper-trees, lemon-trees, century-plants, and cactus, while the gardens are filled with flowers, in which the many-colored rose predominates. Still there is a painful absence of verdure on the ground. No grass grows on these ashy-gray sands. The gardens and yards are all bare of grass; the wide residence streets are filled with soft sand, although shaded with live-oaks and wild oranges, and all about the town it is sand, sand, and as far as the eye can see nothing but sand, and not a blade of grass, or grain, or corn. Along the river on the low, damp land, there is in places an admixture of black muck in the soil which produces strawberries, potatoes, celery, tomatoes, and other garden truck in abundance and ready for the market in March; but the quantity of such land is limited. But the prevailing character of the country around Jacksonville is barren, sea-blown sand, covered with a scrubby, inferior, yellow pine, which answers very well for firewood, but nothing else. Fuel is consequently cheap and abundant; but a family in this warm climate needs but little fuel except for kitchen purposes.

VIATOR.

A TREASURER'S DISGRACE.

EAST SAGINAW, Mich., April 7.—[Special.]—On the night of March 16 James Atherton, Treasurer of Oscoda County, arrived here from Detroit and claimed to have lost his pocketbook—or that it was stolen from him—containing $1,800. He offered a reward of $500 for its recovery, and said that of the amount lost all but $500 was county funds. When he reached home suspicion was aroused at the conflicting stories he had told, and the matter was investigated. He claimed that the money lost was drawn from the American National Bank, of Detroit, when in fact he drew no money there, but paid $17 to balance an account which was overdrawn to that amount. The Board of Supervisors rejected his bond, declared the office vacant, and appointed a successor. The Prosecuting Attorney informs THE TRIBUNE correspondent that Atherton is short to the county $2,061, and will be arrested on Monday and be charged with embezzlement.

IMPORTANT AGREEMENT.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., April 7.—C. A. Spofford, private secretary of Henry Villard, who arrived today, says an agreement has been arrived at between the Oregon & Transcontinental Company and the Oregon & California Railroad Company by which the Oregon & Transcontinental Company shall complete and equip the remaining 125 miles of the Southern extension, receiving therefor $3,600,000 first-mortgage bonds at the rate of $20,000 per mile and $3,800,000 second-mortgage bonds. The Oregon & Transcontinental will lease the Oregon & California system for 999 years, paying interest on the first and second mortgage bonds, $20,000 per year, to maintain the organization of the Oregon & California Company, $300,000 per annum for three and half years, to be distributed as dividends at 2½ per cent annually on preferred stock of the Oregon & California Company, and to pay after July 1, 1886, 35 per cent of the gross earnings to Lessor, with a guarantee that this shall be sufficient to pay the fixed charges and $20,000 per year for maintenance and a minimum of 2½ per cent dividends on the preferred stock.

THE ARMY.

Disposition of the Troops.

[Washington correspondence New York Herald.]—The duties performed by the line of the army are sufficiently indicated by the following brief statement of the disposition of troops: Commencing in the northwestern part of Washington Territory and extending eastward to Fort Pembina, D. T., there are nine forts, so-called, garrisoned by six troops of cavalry and thirty companies of infantry, mustering something less than 1,000 men. From Pembina along the borders of Minnesota, Wisconsin, and Michigan no troops are met with until Fort Brady, at Sault Ste. Mary, and Fort Mackinac (the Fort George of the War of 1812) are reached. Four companies of infantry, numbering about 180 men, are stationed at these forts. The next frontier post is Fort Wayne, Mich., the headquarters of the Tenth Infantry, and the station of four companies (190 men) of that regiment. No more troops are encountered until Buffalo is reached, except a small detachment of the Tenth Infantry keeping mournful watch and ward over the tomb of Garfield, on the shore of Lake Erie. The New York frontier from Buffalo to Plattsburg is sentineled by twelve companies of infantry (550 men). Then the uniform of Uncle Sam disappears until the Atlantic forts and harbor-defenses are gained. The garrisoned forts from Maine to Florida are eleven in number, and muster thirty batteries of artillery, or about 1,200 men, which is a very moderate allowance for a coast line and a system of harbor denfenses extending through 24 degrees of latitude. The Gulf coast and harbors are allowed only five batteries of artillery, with a maximum strength of 200 men.

The Mexican border from Brownsville, Tex., to the Pacific requires a guard of twenty-six troops of cavalry and twenty-two companies of infantry, mustering about 2,700 rank and file, and occupying twelve "forts" in Texas, New Mexico, and Arizona. The forts and garrisons along the Pacific coast from San Diego to the mouth of the Columbia River, eight in number, are in possession of one troop of cavalry, ten batteries of artillery, and seven companies of infantry, 800 men all told.

There are, in round numbers, 259,600 Indians in the United States, exclusive of Alaska, 60,000 of whom belong to the five civilized tribes or nations in the Indian Territory, and 31,700 to sundry tribes and bands in New York, Indiana, Iowa, Minnesota, Michigan, Wisconsin, North Carolina and Florida, who need no attention from the army, leaving 167,000 in the West, Northwest, and Southwest, who require more or less military surveillance. To meet all these contingencies there are eighty-three troops of cavalry, three light batteries of artillery, and 162 companies of infantry distributed among sixty-one forts, barracks, camps, and cantonments in Arizona, California, Colorado, Dakota, Idaho, Indian Territory, Kansas, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Mexico, Oregon, Texas, Utah, Washington Territory, and Wyoming. These troops will not aggregate more than 13,000, including company-clerks, tailors, shoemakers, cooks, blacksmiths, carpenters, saddlers, farriers, and extra-duty men of all kinds; but, as the troops stationed along the Northwestern and Southwestern borders are really there "on Indian account," they should be charged accordingly, which will add 4,500 to the above figures, and make our Indian army of observation about 17,500 strong.

The remainder of the army is accounted for as follows: Five batteries of artillery at Washington (D. C.) Barracks (handy for funeral escorts and parades); four troops of cavalry, one battery of artillery, and five infantry companies at the School of Application, Fort Leavenworth, Kas.; one battery of artillery and four infantry companies at Fort Snelling, Minn. (headquarters Department of Dakota); five batteries of artillery at Little Rock, Ark., (2), Newport, Ky., (1), and Mt. Vernon Barracks, Ala., (2); four companies of engineers at Willett's Point, N. Y., and one at the Military Academy.

A CHURCH SENSATION.

Something Like Ballot-Box Stuffing—Greenbacks Brought into Requisition.

WASHINGTON, D. C., April 6.—[Cincinnati Commercial Gazette.]—Something akin to ballot-box stuffing has just occurred here in the very shadow of the sanctuary. The Church of All Souls, Unitarian, is one of the most aristocratic in the city, and numbers among its members and pew-owners many families of much prominence in official life. Among these are Justice Miller, Secretary Chandler, Senator Hoar, W. Scott Smith of the New York Commercial Advertiser, Dr. Loring, Dr. Baxter of the army, James G. Hill, Supervising Architect, ex-Secretary Boutwell, and Gen. F. A. Walker.

The annual election for Trustees has just been held. The correspondent of the Baltimore Sun, who has inside and reliable sources of information regarding the affairs of the church, relates that the congregation is divided into two parties, which, at the annual election for Trustees, contest for control with all the vim and vigor, crimination and recrimination which mark similar occasions of a more worldly character. The annual election for this year was presided over by Judge Richardson, ex-Secretary of the Treasury, and now on the bench of the Court of Claims. The contest was close and doubtful. The representatives of one of the opposing sides came provided with numerous proxies, sufficient, it was said, to trim the sails in their favor, except for the fact that a number of those who composed the proxies were in arrears for pew rents, and therefore, under the by-laws, not entitled to a vote.

But after the tellers had retired to a private room to count the votes one gentleman belonging to the party which offered the proxies appeared at the door, and, producing a pile of greenbacks, offered to pay all the arrears, with the understanding that the votes of those in arrears should be counted according to the proxies furnished. The tellers suspended operations, returned to the meeting and reported the facts, and asked for instructions.

Judge Richardson, from the chair, said that under the circumstances to count the votes of proxies in arrears, which had been reported illegally, would be an outrage and a disgrace to a political ward caucus, and should not be tolerated. He had never in all his experience heard of such an attempt before. On a motion submitted, it was determined that the Treasurer should receive the arrears of rent, but the votes of those in arrears should not be counted. The object of the side offering the proxies was thus defeated, and the chagrin of those concerned was not lessened by the fact that their money was gone, without the equivalent desired.

It is expected that one result of Tuesday night's proceedings will be the prohibition of the use of any proxies in the future, and the frowning down by the body of the congregation of any attempts to array one part or the other on the side or in the interest of individual purposes or desires.

HOMINY AND ARNICA.

[Texas Siftings.]—An old darky came into an Austin drug-store with his head bandaged up, and groaning as if every bone in his body was broken.

"What's the matter?" asked the drug-clerk.

"We've had the bery debble of a time, me an' de old woman, battering each udder wid de chairs and sich."

"Well, what do you want?"

"We needs some anarchy. Dar ain't no anarchy in de house. De bottle got smashed in de fuss, and de anarchy spilled all ober de floor."

"If you had more harmony in your house there would be less anarchy," remarked the drug-clerk, smiling, as he filled a small bottle of arnica.

"You am right, boss. Dat's jes what de fuss was about. De reason we needs anarchy is bekase dar was no hominy in de house, and dat's why de ole woman hit me wid de chair."

THE FASHIONS.

Latest New York and Paris Modes for the Ladies.

[New York Evening Post.]—Dress bonnets are of medium size.

The new foulé cloth comes in all the rich street shades.

Stylishly-dressed children now wear lace shoulder-capes instead of collars.

Heavy silks, woven in small matelassé patterns, will replace to some extent the plain ottomans of the last season.

Velvet will be worn to the latest possible moment, or until the heated term shall render it uncomfortable, as it retains, or rather has increased, its hold on popular favor.

Ladies who venture to adopt plaided costumes avoid the corsage made of the vari-colored material, and join to the plaided skirts a jersey bodice of a monochrome color matching exactly one of the shades of the plaid.

Fans of tinted ostrich-feathers, mounted on tortoise-shell, are still the hight of style for evening-dress. They are oval in shape, and usually have a brilliantly-plumaged bird or a cluster of lilies or roses set in the centre of the fan.

Yellow, in a score of tints, ranging from daffodil and primrose to citron-yellow of a greenish tint, is a color that is now exceedingly fashionable in every sort of dress-fabric, bonnet-material, and garniture, and in house-adorning—in drapery, panelings, portieres, lambrequins, and curtains.

Lace bonnets in black and cream-white, in modified poke shapes, are among the attractive fancies in new French millinery. Lace pleatings are laid over the brims, which are first covered with colored silk or satin of either bright or pale shades. Flowers matching the hue of the silk foundation are wreathed around the crown, or massed at one side, mingled usually with cascades of the lace.

The return to fashion of gros-grains and failles has met with universal approbation. These handsome silks have a richness of effect quite beyond that obtainable by any surah or merveilleux, yet it is not to be supposed that these soft, clinging silks are by any means discarded. They are as much used as ever, but they are employed in a different manner, being used more as drapings, pleatings of every kind, and ruchings, than for entire toilets.

Wood-brown, several improved shades of terra-cotta and crushed-strawberry, Presbyterian-blue, intense, pale, and leaden-looking greens, and porphyry shot with gold are the leading shades in spring and summer costumes. For young ladies are new exquisit shades of pink and mauve. White holds its own still; for, beautiful as some of the new tints undoubtedly are, nothing in all the range of colors can be made to look more attractive and artistic than white with lace adornings.

Many leading modistes have discontinued the use of gored side-breadths in their skirts. These, whether short or long, trimmed or plain, are now cut with one centre breadth; this is slightly sloped—curved, more properly speaking—at each side toward the top only. The breadth on each side is the same width at each end, but it is fitted to the figure at the waist by two pleats in each breadth. This, it is claimed, is an improvement, as it causes the skirt to sit straight, and neither go in points nor cling too closely to the figure.

Satin is, and will be, very popular. Black satin is certainly no longer so much favored for daywear, its place this season being taken by grosgrain, which is infinitly preferable in sunlight, because devoid of any shiny appearance. For evening-wear, however, black satin veiled with black lace will be very elegantly worn. There are also imported superb-looking black satin toilets, cut in trained princesse style, made of the richest quality of Turc satin, with panier drapery about the hips and a slight drapery above the tournure in the back, taking away the objectionable robe-de-chambre effect a princesse dress otherwise has. This, with a garniture of magnificent jet-beaded appliqué bands on the corsage and sleeves, constitutes the sole trimming.

Among handsome new brocades are exhibited patterns of large nondescript flowers in solid white, with pale-green foliage, on a background of small interlaced arabesques of scarlet and gold color. Another shows great sprays of pale pink and tea roses on a delicate silver-gray satin background. The most notable of all these brocades is a design in chaudron, or copper-colored satin, with large raised arabesques of foliage in exquisitly-shaded tones of chaudron down each side of the breadth, while up the centre of the silk are brocaded clusters of carnations in their natural hues. This silk is literally as "thick as a board," and costs $30 a yard. This fabric is particularly adapted to regal toilets made with court train, and would appropriately adorn a stately matron treading with grace and dignity the figures of the minuet.

It is told by modistes returning from abroad that, among other vagaries of fashion in the gay French Capital, bonnets and hats are now selected with a view to silently demonstrating the rôle the various wearers desire to enact before the world. One style of hat—a "perfect love"—tip-tilted over the eyes, and crowned with blush-roses, is intended to be expressive of sweet naiveté; another, adorned with delicately-tinted touch-me-nots and tender white lilies-of-the-valley, characterizes the wearer as of a gentle, clinging disposition; while formidable and atrocious-looking bonnets, adorned with owls looking wise, eagles looking fierce, and daggers, swords, and jewel-headed spears, are assumed by women who openly repudiate the tradition of weakness, and desire to demonstrate by a self-reliant demeanor their assumption of the free rights of women, so far as social customs and restrictive public opinion have surrendered to the claims for emancipation which they periodically clamor for.

Plaid materials are certainly in high vogue; but in one particular they resemble the Bagdad, Paisley, and other shawls not many years ago so fashionable. They require the shoulders and the grace of a French woman to wear them either with aplomb or distinction. Still, the fashion for these materials is likely to continue throughout the summer, as many of the new-patterned satins and other warm-weather fabrics are made with plaids, many of which are of a very pronounced type, and consequently very ugly. But under the name of "zephyrs" are just imported some airy-looking plaids and checks designed for midsummer use which are certainly the prettiest and least objectionable of all the tartans yet exhibited. These come in what are termed "gingham effects"; and among them are patterns of pale blue and wood-brown with intersecting hair-lines of cardinal, dark walldower-red and bronze checked with peacock-blue; pale blue and rose-color crossed with white; white and lilac crossed with scarlet lines; and so on. Dresses made of this material are to be flounced two-thirds up the length of the skirt, with a short tunic shirred or pleated to a pointed bodice, the joining to be hidden by wide bands of ribbon brought from the sides of the bodice and tied, with long flowing ends falling over the skirt in front. The ribbons reproduce the tints of the colors of the zephyr fabric composing the dress.

Chiné silks are revived and promise to be in great demand. The new patterns are most artistic and picturesque, being similar in style to the Pompadour sateens, only softer and richer looking. Large flowers of delicate tints are strewn rather far apart on grounds of soft texture and color, the edges of the flowers shading off into the groundwork. The silks are made in all the shades imaginable, faint colors being in the majority—such as soft-tinted willow-green, salmon-pink, creamish hues with a dash of yellow in them, and hedgerose-pink shading into a silver sheen. There are also many chiné silks with rich, dark backgrounds. One of the great attractions in many people's eyes is, next to their inexpensiveness, their washing qualities, which are said to be unlimited. These fabrics are most especially appropriate for garden-parties. Arrayed in a chiné silk costume adorned with lace, and wearing one of the flapping Maude Mueller Leghorn hats crowned with roses, and adding as a finish a pair of long buttonless Suede Saxe gloves, a girl may look as pretty and picturesque as Dolly Varden herself at an incredibly small expense.

FLIGHTS OF PIGEONS.

Instances are on record where Antwerp homing pigeons have averaged upward of a mile a minute during a flight lasting four hours and three-quarters, or more than sixty miles an hour for nearly five hours. A most remarkable race was flown from Rome to Belgium in 1863. The distance is 900 miles, nearly 500 of which was over a country entirely new to the birds. Of the 200 birds liberated scarcely twenty reached home. Those making the trip, if they flew in a direct line, must have crossed the Apennines near Monte Cimone, where the mountains are between 6,000 and 7,000 feet high, and the Alps near St. Gothard, where the lowest passes are about 7,000 feet. It is more than probable, however, that they rounded to the westward of these mountains and passed by way of Nice through France. The first bird reached home about twelve and one-half days after being liberated. The greatest distance ever flown by a homing pigeon was made in 1879 or 1880, from Madrid, Spain, to Brussels, Belgium, a distance of 1,100 miles, air-line. In 1878 there was a grand concourse from Rome to Brussels, in which 1,066 birds took part. Only sixty-two reached home. In this country one of the longest flights on record was made in 1880 from Indianapolis to Jersey City—630 miles—by "Garfield," a silver-ash cock, now owned by George V. Cresson, of the Red Star Homing Pigeon Club.

What Persuaded the Stern Cashier—Good in Itself, yet Grandly Indorsed.

They tell this story: That one day, several years ago, a gentleman, evidently in great mental anxiety as to the result of his application, stood at the Cashier's window at a certain New York Bank, earnestly trying to coax that official into discounting a note for a considerable amount. The Cashier listened, and finally said:

"It's no use, Mr. R—; we can't do it without a better indorser."

"Then I'm a ruined man, for I must have that money today or fail," groaned the poor fellow, looking like a lonely sailor on the deck of a sinking ship.

"Let me see that note," said a prosperous-looking person, who had emerged from the private rooms of the bank just in time to take in the situation. Having glanced at the paper, he seized a pen and quickly wrote across the back of it the strong name of

WILLIAM H. VANDERBILT.

"There," he added, handing back the note, "try it again, and see if it will go now."

It did go, and the money was handed to the happy recipient.

THE MASONS' STRIKE.

To Whom It May Concern:

The undersigned contractors for mason work in Chicago do hereby give notice of their position in the present strike.

WHEREAS, The Bricklayers' and Stonemasons' Union of Chicago, which claims all resident bricklayers and stonemasons as members, and allows none to work with mechanics in the same line of Trade who do not belong to its body; which limits the number of apprentices to be instructed in the trade by any employer to two, regardless of the number of journeymen he may have to work, be they one hundred or five; a body which sets at defiance all ordinary accepted laws of supply and demand, and ordered its members to strike work on Monday last for 50 cents per day advance on prices paid last year, and this in the teeth of the fact that not more than one-third of their number were or can be employed till June 1; therefore, we hereby declare said organization baneful in its influences and unfit for any further official countenance by this association; and

WHEREAS, Numbers of mechanics now members of the Bricklayers' Union do protest that they individually deem the position taken by said body wrong and untenable, and that they desire to resume work if assured of protection after leaving the ranks of said body; therefore,

RESOLVED, That the members of this association do hereby pledge themselves not to employ any member of said union from and after April 9, 1883.

We mean what we say!

This strike will determine whether the business-men of this city consent to allow the resolution of an irresponsible body to govern and dictate not only in the matter of wages, but also as to who shall be employed, either as journeyman or apprentice to a trade, or whether the laws of supply and demand are recognized here as in other civilized communities.

We believe that this city will be found in favor of the latter.

We await the verdict!

We will employ mechanics as they offer, and promise steady employment to those who will liberate themselves from the dictation and tyranny of the "union," and return to their work without further loss of time.

FAITH WORK.

The Lord Expected to Furnish $5,000 a Year to Support Rehobath Home.

He Was Consulted in Prayer by the Lady Manager, and She Knows He Said "Yes."

Accordingly, She Assumed the Responsibility, and Says She Shall Not Go Around Begging,

Because It Is No Further from the Lord to Her than It Is from Her to the Lord.

There has been a change in the management of the Rehobath Home, which will hereafter be conducted as a "faith cure." It may be necessary to explain that the Rehobath is a refuge for fallen women, at No. 129 Fourth avenue, which has been managed for the last year by the ladies of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union. Some two years ago the place was the abode of Minnie Brooks, who kept a disreputable saloon on the lower floor and devoted the upper stories to purposes even more questionable. To be more specific in regard to the former character of the establishment is not pertinent, as the particulars would be not only decidedly uncomplimentary to Miss Brooks, but extremely distasteful to the reader. It is sufficient to recall the sensation of two years ago, when Minnie Brooks suddenly "experienced religion," sold her horses and carriage, converted as many of her boarders as she could, and turned the unregenerated ones adrift.

A TRANSFORMATION SCENE.

There was at that time a transformation scene in the barroom. Drinks were no longer dispensed to thirsty negroes, but the water of life was freely poured out by Christian workers, who organized prayer-meetings every night, and, finding themselves firmly established in Satan's stronghold, sang "Hold the Fort" with pardonable emphasis. They held the fort for several months and then withdrew their forces, leaving Minnie to contend with the ancient enemy alone. That she shortly afterward surrendered was something not altogether unexpected. She went back to the old life.

There came to this city from Mendota a year ago last July Miss Carrie H. Moffatt, who in December reorganized the mission under the auspices of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, and in the following May established a home for fallen women in the rooms where Miss Brooks had fought a losing battle with the powers of evil. It is now announced that the Woman's Christian Temperance Union, while it will continue to support the mission, will no longer bear the expense of conducting the Rehobath Home, but will leave Miss Moffatt to carry on the establishment as a "faith work." It was to discover, if possible, how an institution requiring several thousand dollars per annum for its maintenance could be supported by faith alone that a TRIBUNE reporter yesterday called upon Miss Moffatt at the home.

REHOBATH HOME.

The house is a large, commodious one in the vilest part of the city, surrounded by negro gambling resorts and dens of infamy. The sitting-room on the second floor, which was formerly Miss Brooks' parlor, is neatly furnished, with a quotation from the silver dollar and other appropriate mottoes adorning the walls. A red-bird in a large cage entertained the visitor in a painfully-demonstrative way, unconscious of the fact that it was chirping vocal daggers. When the reporter was shown into Miss Moffatt's room at the further end of the hall it was necessary to interrupt a violently-musical canary in order to obtain an interview with the mistress of the home.

"Yes," said Miss Moffatt when the object of the visit was broached, "the Lord has directed me to make the home a faith work, and I am just as certain that He will provide the necessary means as if some one had told me that there was $10,000 to my credit in the First National Bank."

"Then the ladies of the Woman's Christian Temperance Union have left you to your own resources?"

LEFT TO HER OWN RESOURCES.

"Entirely. I will tell you how that happened. Mrs. T. B. Carse, who is as noble a Christian woman as ever lived, and other ladies of the union felt that the pecuniary burden, added to their other responsibilities, was more than they could bear. So they came to me last Wednesday and told me that they would make over the furniture of the home to me if I would conduct the home as a faith work. I always thought that I would be called upon at some time to do a faith work, but I was not sure that my time had come. So I told them that I would have to ask the Lord, and would let them know my decision on Friday. On Thursday afternoon many of the best Christian workers in the city met with me in prayer, and they begged God to answer "Yes" or "No" whether I should undertake the work. I did not expect them to pray so pointedly, but I got the answer then and there. It was "Yes." I told the ladies on Friday that I would take the home as a faith work, and the arrangement will go into effect the 1st of May."

"The maintenance of the home must have been a heavy expense?"

"I am not sure what the expense was, but I believe that it was something in the neighborhood of $5,000 a year."

"And you expect that the Lord, instead of the ladies, will provide this amount in the future?"

THE LORD WILL PROVIDE.

"Oh, yes; I am sure he will. He will see that His will is done, even if He has to perform a miracle. But it is not always necessary for Him to perform a miracle, for He can use natural means, by influencing the hearts and minds of men. Why should He not support the home? The earth is His and the fullness thereof, and the cattle upon a thousand hills, and the gold and silver in the earth. I shall not go around begging, for it is as easy for Him to bring the means to me as for me to go for them."

"Cannot the home be made self-supporting?"

"No; the work done in the sewing-room is for the inmates. We have seventeen girls at present. The income from the laundry is not considerable. But," she continued, "I have had many wonderful answers to prayer."

"Indeed?"

WONDERFUL ANSWERS TO PRAYER.

"Yes; two years ago when I returned from Colorado to Mendota, which had been my home for a long time, I was dying of kidney complaint. The physicians had given me up; their medicines had no longer any effect upon me; I was unable to walk without help; I was told that I had only a few weeks to live. I stopped taking medicine. I asked God to give me the spirit of prayer that I might pray to be resigned, or pray to be cured, so that I might do some destructive work for Him. Suddenly I felt myself praying to be healed, and I got up as well as ever, and ran down-stairs, and felt that in one instant I had been restored to perfect health."

"You had stopped taking medicine when this cure was effected?"

"Yes," she said, "it was just after I stopped taking medicine. After I was cured I asked the Lord what I should do, and opening my Bible I read these words which were addressed to Paul: 'Go thou into the nearest city and it will be told thee what thou shalt do.' I came to Chicago, and the Lord has taken care of me and pointed out my work to me."

Miss Moffatt, whose hair is almost white, and whose face has felt the touch of Time's pencil, appears to be quite healthy at present. She is quite engrossed in her work, and seems to regard her strange effort to live by faith alone as an assured success rather than a doubtful experiment. When asked about the susceptibility of fallen woman to reformatory influences, she said:

REFORMED WOMEN.

"I have had probably as many as 150 women here since I started the home. Of this number at least one-third have remained steadfast. One woman, who had reached the lowest stages of depravity, and who was brought here a confirmed inebriate, is now a member of one of the fashionable avenue churches. Another woman who was well educated, and who had led an abandoned life, remained with us a few weeks, and is now highly respected in a town in a neighboring State, where she is an Assistant Postmistress. Still another I may mention whose reform was as remarkable. She was brought up in the lowly walks of life, and was a victim of drink. She told me that she spent nearly all her time at the bridewell. She was employed at sewing in that institution, and if she left her work unfinished at the end of her term, it was always kept for her, because it was known that she would get drunk as soon as she reached the city, and that she would be sent back to the bridewell from the police court. One piece of work, however, must have remained unfinished, for she came to the home and was converted."

BACKSLIDERS.

"Do not many of the girls leave the home to return to wickedness?"

"Yes, they often come here and get good clothes and lodging and then go back to a bad life. But those discouragements are to be expected."

"It is said that Minnie Brooks, whose conversion created so much talk, is now keeping a bad resort on this very street."

"That is true," Miss Moffatt said. "I pray for her very earnestly and believe that she will yet be a good woman. She did not go far enough in her conversion. She was convicted of her sin but she was not born again. Besides, she allowed herself to get impatient at the Christian workers, and then Satan led her astray. It is always necessary to be 'born in the spirit,' for Christ said to Nicodemus, 'Thou must be born again.' Are you a Christian?"

But at this point the interview became personal.

BILLIARDS.

A Review of the Tournament—The Record and Average of Each Player.

Now that the balk-line tournament, given under the auspices of the J. M. Brunswick & Balke Co., has come to a close and Jacob Schaefer is once more the possessor of the championship, a brief review of some of its more salient features may be of interest. The result to those who have watched the practice-play of the various contestants is in no way surprising. Schaefer previous to his arrival here had been practicing the same style of play as had the French expert, and the nursing of Morris in the preliminary games was a revelation to him, for he realized at once that it was the real secret of the balk-line game, and not the play in the corners, as he and many others had supposed. Nursing being in the main the strongest feature of his game, he was not slow in becoming proficient at its use in the new way, and once perfect he need have no fear for the result. Morris was the only other tournament-player proficient in the same style, while Daly, Dion, and Sexton depended rather upon their open-table play and knowledge of cushion-carroms to help them to a place, they all conceding the fact that the championship lay between Schaefer and Vignaux. Prior to the time that the New-Yorkers left their home for Chicago they were almost unanimous in the opinion that Vignaux would practically have a walk-over, they believing the game to be one just suited to his style, and many of them openly backed him with their money in the pool-box. No sooner, however, had they arrived here and ascertained the fact that Schaefer had found a way to work the rail than their opinions changed, and they straightway began to hedge their money by backing him at the odds which were all along in favor of the Frenchman. Both Daly and Sexton, who had met Vignaux in Paris and suffered defeat at his hands, and who also witnessed one of his games with Slosson, believed that Schaefer would win, and after the game Daly, who had been unable to hedge entirely out, said: "I'm $165 loser, but I'd give that and more to see Schaefer do what he did do—down the Frenchman, and that at the very game that was made for him." Sexton said yesterday to a friend: "Do you remember what I told you, that if Jake kept coming at him, and coming again, Vignaux would quit? Well, he did it, and quit bad, just as he did in his last game with Slosson." That this was true no one who witnessed the game last night, and who understands the Frenchman's style, will for a moment attempt to deny. It was a matter of comment to those who sat near the press-table and saw the Frenchman's nervousness whenever Schaefer was working the ivories at the table. So alarmed did he become that in several instances he deliberately played safety shots for the purpose of leaving the balls where it would be exceedingly difficult for Schaefer to count, and this caused Schaefer's average to be lower than it otherwise would have been.

Another surprise in store for the knowing ones was the fact that Daly took the third position, but this is easily accounted for. Daly has wonderfully improved in his play, while Sexton has as perceptibly fallen off. Large sums of money were wagered in New York, New Orleans, and Chicago that a grand average of 16 would win the tournament, and yet the sequel proves that the winner was obliged to average more than 22, and did average a little over 23 in order to "get there," though the third player on the list was well to the front with an average of nearly 13. For the lesser lights 600 points proved enough for the game, but for such players as Vignaux and Schaefer the game should be at least 1,000 points up in order to really test the question as to which is the best player.

The Last Run—A Banquet at the Palmer and the Presentation of Prizes.

It was announced that at 6 o'clock last evening the prizes in the balk-line billiard tournament would be awarded at the Palmer House, and at that hour the rotunda was filled with the billiard men. Previous to the awards a private meeting of the experts was held to discuss billiard matters, after which all interested assembled in Parlor O, and repaired to the small north dining-room, where a collation was served. The menu cards were unique, bearing upon the face a cut of a balky horse and a deep line to indicate the balk-line tournament. The table was set in a square, and in the centre was a smaller table bearing the championship emblem, which has already been described, also a floral piece. Upon the corners of the table were the four balls, and at the corners were four stacks of cues held up by flags of all nations, the American flag covering the table.

After one or two courses had been disposed of, Mr. T. Z. Cowles, of the American Sports, arose and said before a drop of wine was drank he would like to submit a document which he had drawn up. He read it and said he would pass it around among the players for signatures. He did so, and the following was the result:

A CARD.

CHICAGO, April 7.—We, the undersigned, contestants in the balk-line billiard tournament just closed, desire to express our disapprobation of the insinuation of a so-called expert in THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE of this morning reflecting on the squareness of the deciding game of Friday night between Messrs. Schaefer and Vignaux. We unite in pronouncing the same a silly and baseless falsehood and in bearing our testimony to the fact that there was not one point of play to justify or one particle of truth to sustain the charge of collusion in that game.

MAURICE DALY,
WILLIAM SEXTON,
ALONZO H. MORRIS,
JOSEPH DION,
THOMAS WALLACE.

DISTRIBUTING THE PRIZES.

Mr. Cowles then made a very neat speech, welcoming the visitors, and speaking of the character of the audiences that had seen the matches. He took pleasure, he said, in presenting the championship emblem to Jacob Schaefer, and he would also tender him the check of the J. M. Brunswick & Balke Company for $1,200. Mr. Schaefer responded briefly and appropriately.

Maurice Vignaux was given the second prize, a check for $800, and he expressed his thanks through his interpreter, Joe Dion.

To Maurice Daly, "the gentleman billiard-player," as Mr. Cowles termed him, was presented the third prize of $500, and in response he said he was thankful to be a part of the sandwich in which Schaefer was the upper crust and Vignaux the meat. He would always uphold the integrity of billiards.

William Sexton was awarded the fourth prize of $300, and Alonzo Morris the fifth prize of $200. Both made appropriate speeches.

DION AND SEXTON MAKE UP.

The youngest and oldest men in the tournament — Dion and Wallace—shook hands, after which Mr. Cowles asked Dion and Sexton to shake hands and clear up old scores. This was done amid great applause.

Toasts were offered to Joseph Dion, the Brunswick Balke Company, Mr. Troescher, Alonzo Morris, T. Z. Cowles, Milward Adams, Parker Byers, Charles Matthews, Tom Foley, Mr. McFarland, Mr. Hardy, and to Moses Bensinger, to whom the players are indebted to a great extent for the success of the tournament. The "boys" were together until a late hour, and a general good time was indulged in.

THOSE PRESENT.

Among those present were Moses Bensinger, Louis Bensinger, Parker Byers, of Lafayette, Ind.; Tom Wallace, Alonzo Morris, Joseph Dion, Maurice Vignaux, Jacob Schaefer, A. Troescher, of New York; Maurice Daly, George Schmidt, William Sexton, Milward Adams, James Small, Thomas Foley, Charles Matthews, T. Z. Cowles, Col. N. A. Reid Jr., Edward C. Paige, Isaac H. Deutsch, of Cincinnati; Albert Durkee, Daniel Strauss, A. D'Ancono, L. Adler, Henry Miller, W. S. Eden, Charles P. Miller, M. H. Berg, R. L. Cary Jr., T. E. McFarland, E. A. Skeele, and Eugene Carter.

Mr. Bensinger Says His Firm Didn't and Couldn't Afford To.

CHICAGO, April 7.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—In your issue of today appears an interview with a billiard expert—name not given—who gives it as his opinion that the great match of last night between Schaefer and Vignaux was "fixed" beforehand for Shaefer to win. I cannot imagine who this expert can be with so little regard for the interests of billiards and with so little common sense as to allege that this match was crooked. I should really like to know who the expert is that thinks my firm is so lost to honor and business principles as to stoop to the "fixing" of a billiard match. I assume that such is the meaning of the expression "parties especially interested," etc. If that firm is "especially interested" in one thing more than another it is in upholding the honor and credit of the game of billiards.

I will not enter into this question further than to say that I will give $10,000 to any charitable institution of Chicago for one scintilla of proof, of reasonable supposition even, that the game of last night was not an honest, manly contest decided on its merits. I do not ask for full proof—I only want to know one little reason for the insinuation that the decisive match was not square and honest in every particular. I am deeply interested in knowing by what right or for what reason the integrity of that contest is called in question, and mean precisely what I say in offering $10,000 for any proof whatever. Yours truly,

M. BENSINGER.

Mr. Schaefer Emphatically Declares that He Didn't.

CHICAGO, April 7.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—The insinuations, given in the form of an interview with some unnamed sporting man in your paper this morning, that the game between Mr. Vignaux and myself on Friday night was decided in my favor before it was commenced, was something I had not looked for in THE TRIBUNE. I cannot believe that anything so unreasonable will receive credence from any one who witnessed all the games of the tournament and viewed them intelligently. So far as I am concerned, I do not care to argue the matter; but I do wish to state emphatically that there is no truth in the statement in so far as it refers to me. I went to Central Music-Hall to play billiards, and do my best to win. I did win, and won honestly. It seems to me that, if you will look at the score carefully, the fact will suggest itself that no player would be compelled to "throw off" to such an extent that it would be detected in order to lose a game against the record made by me last night. In some of his efforts Mr. Vignaux was unfortunate, but such things are not uncommon. I never played a game and never saw a game played where slip-ups did not occur with more or less frequency. It is impossible to avoid them. I myself missed shots last night that I could make a thousand times in succession. But I did not miss them intentionally, and I am certain that my opponent did not. My opinion is that the person interviewed by your reporter was a loser by the result, and that the opinion so flippantly expressed was based on the amount of worthless pool-tickets in his possession after the game. Such an opinion is not worth talking about, and I am astonished that THE TRIBUNE should without investigation give it publicity.

I am sorry to have felt called upon to intrude upon so much of your space. Before I conclude, however, I wish to be understood that I challenge the most thorough investigation, and that I am ready to defend the emblem I have won against all comers.

JACOB SCHAEFER.

CREME DES CHRONIQUES.

What the Alleged Wits of Paris Find to Say in Their Newspapers.

[Adapted by New York World.]—Remark by Cardinal de Retz, which is as true now as it was when it was uttered: "A politician must often change his opinions if he wishes always to remain in the same party."

A gentleman who has been thinking of buying a hack, having visited a menagerie, comes home radiant with joy. "I'm going to buy one of them zebras," he said: "one of those rifled horses. They must carry much further than the ordinary sort!"

"I thought," remarked the victim, after the dentist had dragged him around the room several times, "I thought you advertized to extract teeth without pain?" "So, I do, sir," replies the operator, blandly; "it doesn't hurt me at all to yank 'em!"

A father has been complaining to a friend of the family of the conduct of his prodigal son. "You ought to reason with him seriously," says the friend of the family. "So I do! So I have!" says the father in despair, "but it has no effect. The young scoundrel will listen to nobody that isn't a fool like himself. I want you to go and talk with him!"

A mother's pride. "What! Your son is only a Sergeant?" "Yes, that is his grade, but"—with pride, and confidentially—"in reality, you know, he is a Captain, but he doesn't publish the fact because he doesn't want to wound the feelings of his comrades who haven't got on as rapidly as he has!"

The delightful French gallantry of the olden time has not yet flown from earth. A beautiful rosebud of a girl is walking up the drawing-room leaning on the arm of her father. "What, mademoiselle," says a gentleman of the old school, "do you walk? Bless me, I thought you were on a stem!"

A lady of mature age is consulting her lawyer about instituting proceedings for divorce: "I perceive," says the lawyer, "you wish to obtain a separation because of his cruelty." "I wouldn't have minded so much being beaten," sobs the lady, "if he had beaten me in an ordinary manner, but he didn't—the scoundrel didn't sir, he used to thrash me with——" "With? Compose yourself, my dear madame." "With my poor, dear first husband's cane!"

Breakfast at home. "Well, madame," says the head of the house, who has apparently got out of bed on the wrong side, "what have you got for breakfast this morning? Boiled eggs, eh? Seems to me you never have anything but boiled eggs, Boiled Erebus! And what else, madame, may I ask?" "Mutton chops, my dear," says the wife, timidly. "Mutton chops!" echoes the husband, bursting into a peal of sardonic laughter. "Mutton chops! I could have guessed it. By the living jingo, madame, if ever I eat another meal inside this house——" and jamming on his hat and slamming the door, the aggrieved man bounds down the stairs and betakes himself to the restaurant. "What'll you have, sir?" says the waiter, politely, handing him the bill of fare. "Ah!" says the guests, having glanced over it, "let me see! Bring me two boiled eggs and a mutton chop!"

The parents have taken the youngest of their three daughters to the theatre. They had had their doubts about taking one of the elder ones, for the play was rather of the "naturalistic" kind; but as for the youngest, poor child, she would never see anything wrong in it. At one of the most "naturalistic" scenes the little maid observes with all unimaginable gravity: "You were quite right, ma! It would never have done to let the girls see it!"

WEST SIDE GAS.

Stockholders Who Propose to Make It Lively for the Management.

A Statement of Their Grievances—The Stock and Bonds of the Company.

The Price of Gas to Be Reduced Fifty Cents a Thousand—Gas for Heating Purposes.

THE TRIBUNE of yesterday gave the outlines of the troubles of some of the stockholders of the People's Gas-Light & Coke Company, who claim that Mr. Billings, the President, has not treated them fairly, and that he has endeavored to keep them from having a voice in the annual meetings of the stockholders of the company; that he has made no statements to them; and that he refused to give any satisfactory answers to questions propounded by interested stockholders. The leading spirits in the controversy against Mr. A. M. Billings are Messrs. John D. Parker and James Wilmott. The latter has engaged as his attorney Mr. Edwin F. Bayley, and Mr. Parker has retained Messrs. Ela & Parker as his attorneys in the matter. The principals were present at the annual meeting held April 3, but they alleged then that Mr. Billings endeavored to adjourn the meeting without consulting the stockholders present, claiming that a majority of the stock was not represented, the proxies of Commodore Garrison, which had been expected, not having arrived from New York. Mr. Billings agreed to adjourn until the next day, and the meeting was so adjourned. It is reported that this session was a decidedly lively one, and in the midst of it Judge Corydon Beckwith and Luther Dearborn, the company's attorneys, were called in to quell the turmoil. The result was an adjournment to the 20th of June, at 11 o'clock in the morning. It was claimed that Mr. Billings had not protected the stockholders as he should have done; and he had paid no dividends to them in these many years; that he had accumulated more money in the treasury than was necessary, and that there was enough on hand now to pay a dividend of 25 per cent. Furthermore, it was alleged that he had denied information to some of the stockholders, and that he had refused them access to certain books and papers.

MR. PARKER'S STATEMENTS.

Yesterday a TRIBUNE reporter called upon Mr. John D. Parker at his office, No. 156 Washington street. "I have no objection," said he, "to getting this matter in THE TRIBUNE. In fact, I think that the facts should be published. I own 140 shares of the stock of the company, and Mr. James Wilmott owns 160 shares. Mine represent a par value of $14,000, and Mr. Wilmott's $16,000. We have coöperating with us in this matter stockholders owning $400,000 more. Garrison and Billings control a bare majority of the stock. Mr. Billings represents $600,000, and the Commodore $2,000,000. There has been $5,000,000 of stock issued, and some $4,000,000 in bonds. Garrison and Billings hold a majority of these mortgage bonds. There is not over $1,000,000 worth of the bonds held in England, and the same party who holds these also owns some stock, how large a block, however, I can't tell."

NO DIVIDENDS SINCE 1874.

"Do you get any dividends on your shares?" asked the reporter.

"Hold on, now," said Mr. Parker, "don't be in a hurry. That stock was issued in 1874, and it has never paid a dividend. It is nominally worth 25 cents on the dollar, but you can't sell it for that. The little syndicate is keeping that stock down so as to freeze out somebody, I think. Look at it! It is preposterous to say that this gas stock of the West Side concern is not earning anything. It ought to be worth more than par. Here you can't sell it at 25 cents on the dollar, while the stock of the South Side company can't be bought at $200 a share, when the par value is only $100."

"But tell me about your annual-meeting experience."

"The annual meeting of the stockholders of the company was called for April 3. I went over to the office at 11 o'clock in the morning and presented myself to Mr. Billings. He proposed to adjourn the meeting at once, to which I objected. He then claimed as an excuse for his action that Mr. Garrison's proxies had not arrived from New York, but that they might get here the next day, and he suggested that we might adjourn over one day and see if those proxies arrived, and if they did that the meeting could then be held. I agreed to the proposition, and so we adjourned. The next morning at 11 o'clock Mr. Wilmott and myself were at the West Side office. Mr. Billings said that the proxies of Mr. Garrison had not arrived, and as a majority of the stock was not represented no business could be done, and he would adjourn the meeting. I objected to this summary procedure. I claimed that as a stockholder I had a right to organize the meeting. I talked pretty freely for my rights as a stockholder, and I demanded to see a copy of the by-laws. I then learned that no printed copies were in existence, and just then Mr. Billings' son came in. The father whispered something in the son's ear, and he took his hat and rushed out. Pretty soon he came back with the book in which the by-laws were originally transcribed, and I discovered that only a majority of the stock could transact business at the annual meeting. Judges Beckwith and Dearborn came in during our controversy, and we agreed, at my suggestion, to adjourn until June 20. We had a lively time for more than half an hour, and the upshot of it was that Mr. Billings discovered that he could not run the concern without interference from the other stockholders. No annual statements of the affairs of the company have ever been published. This thing I insist that he shall do at the next meeting: that he shall make a report in writing—a complete statement from April 3, 1882, to April 3, 1883."

THE NEW WEST SIDE WORKS.

"Is there any controversy as to the new works recently completed by Mr. Billings?"

"Mr. Billings built these new works to make water gas. These works cost not exceed, I think, $300,000. His idea I rather guess is to turn them in to the People's Gaslight & Coke Company at a goodly figure."

"There is to be a new concern?"

"I don't know. Judge Beckwith, Judge Dearborn, and Dearborn's son have taken out the papers for the incorporation of the West Side Gas Company. It is my theory that they propose to get hold of all the surplus stock that they can and buy the works with the money that ought to go to pay dividends to the stockholders. Mr. Billings gives as an excuse for not paying any dividends to the stockholders that he he has had to use the money for construction and in the extension of the works. I asked him before I left where he was going to lay new mains this year, and the only street he could name was Halsted, where he was going to lay an additional main at a cost not to exceed $20,000. I propose to make a war on the manner in which the company has been managed. It will have to adopt different methods in running its business. If no full and satisfactory statement is made at the June meeting then I shall go into courts and sustain the rights of the minority of the stockholders to the fullest extent."

EXAMINING THE BOOKS.

After having had his talk with Mr. Parker THE TRIBUNE reporter took a walk down to 108 Dearborn street, where Mr. James Wilmott has his office. The reporter referred to the facts obtained from Mr. Parker, and Mr. Wilmott said:

"Yes, I own 160 shares of the stock of the People's Gas-Light & Coke Company, and I have been a stockholder for three or four years. I have been going over the books of the company since the 1st of January."

"Had you any fun in doing so?" asked the reporter.

"Well, No. I called over to see Mr. Billings between sixty and seventy times before I got to see him. He was either sick, just gone out, or something else. But I finally got his eye and ear. I don't think that he actually intended to dodge me, but he acted like it. I propounded a list of written questions to him, but he never replied to them."

"What were those questions?"

"I will produce them in court, and not before. I insisted upon my right as a stockholder of the company to examine the books. They finally accorded me this right, but I could find no stock-book, and they refused to produce one, though I demanded it, in order and I might learn who the stockholders were and are."

"Did you find anything wrong in the books?"

"I found many items in the expense account which I did not think were in the interest of the stockholders. Too much money has been paid out for expensive lawyers to defend Mr. Billings against inquiring stockholders. The money should have been used to pay dividends to stockholders. There has been issued $8,000,000 in stock, $4,000,000 of which is full paid, and $4,000,000 on which 6¼ per cent has been paid. Then the company has issued $2,100,000 in first-mortgage bonds, and $2,500,000 in second-mortgage bonds. They had a very funny way of selling these bonds. They divided the bonds among themselves, and the money received for them was not used for the construction of any works. When these bonds were divided there were only two stockholders—Billings and Garrison, and they made a good investment when they bought those bonds at 75 and 80 cents on the dollar. Look at the new scheme. Mr. Billings has put up new works, and now Judge Beckwith, Judge Dearborn, and his son made application for a charter for the West Side Gas Company. The scheme is thin on its face. Dearborn's son works for Billings. But I will make it interesting for Mr. Billings. He said when I came over that my object was blackmail, but I am in earnest, as he will discover."

MR. BILLINGS IS ILL.

A TRIBUNE reporter was last evening detailed to call upon Mr. A. M. Billings at his residence, on West Lake street, to see what he had to say in regard to the fight which was being made by Parker and Wilmott against him as the President of the People's Gas-Light & Coke Company. Mr. Billings was sick in bed, and could not be seen. Mr. C. K. Garrison Billings, his son, however, came to the door. "Father is too ill," said he, "to see you." The reporter was invited in, and ushered into a comfortable apartment, where Judge Beckwith was found enjoying a good cigar.

"I have nothing to say," said young Mr. Billings, "except that Mr. Wilmott examined the books and papers of the company for something like three weeks. We afforded him every facility, and treated him with courtesy. But after it was all through with, it looked to me as though there was just a tinge of something queer about it."

"Do you think anybody is back of this?"

GAS COMES DOWN.

"I don't know anything about it. I will tell you this, however: On and after the 1st of May the People's Gas-Light & Coke Company will make an additional discount of 50 cents per 1,000 feet of gas, making $1 discount in all, upon bills paid on or before the 10th of each month, thus reducing the price of illuminating gas to consumers to $2 per 1,000 feet net. After the 1st of May we will also be prepared to furnish heating gas at $1.50 net per 1,000 feet to all those who apply for meters for heating gas and who are willing to comply with the requirements, which are similar to those for securing an illuminating gas meter, one of which is that all bills shall be paid on or before the 10th of each and every month. The manufacture of heating gas is a new thing, and the price will be lowered as soon as we find that we can sell it cheaper and at a profit. We hope to get an increased consumption of our illuminating gas at the reduced price."

The reporter turned to Judge Beckwith and asked him what he had to say in regard to the Wilmott and Parker attacks. The Judge hesitated a moment or two, and raising up his head said:

THE SECOND ISSUE OF STOCK.

"Wilmott, I believe, owns forty-four shares of the stock, and Parker 100, out of a capital stock of $5,000,000. I think that they are both nice men, but I rather guess that they'd like to sell their stock at par, which hasn't cost them much. There are $4,600,000 of 6 per cent mortgage bonds, and when the stock was issued across the face of the certificates was printed that the stock was issued subject to the bonded indebtedness of $4,600,000, so that the purchaser of that stock knew exactly what he was buying. These bonds and the stock were issued by the unanimous consent of all the stockholders, and every man who came in knew just what he was buying when he bought the new certificates of stock. Some of these bonds were purchased by Mr. Garrison and some by Mr. Billings. Others were taken in London, and some were taken by parties in New York, who were neither connected with Commodore Garrison nor Mr. Billings. I know of one New York party—Jessup Parton & Co.—who purchased a lot of these bonds because they considered them a good investment. The business of the company is done by a Board of Directors, and nothing is done except by the orders of the board. Every act of every official of the company has always been approved by that board. Under the charter and the by-laws of the company the annual meeting of the stockholders is required to be called by notice published in the newspapers, but if a majority of the stockholders do not attend that meeting, either in person or by proxy, then no business can be transacted because of the want of a quorum.

"The charters of many corporations in the State have been so amended as to allow a majority of the stockholders present to transact business. But the charter of the People's Gaslight & Coke Company has not been amended in that respect. The Board of Directors always caused an annual notice to be published, and the reason why no annual meeting was held at the proper time was because the stockholders did not think it proper to attend. On the day after the one appointed for the last annual meeting Messrs. Parker and Wilmott called upon Mr. Billings in relation to an annual meeting, and he stated to them the reason why no annual meeting had been held, and that he would call a special meeting of the stockholders if they so desired, and that he would submit to such stockholders a full and complete statement of the affairs of the company."

"What about the profits?"

"The earnings of the company have hitherto been appropriated to the payment of the interest on the bonds as it fell due, and the surplus was expended in the proper extensions of mains and the works, in order to meet the demands of the public."

"But it is charged by Mr. Wilmott that there is a large surplus on hand?"

"The surplus earnings on hand are not more than sufficient to pay the interest and the bonds as they mature, make proper extensions during the current year, pay the fixed charges, and have sufficient funds on hand to conduct the business with economy. In order to conduct the gas business properly it is necessary to take advantage of the market in buying coal, pipes, and other material for ready cash."

"Mr. Wilmott says that you refused to let him look over the stock-book."

"There is no law of the State which allows a man to look over the stock-book. A stockholder can look into it as far as his own stock is concerned, or as to whether there has been an overissue by which he might be deprived of his rights, and also see whether his own stock is genuine. But he has no right to see who the stockholders are. Judge Drummond decided so in the Rock Island case. There the stockholders tried to do the same thing. I told the court that he wanted neither to know what the earnings or expenses were, but merely to know who were the stockholders, so that he might secure their proxies. The court would not tolerate that."

"Are you going to organize the West-Side Gas Company?"

"I don't know anything about it."

THE TEN-CENT SOUTHERN PIE.

[New Orleans Times-Democrat.]—The principal feature about the common run of eating-houses south of the Ohio River is the plain, unassuming little apple-pie which they set forth. You can buy the pie for only 10 cents, but it is seldom that a passenger eats more than one in a lifetime. After you have eaten it and drank one or two glasses of water the pie gets sociable and gradually impresses upon your mind the fact that you will not be lonesome as long as it travels with you. The strangest thing is you never do. About fifteen minutes after you have made its acquaintance the waistband of your pants cannot meet its note and demands an extension. A half-hour later, when you retire to your berth in the sleeping-car and fall into a troubled slumber, the pie, not being at all sleepy, concludes to have some fun. The first thing you see in your dreams is your own body gradually swelling into the shape of a balloon. The balloon gets larger and larger until it pushes the upper berth to the top of the car, and you hear the smothered cries for help of the man it contains. The swelling increases, and you may imagine that you float upward and bump against the roof of the car like a toy balloon which has escaped from the grasp of a child. The feeling lasts for some time, but suddenly you swell until you fill the interior of the car and suffocate the passengers, when you explode and the train is wrecked. Opening your eyes, you find the porter trying to pry your knees from under your chin with a crowbar, while a number of passengers, aroused by your sepulchral groans, stand around in their night-clothes and want to know if you feel sick. This tickles the little pie, and it kicks up its little heels with delight, and makes you froth at the mouth and bowl like a wolf. The 10-cent pie is proud of the fact that it has taken hold of a strong man, who had been shot through and never murmured about it, and doubled him up until his spine cracked, hurled him from one side of his berth to the other, and made him bellow for paregoric like a child. This is the style of pie prepared by eating-houses in the South for the benefit of travelers. It weighs four ounces, contains three dozen full-grown cramps, and can always be purchased for the small sum of 10 cents.

CHEMICAL ACTION.

It Was Tried on the Tally-Sheet of the Fourth Precinct of the Second Ward,

And the Vote for Fitzgerald for Assessor Was Easily Raised from 307 to 507.

But Even This Scientific Treatment Failed to Beat a Two-Thousand Majority.

Crookedness of the Most Idiotic Kind Discovered in the Second Ward.

The canvass of the returns in the South Town elections was begun at 10 o'clock yesterday morning, the board being composed of C. E. Piper, Frank Drake, and Claude J. Adams. Ex-County-Attorney C. H. Willett guarded the interests of Mr. Piper, candidate for Collector, and J. P. Wilson and William Page were retained as counsel by Mr. Drake. Mr. James P. Root represented William Fitzgerald, who was a candidate for the office of Assessor, and Pliny V. Smith represented Horen, who ran for Supervisor.

Nearly all the candidates on the South-Town ticket were present, among them being Frank Gilbert, W. F. Crane, Tuley Upton, Randall H. White, M. A. Driscoll, Daniel C. McKinnon, and Rockafellow and Callahan.

Several informalities were found in the returns, and one instance of fraud, not only palpable, but ridiculous as far as its probable effect was concerned. In the Second Precinct of the First Ward there were nine more votes on the poll-book than appeared on the tally-sheet, and four more in the Fifth Precinct of the same ward. Nine precincts were passed by the board for informalities like those mentioned.

A SENSATION.

A decided sensation was created on the opening of the envelope containing the poll-book and certificates of returns of the Fourth Precinct of the Second Ward. The vote of that district as counted Tuesday night was: Drake, 365; Fitzgerald, 307. The envelope was kept back for three days, and when opened yesterday the tally sheet showed: Drake, 165; Fitzgerald, 507. In the case of all the other town offices 200 votes had been taken from the Republican candidates and given to their Democratic competitors. It appears that the envelope which had been held back was taken into a saloon in the vicinity of the South Town office by the judges of election. It was then broken open, and, after some clumsy changes had been made, was resealed in a very awkward manner. The names of the candidates on the certificates were erased with chemicals and were transposed. The figures showing the number of votes were erased and others substituted. The criminality of those who made the alterations is shown beyond question, but their act appears idiotic, from the fact that Drake's majority was about 2,000, and the counting of a few hundred fictitious votes for his opponent could not materially affect the result.

A CLUMSY JOB.

The job was awkwardly done, moreover, for the chemicals had discolored the paper, and the outlines of the original writing were dimly visible. Beyond placing themselves in a dangerous predicament, it is difficult to see what the perpetrators of the fraud expected to accomplish.

The other informalities discovered were of minor consequence. In the Second Precinct of the Second Ward 100 more votes were credited to Hickey for Supervisor on the poll-list than on the tally-sheet. In the Third Precinct of the Fourth Ward there was nothing to show that the judges and clerks had been sworn in. Best was elected Collector and Horen Supervisor. As to the office of Clerk there is a controversy. McKinnon received more votes than Henry Malzacher, but about 800 ballots were cast for Joseph Malzacher. The Democrats claim that they were intended for Henry and should be given to him; while McKinnon's friends insist that, on the face of the returns, he is entitled to the certificate. The board adjourned till tomorrow without finishing their work.

Assessor Drake Knows Exactly How the Work Was Done.

Mr. Frank Drake, South Town Assessor, was called upon by a TRIBUNE reporter last night and asked what he had to say about the alleged frauds practiced by the Judges and Clerk in the Fourth Precinct of the Second Ward. Mr. Drake said:

"The original returns made out on the evening of the election gave me 365 votes and gave Fitzgerald 307. The change made in the returns takes 200 from my vote and adds that number to Fitzgerald's, making his vote 507. The parties who doctored the returns took the same number of votes from the other Republican candidates and gave them to the Democratic candidates. The tally-sheet returned to the Town Clerk was not the original one, but was one drawn up anew, and signed by the Judges and Clerks of election for that precinct, and it corresponded in every respect with the altered returns of the certificate or poll-book. I was informed yesterday by a reliable person that the three Judges of that precinct got the ballot-box from a saloon on State street, about 9 o'clock Thursday morning, and drove with it over to a saloon on Clark street, not a thousand miles from the north-west corner of Monroe, and returned the box to the office of the Town Clerk about half-past 3 in the afternoon."

"Do you propose to have the Judges and Clerks of that precinct arrested for fraud?"

"I understand that some of the electors of that precinct propose to take some legal action in the matter; but if they do not I certainly shall do so immediately."

"In what condition did you find the returns from the other precincts?"

"Very good, with the exception of some trifling irregularities which usually occur, and which can be easily accounted for and remedied."

"What majority did the canvass of the vote give you today?"

"My majority was 2,338. My own ward, the Fourth, gave me a majority of 2,864."

Mr. Whalen Regrets that the Job Was Not Done More Neatly.

A TRIBUNE reporter last evening was unable to find Mr. McNally, the legislator who is alleged to have trifled with the ballot-box of the Fourth Precinct of the Second Ward, but he succeeded in having a talk with William Whalen, an alleged participant in the fraud. Mr. Whalen had little to say on the subject except in the way of a general denial, which also covered a regret that he had not had an opportunity to do a neater job than was done. He had not had much experience in the business of altering election returns, but he thought that even a novice should have done better than it was said the manipulators of the returns in the Second Precinct had done. As for Fitzgerald, he was his friend; but he had nothing to do with the campaign, and he did not think McNally was clever enough even to participate in such a job. No election business was done in his saloon outside of a few bets and the usual talk.

A Ballot-Box on Its Travels.

H. T. Murray, one of the judges of the Fourth Precinct, was discovered at No 1226 State street, the place where polls were held. Mr. Murray stated what he claimed to be the truth, and said that he counted the vote himself after the polls were closed, and certified to the fact of 365 votes being cast for Drake and 307 for Fitzgerald; that he locked the box and placed thereon his private seal, and then turned it over to Louis Oppenheimer, the proprietor of No. 1226, for safekeeping, and saw the box locked up. Wednesday morning he left word for E. S. Levi, also a judge of election, and who received the box from the Town Clerk, to return it on Wednesday morning, but Levi did not come for the box, and on Thursday he sent a boy to Levi's house, but as that person was not at home, he sent for Pat Dunn, the other judge, and instructed him to carry the box down to the office of the Town Board. While they were getting the box from Oppenheimer, McNally and John Dorgan drove up in a carriage and offered to drive them down town. They accepted the offer and drove to the corner of Clark and Adams streets, where he got out for the purpose of delivering the ballot-box containing the city returns to the City Clerk at the City-Hall. He watched the carriage drive up Madison and turn off on Dearborn, but paid no further attention to the matter until he was informed of the alterations made in the returns last evening. He said that he had nothing whatever to do with the manipulation of the box, and was positive that Levi was also innocent.

The reporter received a "pointer" that John Horen, the Republican candidate for Supervisor on the South Town ticket, could give some information regarding the matter, and he was immediately looked up. He said he had received some information from a person connected with the Central Station, but whose name he withheld, that something crooked was going on concerning the Fourth Precinct ballot-box and he and Detective Kohler, a candidate for Constable, watched the entire party from the moment they secured the box at No. 1226 State street. He said that McNally, Dunn, Levi, and a man whom he did not know by name, but who was a "pal" of Cloonan, drove away with the box in charge at about 9 a. m. on Thursday, and they watched them turn off on Adams, and there lost track. He then separated from Detective Kohler and went to the Town Clerk's office, but, finding the box had not arrived, determined to hunt it up. A few minutes later he discovered the carriage in front of Billy Whelan's, on Monroe street, and saw the party enter there with the box.

His story contradicts that of Murray, inasmuch as he is positive that Levi was with the party, and is just as positive that he saw him enter Whelan's place. He also states that he then returned to the town office and told Howser to go over to Whelan's and see what they were doing; that Howser went over, and on his return said that he found them all there and willing to bet any amount that the whole South Town Democratic ticket would be elected. In the afternoon he was at the South Town office, and, about 4 o'clock, Dunn brought in the box, and he heard Clerk Piper say, "This is a nice time to bring in the box; forty hours after time." Dunn appeared confused, but did not reply.

In company with Mr. Horen the reporter visited a saloon at the corner of State and Twelfth streets and found Pat Dunn, the judge who it is claimed had charge of the ballot-box from 9 a. m. until 4 p. m. on Thursday. He proved to be an obstinate man to interview, and would not give any information. In reply to a question as to what he knew about it he said:

"I ain't got nothing to say, and don't know nothing about it."

"Did you convey the box to the Town Clerk?"

"I guess I did."

"Where did you get it?"

"I don't know; somewhere on State street."

"When?"

"I don't know."

"Was it in the morning?"

"I guess it was."

"What time did you deliver it to the Town Clerk."

"I don't know."

"Well, you were nearly seven hours in conveying the box ten blocks. What did you do all this time?"

"I don't know."

"Who was with you?"

"Several persons; I don't know their names."

"Did any one have the box during these seven hours but you?"

"They might."

"Did you go into Whelan's saloon?"

"We might have gone some place and got a drink."

"Then you refuse to say anything about it?"

"I don't know nothing."

And he looked it.

Returning to Oppenheimer's saloon the reporter found John Dorgan, who it is said had a finger in the pie, playing cards, but he refused to say a word about the matter.

"Louis Oppenheimer, in whose saloon the polls were held, and who also had charge of the ballot-box for over thirty hours, has a duplicate of the original returns with the names of the Judges and Clerks affixed, and says that he proposes to keep it until the proper authorities call for it. He allowed the reporter to see it, and it corresponds exactly with the returns made on the night of the election.

MAYOR HARRISON.

His Annual Stump Speech to the Reporters on City Affairs.

Mayor Harrison sent for the City-Hall reporters of the different papers yesterday afternoon, and when they were seated in his office he proceeded to make a stump-speech to them.

"The first thing I want to talk about," said he, "is this: The newspapers attack me because I don't drive the thieves and vagrants out of town, and yet the newspapers don't help me to have passed by the Republican Legislature the bill that was prepared by the Law Department giving policemen the constabulary power that they had under the old city charter. In other words, the powers we thought we possessed until the decision of the court in December showed that we were mistaken. We are greatly distressed by the lack of those powers. Our policemen are to a very great extent powerless. The bill ought not to be objected to by anybody that I can conceive of.

SALOON LICENSES.

"I am having prepared a bill that will give the Mayor of Chicago the means of exercising the discretion which he is supposed to have in the matter of issuing saloon licenses. As it is now, I cannot refuse to issue a license unless I have direct and palpable proof that the applicant is a violator of the city ordinances. A great many people think that the Mayor has absolute discretion in the matter. It is simply an official discretion that he has to exercise with extreme care. I will recommend to the Council the passage of an ordinance providing that no one shall receive a license unless he shall have applied for it two weeks or a month in advance; that the name of the applicant shall be posted in some conspicuous place—the Clerk's or the Collector's office—where people can see it, and thus enable me to get the signed statement of responsible parties that he is unfit, if he is. This ordinance, with the bill to be submitted to the Legislature, will give me power to do something.

THE MORAL TERM.

"I want, in the coming two years, to use my power in a little different direction from what I have used it in the past. My first two years were devoted to bringing about a thorough reform in the finances, so as to make this city a first-class business corporation. My second term was devoted to getting the streets, bridges, viaducts, etc., in a still better condition. I left the city's morals to a very great extent to the clergy—its religion entirely to them. I want to root out of Chicago all the low dens, if I can. I want to drive them off of certain streets where they ought not to be—Clark and State streets, which ought to be business thoroughfares. Such places as are represented by THE TRIBUNE as 'black holes' should not exist.

GAMBLING.

"I want, if I can, to keep gambling in the background. I did believe in the possibility of regulating it. I still am of opinion that my theory was right, but our people are not educated up to it, and they probably think I am not educated or I would not have such a theory. For two years and a half of my term the houses were run better, I believe, than they ever had been in Chicago. It is my opinion that there were no skin games. [At this point Mike McDonald opened the door and walked in. He at once backed out, but the Mayor told him to remain.] The newspapers forced me to push things last fall by their outcry, and the result was that the law was shown to be unconstitutional. I had no means of carrying the case up, as there was no appeal by the defense. Now, I intend to say to the gamblers of Chicago earnestly that I wish them to stop gambling. I don't expect them to heed what I say, but I wish to say to them that they must run behind closed lattices, and if there is any gambling in town it must not and shall not, if I can prevent it, be done as publicly as it has been sometimes in the past. I intend to do my best on that, and I mean what I say.

HIGH LICENSE.

"I want to call your attention to another point. The increase of saloons from the time of my predecessor until now, as evidenced by the increase of licenses, is more apparent than real. There has been an increase of several hundred, but I know that more saloons have been forced to take out a license than in years past. [McDonald became weary at this juncture and left. His Honor remarked that it was singular 'Mike' dropped in when he did, as he hadn't been there 'for months.'] Mr. Heath was not to blame. The increase is due to a more efficient police system.

THE TWO PER CENT LIMITATION.

"Another thing has been touched upon by the newspapers, and I have received several letters on the subject—that is, breaking the rule as to the 2 per cent limitation by passing an amendment which would enable the Council to appropriate money to complete the City-Hall. The people are under the impression—I judge so from the letters—that this will do away with the 2 per cent limitation and open the doors wide. The amendatory bill simply authorizes cities to levy taxes for the completion of buildings that were commenced prior to the Limitation act."

Statements of a Citizen of the Territory Regarding the Situation.

Uselessness of the Soldiers—The Settlers Would Prefer to Protect Themselves.

Mr. George W. Parsons, of Tombstone, Ari., who is now stopping in this city, was called upon yesterday by a reporter to learn something about the recent Indian outbreak in that part of the Southwest. Mr. Parsons has spent about three years in the Territory and the neighboring State of Sonora, Mexico, and is thoroughly conversant with the country, its resources and wants.

He describes Arizona as being wonderfully rich in deposits of the precious metals. Several bonanza mines have already been opened, and the attention of capitalists has been called to others which promise to be equally rich, but the troubles with the Indians are proving a serious drawback to the development of the Territory. This last outbreak, he says, has put Arizona back another year and frightened away people who were preparing to settle there and make permanent investments.

THE PRESENT TROUBLES.

"The difficulties now," says the gentleman, "are with the Indians, the outlaws who infested this region having nearly all been driven away or overcome. The mining-camp is situated between the San Carlos Agency on the north and the Sierra Madre Mountains in Old Mexico. Between the agency Indians and those in Old Mexico there is constant communication, and they are continually inciting each other to commit depredations. Those living south of the border line cross over into United States Territory and the San Carlos Indians go over into Mexico, committing all sorts of atrocities while on the war-path. Gen. Crook tagged the agency Indians, and one of them was killed a short time ago, which proves beyond a doubt that all the hostile Indians do not live south of the border line. Since I came north several of my most intimate friends have been killed by these savages."

THE MILITARY.

"Have you not soldiers and Gen. Crook to protect the country?"

"We are supposed to have four companies of United States troops at Fort Huachuca, a six-company post twenty-five miles west of Tombstone. These soldiers are always about twenty-four hours behind time in following up a band of savages. The Indians make sallies, murder the whites, and are back safe and sound in their mountain retreats long before the troops are ready to follow them. A short time ago five men were killed by the savages only seven miles from the post. Four companies of soldiers were ordered to start in pursuit at 5 o'clock in the morning, and it was 3 o'clock in the afternoon when they reached the scene of the massacre. Of course all the Indians had escaped. Gen. Crook does not seem to be doing any better than his predecessors. He has never subjugated the Chiricahua Apachés, who live in Old Mexico, and are continually making hostile incursions into Arizona, keeping up a steady communication with the Indians on the agency. The latter are well provided with guns and ammunition. It has been the custom to have about twenty-five Indian scouts at the different posts. These devils are kept a few months, till they have been drilled in our ways, and then they are sent back to the agency, and a new lot taken on. They steal our guns and ammunition, and then turn against us, and supply their neighbors. The officers would rather not have Indians for fighting-men, because they are so treacherous, but they are taken and drilled in accordance with orders from the Government. Two or three of those supposed to be the most reliable are employed as trailers. The savage nature of these Indians is illustrated by the horrible deed committed by one of their scouts. He agreed with some of the officers at the post that if they would give him a certain number of cartridges he would bring in his own father's head. He went, and soon came back with the head, and then offered to bring in the 'old woman's,' his mother's, if they would give him more cartridges. This is a specimen of the sort of soldiers these red devils make."

WITHDRAW THE TROOPS.

"Why do not the soldiers protect the people?"

"I do not know. It is generally believed that money is being made out of the agencies. If the United States Government would only withdraw all the troops in Arizona, and tell the settlers there to take care of themselves, they would soon settle this Indian question. These bands of hostiles are small in number, and they could soon be disposed of, but so long as the soldiers remain, the people naturally look to them for protection. The Mexican Government is willing to cooperate with ours in the subjugation of these savages, and if Mexico was like some of the great Powers she would bring in big and just claims against our Government for damages and depredations committed within her territory by our agency Indians."

"Arizona," remarked Mr. Parsons, "has a beautiful climate, and is one of the finest mineral countries. She will soon have ample railroad communication with the outside world. All that is needed now to develop her resources is protection against the Indians. The failure of the Government to subjugate these hostile tribes is a serious drawback to the welfare of the Territory."

HIP AND THIGH.

A Stubbornly Contested Wrestling Match in Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., April 7.—[Special.]—Joseph Acton and Thomas Connor, both well known middle-weights, wrestled today at Pastime Park for $500 a side, Lancashire style, best two out of three falls. There was difficulty about securing a referee, but finally Thomas Wild, who has wrestled five times in public, was agreed on. In the first fall there was cautious work for the first ten minutes, no advantage being gained by either contestant. At length Connor forced Acton upon his hands and knees, and locking his arms around him tried all he knew to turn him over. Acton braced himself and in a trice both men were on their feet turning and twisting, pulling and wrenching, but neither gave an inch. The contest at this time seemed to be in Connor's favor, but Acton suddenly turned the tables by tearing away from his grip and throwing him bodily to the ground. The fall was considered a pretty one, and Connor's legs were bruised and blood flowing from his left knee. Time, sixteen minutes. In the second fall Acton had the best of it from the start, and by sheer strength threw his man on his back in ten minutes. Connor was handled by Owen McCarthy and Acton by Arthur Chambers. Much money changed hands on the match, the betting being about even. Time, ten minutes.

McVICKER'S.

The theatre-goers of Chicago and vicinity are again reminded of the fact that the 2,500th consecutive and continuous performance of HAZEL KIRKE, the purest and best of all plays, will occur at McVicker's Theatre on Tomorrow (Monday) Evening, April 9. This never-to-be-forgotten event will be celebrated by the Madison Square Theatre Company by presenting all ladies who attend with an elegant souvenir token commemorative of the occasion. The said souvenir will be a costly and elegant gift, and far surpassing anything of the kind ever given here before. No play in this or any other country has ever enjoyed the popularity, the financial success, or the length of its run as has HAZEL KIRKE. There are many reasons—good ones, too—for this unequaled popularity. In the first place, HAZEL KIRKE is one of the few plays that pleases all classes of people from the millionaire down to the humblest toiler in the land. It is a play that does one's heart and soul good to see, and it is a compliment to the taste of the American people that they have so appreciated its merits. The purity and its absolute freeness from all sensational and immoral tendencies has stamped it a play for all times, and one to which no father is afraid to take his son, or a mother her daughter to. This one fact alone is of itself sufficient to warrant its great and almost phenomenal successes. HAZEL KIRKE has always been produced with specially selected casts from the Madison Square Theatre, whose reputation is now so firmly established that anything now bearing its name theatre-goers everywhere recognize as a trademark of merit, artistic excellence, and worth. In the present instance the cast is a very great one, and comprises the veteran C. W. Couldock, Mrs. E. L. Davenport, Miss Bijou Heron (daughter of the late Matilda Heron, and considered the "ideal" Hazel), Miss May Roberts, Miss Maude Osborne, Messrs. Geo. W. Howard, Henry J. Miller, W. H. Crompton, W. B. Cahill, and others.

Mr. J. C. DUFF..........................Manager,
Of Lecocq's charming work,
Heart
AND Hand!
Which has been received with genuine enthusiasm by both
The Press and Public
Of this city, who unite in pronouncing the performance as being the most EMPHATIC MUSICAL SUCCESS of the present season.

The "Times" says:
"'Heart and Hand' continues to attract large houses at Haverly's, and repeated hearing confirms the impression that Mr. Duff's company is one of the very best ever seen in comic opera, and the opera itself one of the brightest and most pleasing, in a musical aspect, of Lecocq's works. The costuming grows upon one's surprise the oftener seen. There is next to nothing of cheapness about it. The materials are rich, the colors admirably assorted, and the models, or patterns more properly, graceful and skilfully devised."

The "Herald" says:
"For splendor and grace of appearance, and for easy and pleasing performance of light music, the company is the best we remember to have seen here."

The "Inter-Ocean" says:
"The Duff Standard Opera Company have during the past week presented light opera with more strength and finish of ensemble than any similar organization that has appeared here this season. Lecocq's latest success, 'Heart and Hand,' has been produced in gorgeous spectacular style that fairly outrivals anything in the operatic line that has been presented in this city. The costumes have been fashioned after the drawings of those of the original Parisian production, and the theatre has furnished fine scene settings for the week."

The "News" Says:
"Heart and Hand at Haverly's makes a splendid entertainment for lovers of bright music, and will certainly draw large audiences throughout the week."

The "Tribune" Says:
"The principal parts are in capable hands, and the performance as a whole is really a brilliant one, excelling the previous presentation in the spectacular features and musical effectiveness. It is better sung, and there has been no cutting of the score.
"In the acting there was no forcing of fun. No such gagging and poorly digested puns as were permitted in the version formerly seen here."

In consequence of other engagements, the representations of "HEART AND HAND" are positively limited to

THE
From the N. Y. Sun, Feb. 4.

The largest orang-outang ever brought to this country was received a few days ago by Mr. Reiche, the animal and bird importer. It is an adult male, and reached here within about six weeks after its capture in an African forest. When the close front of its box was taken off the sight of men aroused it to paroxysms of rage. It would alternately squeal like a cornered rat and grunt like an angry boar. In a couple of days, however, it made an exception in favor of its keeper, a sturdy German, who supplied its frequent meals of dates, bananas, and egg yolks beaten up with sugar. Then it began to demonstrate a lively curiosity about its surroundings, and seeming to cogitate upon the problem, "What sort of a place have I got into?" When a colored man passed before it a few days ago it showed pleasure, and appeared to recognize in him the sort of human being it had been used to in its native jungle.

This rare and most wonderful creature is now on exhibition at the Dime Museum, 158 and 160 W. Madison-st., near Halsted.

THE DRAMA.

Review of the Week.

The dramatic event of the last week has been the appearance of Herr Ludwig Barnay, the eminent German tragedian, who has been seen in tragedy, comedy, and drama at the Grand Opera-House. That he has shown himself an artist of the first type there is no doubt, and he has exhibited a degree of dramatic excellence which entitles him to be ranked with Rossi, Salvini, and Booth. He possesses all the requirements of the tragic actor—magnificent physique, mobile and expressive features, well modulated voice, grace of action, and appropriateness of gesture, together with a thorough knowledge of the art of "making up" and a full appreciation of various emotions. Furthermore, he possesses an irresistible personal magnetism, and carries his audience with him at all times. Like all German actors he is versatile—can appear as the feeble and tottering Lear one evening and the next evening in the dashing rôle of Edmund Kean, presenting both with an evenness, finish, and polish which characterize all of his work. He is beyond all question one of the most consummate artists that has ever been seen in this country, and those Chicago theatre-goers who have not seen him during the week have missed a dramatic treat.

Herr Barnay has been supported by a company composed of members of the New York Thalia Theatre company and members of the celebrated Meiningen company, with whom he first appeared, and it may be said that a more evenly balanced organization has never appeared upon a Chicago stage. The actors and actresses possess that versatility which enables them to excellently render every rôle for which they are cast, and their thorough stage training contributes to the general effect of the stage pictures. Though the performances have been in German, the audiences have been largely composed of English-speaking theatre-goers, and the weakness of the so-called polyglot performances, wherein the star speaks in a foreign tongue and the members of the company speak English, has been demonstrated beyond a doubt. It is rather absurd to hear a tragedian deliver a long speech in a foreign language and then hear a subordinate chime in with "Even so, my Lord," and it is not probable that this style of entertainment will be of long life. Salvini was received better when here with his inferior company of Italians than he has been since with a good English-speaking company, and he has probably ere this seen the error of his plan.

It is a fact to be regretted that Herr Barnay's excellent performances have not met with a more hearty recognition on the part of the public. This may in part be due to the fact of his opening the engagement in "Uriel Acosta"—a play of which little is known. But his fine performance of Kean Wednesday evening aroused the German theatre-goers, and the audiences since that time have been larger and more appreciative. The engagement closes this evening with "The Death of Wallenstein."

At Hooley's the popular comedians, Robson and Crane, have been presenting Shakspeare's "Comedy of Errors" to very large audiences. It has been well cast and excellently mounted by the management, and it might be kept on another week, but the comedians prefer to appear in some of their old farce-comedy successes this week.

Roland Reed has appeared at McVicker's during the week in Fred Marsden's "Cheek" to good houses. He has elaborated the character of Dick Smythe, introduced a number of new songs, and has surrounded himself with a supporting company above the average of traveling organizations. Though not great, the play and the star are pleasing, and Mr. Reed may be able to trust to his "Cheek" in the future.

At the Academy of Music Oliver Doud Byron and his lurid drama, "Ten Thousand Miles Away," have been drawing crowded houses, and an excellent variety combination pleased large audiences at the Olympic. The smaller theatres have been well patronized.

Program for the Week.

McVicker's—"Hazel Kirke."
Hooley's—Robson and Crane.
Grand Opera-House—The Knights.
Haverly's—"Heart and Hand."
Academy of Music—McKee Rankin.
Olympic—"The Devil's Auction."

Amusements at Home.

Next week the incandescent electric light will illuminate Haverly's Theatre.

Next Monday evening the popular J. K. Emmet will appear as Fritz at Hooley's.

Harry Robinson, the minstrel, and his wife are in the city visiting James Barnes, late of the Olympic.

Fred Warde and his company will spend to-day in the city. Mr. Warde intends to make Cleveland his home.

Mrs. McKee Rankin is still ill in New York, and will not appear in "The Danites" at the Academy of Music this week.

This evening Herr Ludwig Barnay bids farewell to Chicago at the Grand. "The Death of Wallenstein" will be presented.

Mr. and Mrs. George S. Knight, who are to present "Baron Rudolph" at the Grand this week, close their season April 30.

The latest plan for a new theatre in Chicago has been broached by John Stetson and R. E. J. Miles. The fabled cost is $150,000.

This evening the German company will present at McVicker's a three-act musical piece entitled "Kyritz and Pyritz," by Michaelis.

Lester Wallack and his company will open a season at Haverly's May 7 in "Rosedale." Miss Lizzie McCaul has been engaged for the part of Rosa Leigh.

This coming summer Lewis Morrison and a good company will play a season at the Grand Opera-House and present two new plays by a Chicago journalist.

Colville's "Taken from Life" company, which includes Joseph Wheelock, J. D. Beveridge, and Miss Eme Roseau, opens at McVicker's one week from tomorrow evening.

The Boston Theatre company will begin a season of seven weeks at McVicker's Theatre next month, opening in the latest melodramatic success by Petitt and Harris, entitled "£50,000."

Roland Reed and his company leave Chicago at noon today for San Francisco, playing on the way at Cheyenne, Ogden, Salt Lake City, Eureka, Sacramento, San José, and reaching San Francisco April 23.

Bijou Heron and Henry Miller, who were members of Daly's company last season, and who were recently married, are with the Madison Square company now, and appear at McVicker's Theatre this week in "Hazel Kirke."

Thursday afternoon the Madison Square "Hazel Kirke" company will give an extra matinée at McVicker's for the benefit of the Actors' Fund of America. Tomorrow evening the 250th performance of "Hazel Kirke," and souvenirs will be presented to the ladies in attendance.

Robson and Crane play three of their old successes at Hooley's this week as follows: Sunday, Monday, and Tuesday evenings and Wednesday matinée, "Our Bachelors"; Wednesday and Thursday evenings, "Forbidden Fruit"; Friday, Saturday, and Sunday evenings and Saturday matinée, "Sharps and Flats."

Amusements Abroad.

Mrs. John Drew joins Joseph Jefferson's company April 15.

Charles Maubury recently broke his leg while making the jump in "M'liss." He will probably be confined to his bed for some weeks.

Helen Barry, the English actress, who had arranged to open in "Fedora" at the Union Square Theatre next month, has been called back to England by the sudden death of her husband.

R. E. J. Miles has decided to reconstruct the New York Bijou Theatre during the summer. It is to be reopened in September by a comic opera company under the management of E. E. Rice.

Mrs. Langtry added Galatea to her list of parts Monday evening at Cleveland. One critic called it "moderately successful," while another more appreciative says it "merits serious critical commendation," and "is refined, tender, and thoughtful."

MUSIC.

Comic Opera at Haverly's Theatre.

The Duff company, from the New York Standard Theatre, will present Lecocq's opera of "Heart and Hand" every night this week at Haverly's Theatre. The attendance so far has been large, and the opera appears to have scored a marked success. The singing is remarkably good, and in fact the musical interpretation could not easily be improved upon. Portions of the libretto might be deprived of their Zolaism without impairing the merits of the performance, but on this point the manager appears to have a different opinion, and his view is likely to prevail. The opera is put upon the stage superbly, equaled only by the production of "The Queen's Lace Handkerchief" at this same theatre some months ago. The chorus is a large one, the force of supernumeraries well drilled, the costumes gorgeous, and the stage-management excellent.

Concerts at Central Music-Hall This Week.

The next entertainment of the popular Star Lecture Course will be given Thursday evening in Central Music-Hall, and will introduce to the West a concert organization that has long held high rank in the East. Mr. Bernhard Listemann, whose name heads the list of players, was for many years concert master of the Theodore Thomas orchestra. He resigned this position in 1875, and went directly to Boston, where he organized his present Sextet Club. His associates are his brother, Fritz Listemann, Edward and Alexander Heindl, Carl Meisel, and Henry Greene. At its concert in this city the club will have the assistance of the one-armed pianist, Count Radetzky, whose playing with one hand is certainly remarkable.

On Wednesday evening next a complimentary concert will be given at Central Music-Hall to Edward Schultze, the tenor. Among those assisting will be Mr. and Mrs. A. McGuire, Mrs. Dr. Sheppers, Miss Hattie Leonard, Mr. Aug. Livermann, Prof. H. Beseler, and the Chicago Musical Society. Mr. Schultze will sing the Walter's Prize Song from "Meistersinger," and "Dolce Aida" from Verdi's "Aida," and also in a quartet from "Rigoletto."

It was expected that Miss Thursby and her company would give two concerts here next Friday and Saturday. But the dates have been canceled for some reason or other, and now Mr. Adams is willing to join with others in crying out: "Put not your faith in Strakosch!"

The Amateur Club.

The twelfth concert of the Amateur Club was given at Lyon & Healy's rooms last Wednesday afternoon. It was a Liszt program, arranged by Mrs. H. H. Gardner, and those participating were Mrs. George B. Carpenter, Mrs. L. C. Earle, Miss Grace Mathews, and Mr. W. C. E. Seeboeck. On the 1st of May this organization will move into rooms of its own in the building on the corner of Monroe and State streets, where the Academy of Design used to be. The club thus becomes one of the permanent institutions of the city, and its growth from the half-dozen ladies who met occasionally for practice to the club of over 250 members is remarkable, and proves the gradual development of an intelligent interest in musical matters in this city. The fortnightly concerts are always attended by as many as the room will hold, and the music interpreted is that of the best masters. The roll of membership is now full, and unless vacancies are made by resignations there is no room for new members. No gentlemen are admitted, even to honorary membership, and the club is, as it should be, solely a ladies' organization. The new rooms will be appropriately fitted up, and as they will be open at all hours the members will have a place where they can meet and practice together. Several of the ladies have given pieces of furniture, others draperies, curtains, books, etc., and the members hope to have their rooms in readiness by the first week in May.

Return of the Boston Ideals.

The Boston Ideal opera company will begin an engagement of two weeks at the Grand Opera-House Monday, April 16. The members of the company are the same that were with the organization when it was last here. Two operas have been added to the repertory of the troupe, "Fra Diavolo" and "Marriage of Figaro." The Ideals have wisely decided to restore "Olivette" to their list of attractions, and this always popular and tuneful operetta will be given twice during the first week. What compromise has been made on the vexed question of sailor costumes and pages' tights remains to be discovered. The list of operas to be given the first week is as follows: Monday, "Fra Diavolo" (first time here by this company); Tuesday, "Patience"; Wednesday matinée, "Olivette"; Wednesday evening, "Musketeers"; Thursday, "Fatinitza"; Friday, "Marriage of Figaro" (first time here by this company); Saturday matinée, "Mascot"; Saturday evening, "Olivette." The cast of "Fra Diavolo" will include Tom Karl in the title rôle; H. C. Barnabee as Lord Allcash; Miss Ullmar as Lady Allcash; Herndon Morsell as Lorenzo; Marie Stone as Zerlina; George Frothingham as Giacomo; M. W. Whitney as Beppo.

Musical Notes at Home.

Mr. Pratt is said to have lost $2,500 by the production of "Zenobia."

Dr. Louis Maas, of Boston, will soon appear in concert in this city.

Mr. Duffy may bring his excellent company back here for another week before long.

Miss Fay's last piano conversation will take place next Saturday afternoon at Hershey Hall.

Mrs. Hastreiter and Mr. Knorr will sing the solo work from "Tannhäuser" at Milwaukee April 27.

Mr. Oesterle, the well-known flutist, is going to leave Chicago and join the Thomas orchestra.

A concert company is talked of with Dora Henninges, the Chickering Quartet, and Mr. S. G. Pratt as pianist and accompanist.

Catharine Lewis is said to be negotiating with the manager of Baum's Pavilion for a summer season there of comic opera.

Mr. Liebling's eighth recital was given at Chickering Hall last evening. He was assisted by Miss Jaeschke and Mr. J. L. Johnston.

The D. D. Club gave a soirée musicale at the residence of Mr. C. M. Henderson last Thursday evening. Mr. Emil Liebling played Chopin's Scherzo, Op. 31.

A selected male chorus from the Mozart Society and the Chickering Quartet will accompany Mme. Scalchi and Mme. Schiller on a concert tour as far as Kansas City in May.

Mr. Wetzler's two children, Herman, 11 years old, and Mina, 8 years old, have been generally praised for their musical talents in Cincinnati, and will probably soon give a concert in this city.

It is rumored—and it is devoutly to be hoped that the rumor is true—that the C. C. C. Company will have the services of a well-known comedian as the Lord Chancellor in its forthcoming production of "Iolanthe."

One of the best evidences of the prosperity and enterprise of the Mozart Society is its engagement of Mme. Scalchi and Mme. Schiller as the soloists for its next concert, May 3. The entertainment will be made an important musical event in every way.

The third and last concert of the present season by the associate members of the Apollo Club will be given Thursday evening, April 19. The program will consist of the first part of the oratorio of "St. Paul" and one part of the "Damnation of Faust." The soloists will be local artists and include W. H. Clark and Charles A. Knorr.

Musical Notes Abroad.

Mme. Patti will sing in this country next year. Galassi has not yet signed a contract with any one.

A MS. Te Deum, by Mr. Henschel, was produced at the last concert of the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Wagner, it appears, had composed his own funeral march, which has just been discovered among his manuscript.

Delia Oakford, the contralto of the Litta company, was privately married to the business manager of the company at Galesburg, Ill.

Bishop Littlejohn's daughter, Mrs. Almont Jenks, has been acting in Brooklyn in an operetta called "Robinson Crusoe," for which she composed the music and her husband provided the libretto. The plot is very amusing.

Verdi has reduced his opera, "Don Carlos," from five to four acts. This is a good example for native operatic composers to follow.

Patti, Albani, and Scalchi sang the same evening in the New York Academy of Music for the benefit of the Washington and Lee University.

At a recent concert in Berlin a program was distributed on which was printed the following as a foot-note: "N. B.—In case of applause Mr. X. will add a mazourka by G."

Mme. Patti has been sued by Mme. Mawgocchi for lessons given to the prima donna from 1856 to 1860 by Sig. Mawgocchi. The sum of $2,600 is claimed. The defense is that Patti was a minor and could not make a contract.

Mr. Gye produces a contract with Nilsson for next year, which is published in the New York papers, and it looks as though that prima donna had "trouble ahead." If Mapleson thinks she has lost her voice, and that Abbey is sure to fail, what does he make such a fuss about Nilsson for?

Jerome Hopkins, a New York musician, having undertaken to write something about "Home, Sweet Home," has already been convicted of three errors. He got the name of the musical composer of the song wrong; he called "Oft in the Stilly Night" a "love ditty," and credited Henry Tucker, instead of C. C. Sawyer, with the authorship of "When This Cruel War is Over." Hopkins wishes it was.

The gondola in which Wagner took the air every day has been bought for his widow, and sent to Bayreuth. For the table at which the master used to sit in the afternoon, listening to the military band in the Piazza di San Marco, 300 francs has been offered to the owner, who, however, declines to part with it. Another curious relic, purchased, it is stated, by some hero-worshipers, is the railway truck in which the body was taken from Venice to Bayreuth.

MILLIONS IN SAND.

The Hon. John C. Calhoun's Grandson Finds a Fortune in Maryland.

[New York Sun.]—A bushy-haired, grizzly-bearded inventor stood over a machine with a leather belt in a dingy loft at 93 Washington street yesterday afternoon. He was Mr. S. R. Krom. He called his machine the "dry concentrator." It resembled a small upright pianoforte. Mr. Krom was lading Maryland sand into its hopper. The sand ran from the hopper over a sunken finger-board, and was agitated by puffs of air until it resembled a miniature chop sea. The puffs of air came up through the finger-board, which was given a slight jarring motion. There were 600 puffs to the minute. The light sand was shaken from the finger-board and the heavy sand dropped into a fan, like wheat pouring from a fanning-mill. The heavy sand was of a bright metallic color, and looked like grains of galena.

"This," said Mr. Krom, sifting it through his fingers, "is chrome ore. It came from an estate owned by Patrick Calhoun, a grandson of John C. Calhoun, on the Western Maryland Railroad, fourteen miles from Baltimore. It is worth $25 a ton. Calhoun owns 220 acres, containing millions of tons of this sand. It yields a minimum of 10 per cent of this chrome ore, and by the use of this machine he can deliver the ore in Baltimore for $5 per ton."

A chemist who was present said that chromate of potash is obtained from this ore by fusing the ore with potash. It is used for colorings and dyes. It gives the permanent green and yellow colors seen in illuminated posters and in bank notes. It is in great demand in calico, woolen, and carpet manufactories. Over 11,000,000 pounds were imported last year, at a duty of 3½ cents per pound. The ore is only found in Turkey, Russia, Siberia, California, and Maryland. Large quantities of it are used by the manufacturers of iron and steel. It hardens these metals and gives them great tensile power. Chrome steel has been freely used in the construction of the Brooklyn bridge. The manager of the Brooklyn steel works says that it must come into general use. The trouble with manufacturers in the future will be to find it in deposits large enough to fill the demand, as it is a very scarce mineral. Within three years he thinks the demand will be greater than the supply. A company has been formed in this city to utilize the deposits on Mr. Calhoun's estate.

And still they come. Hopkinson & Silva, 125 Dearborn street, are kept busy showing Morgan Park to customers seeking after homes. Their houses are new, well built, and are sold on very easy terms.

IRELAND'S CAUSE.

It Is Claimed that the Philadelphia Convention Will Not Advance It.

The Reasons Why Mr. Parnell Finds it Inadvisable to Be in Attendance.

The War of the Factions—Reminiscences of the Chicago Gathering.

It is now certain that neither Mr. Parnell nor any other member of the Irish Parliamentary party, nor any other prominent man from Ireland, except Mr. Patrick Egan, will attend the Philadelphia convention, to be held two weeks hence. Indeed, prominent Irishmen in this country will not greatly care to attend it now, and they have come to the conclusion, too, that it would be most unwise for Mr. Parnell to attend. It would not be good policy for him to place himself in such a position that the several Irish factions of the Eastern cities might have an opportunity to renew their quarrels over him, to make him a sort of casus belli. His experience in this country when he visited here before, and particularly in New York, was not of a nature to tempt him to come again when the forces are being specially marshaled for a scrimmage. Before he landed in New York in 1880 each rival Irish faction of that faction-cursed city sought to capture him. The faction that succeeded did so by chartering steamers to go down the bay to meet him, and its course so disgruntled the defeated faction and the respectable element of the Irish in New York that the first meeting Mr. Parnell and Mr. Dillon addressed was a comparative failure. The defeated faction remained away, and but for the enthusiasm and honesty of purpose of the Irishmen of New York who did not belong to either faction, and who turned out as a duty, the meeting would have been a fizzle. A circumstance in connection with this affair is well worth recording here as showing the selfishness and want of common decency which characterized the capturing faction. The gate money amounted to $2,700, but hardly $1,000 ever found its way to Ireland. The rest was spent in chartering steamers, hiring boats, and receptions. The factions are at work again in New York. Some good friend of Mr. Parnell has doubtless apprised him of this, and hence in a great measure his determination not to come here.

OTHER REASONS WHY HE WILL NOT COME.

But there are other reasons why he has concluded not to accept the very urgent request of the Land-Leaguers of America—the only party with which he avows sympathy. He has no affiliation whatsoever with any other party. Mr. Patrick Ford, of the Irish World, has touched on those matters in an interview published in yesterday's TRIBUNE, when he alluded to the probability that resolutions favoring dynamite would be introduced at the convention, such as it will be. Besides, he doubtless thinks—knows would probably be the better word—that it will be made up of discordant factions, and that each one will try to force its own ideas on the convention, will try to control and capture it; the conservative element will undoubtedly be in a minority, whereas it formed a majority in the Chicago Irish Convention. John Boyle O'Reilly and Congressman Collins, of Boston, and Father Walsh, who represent the Land-Leaguers, pure and simple, will not be well supported, as even in New England and New York the Land-Leaguers have declined in numbers and membership. There will hardly be one-fifth of the number of Catholic clergymen at the Philadelphia gathering that there was at Chicago; but the dynamite party, which was barely represented here, will undoubtedly try to force a large delegation into the Philadelphia convention. The "dynamites," however, will be stoutly resisted by the Clunnaguel representatives, whose principles are that only by war in the open field can Ireland obtain liberty, and that it is the duty of Irishmen to prepare for such a war of deliverance when England is involved in difficulties with some great Power. The leaders of this society bitterly hate the dynamite, or Rossa faction, whose members have charged them with misappropriating large sums of money contributed by the members of the organization and others to their private uses. The other party returns the hate. The Clan-na-Gael party, however, have the inside, as they control what is left of the make-shift compromise of what is known as the Committee of Seven of the Chicago Convention, who are parties to the call for the convention. The conservatives, however, are not overfriendly to the Clan-na-Gaels, who treated them scurvily at Chicago, and, though they may detest the principles of the dynamite party, will admit them on condition that they will not attempt to offer dynamite resolutions. Thus, at the very outset, will be laid the foundation for a first-class scrimmage.

STILL OTHER FACTIONS

Another faction likely to give trouble will be represented by Patrick Ford, of the Irish World, and his followers. These believe in land nationalization, in Henry George's theories, and Ford himself is a connecting link between them and the dynamites. The Ancient Order of Hibernians, which will be more largely represented at Philadelphia than any other organization, belongs to neither faction, but most of its members will act with what is called the conservative party. The organization, if it acts as such, can prevent dissensions, can control the convention, and lead to some good result. Its membership is large, and its leaders, particularly in the West, very conservative and practical.

From what has been said, however, Mr. Parnell's refusal to attend a gathering of so many factions will be commended as wise and prudent. He could have no sympathy with the dynamiters; he has no sympathy with their opponents who were instrumental in getting up the New York faction fight on his arrival in 1880. He could not afford to become the subject of the scrimmages among rival sets, and be made responsible for the speeches in the convention of men of extreme opinions, as he certainly would be by Sir William Harcourt and his followers on his return to Ireland.

His refusal to come, however, will have a most depressing influence on the convention, and it promises, as before stated, nothing but failure, unless the Clerical-Conservative and Ancient Hibernian elements unite.

THE CHICAGO MEETING.

As the action of the various factions in the Chicago Convention may throw some light on the subject, a little about the history of that gathering may not be amiss just now. Its prime promoter was Mr. John F. Finerty, of this city. He believed that if the Irish societies of America were united for a common purpose—that of assisting the leaders in Ireland and acting in consonance with them—it would do much good. With this idea he went to New York and Boston and succeeded in getting the leaders of the rival parties in the East, Gen. Collins of Boston and John Boyle O'Reilly, as representing the conservative element in the Land League, and Patrick Ford representing the Radial, or, as the Conservatives would have it, the Communistic, element, to unite in a call for a convention of representatives of all the Irish societies in this city. Mr. Finerty succeeded also in securing a supplementary call, signed by Messrs. T. P. O'Connor, T. M. Healy, and Father Eugene Sheehy, then on a visit to America from Ireland. The convention was an imposing gathering, and was in appearance at least thoroughly representative, but as far as Mr. Finerty's idea in promoting it was concerned it was a flat failure. The only good it did was to raise about $300,000 for the league organization in Ireland, and by far the largest portion, all or nearly all except the amount subscribed by individual members of the convention, among them many Chicagoans, would have been subscribed through the then existing Land Leagues had no convention ever been held. As far as unification of organization was concerned it amounted to nothing—or worse than nothing. The gathering would have ended in a split but for the quarrel-avoiding compromise proposed towards the close by Judge Birdsall, and supported by Father Sheehy, which resulted in the appointment of the much-talked-of Committee of Seven, which proved neither useful nor ornamental. The Chicago gathering was one of magnificent possibilities, and it was largely a representative gathering, but it was most shamelessly wire-pulled. For the sake of the appearance of harmony the Conservative party allowed a faction to control the whole body. Mr. W. J. Hynes, of this city, it will be remembered, was the Temporary Chairman, and his rulings gave complete satisfaction to all but the factionists. He would not do their bidding. They succeeded in having him removed, and Dr. Betts, one of their own number, replaced him. When a Roman Catholic priest wanted Mr. Hynes retained on the ground of his proved capacity as a presiding officer, the factionists charged him with introducing the question of religion, when nothing was farther from thoughts of the priest. When Dr. Betts got into the chair the factionists had it all their own way, until they tried to make the convention serve their future uses. Every committee appointed was controlled by the factionists. The Conservative party saw in their maneuvres an effort to get hold of funds. Father Walsh, the Land-League Treasurer, plainly intimated as much and protested. He threatened with his party to withdraw if the scheme was persisted in. The factionists were afraid to urge their point further.

THE COMMITTEE OF SEVEN.

They fell back on the compromise offered at the instance of Father Sheehy all the more readily because their Chairman had the appointment of the committee.

But here again was a difficulty; the Chair was obliged to appoint the leaders of the two strongest parties in the convention—Ford for the Irish World party, Collins for the Conservative Land-League party, and the gentleman who moved the compromise, Berdsall, a Jay Gould attorney, of New York, whose sympathy with the Irish movement is very gravely doubted. But Dr. Betts did the best he could for his party. He appointed four. They would, he thought, control the committee. So they have. When the appointments were announced there was wrath and angry imprecations on all sides. The seven of the committee were in no manner representative. With the exception of Messrs. Collins and Ford they had no backing, were men of no influence, and both Ford and Collins have long ago ceased to act with the others. At the first meeting there was want of harmony, and it is believed that neither Ford nor Collins has attended since. The result of the fiasco was that after the $250,000 pledged by the convention had been subscribed—about the middle of the following March—the Land-League societies, particularly in the West, began to disband. Subscriptions fell off, and in Chicago, where there were over twenty Land-League societies, with large membership in 1881, there is not one today. Similar results have followed in other cities. All of which goes to show that big Irish conventions, run by factions, even though they do not result in open dissension and open revolt, do little to further the cause which the great bulk of the constituents have at heart.

As was said before, the coming Philadelphia convention will consist of many more factions, and much more discordant ones than the Chicago meeting. It seems already doomed to failure, and will probably only result in further dissension. The best thing that intending delegates to that gathering could do would be to contribute the expenses of a trip to Philadelphia to the organization controlled and wisely conducted by Mr. Parnell in Ireland. The convention can hardly fail to embarrass the Irish leader, even if it be the success which its promoters claim for it.

The convention, even if it is harmonious, will accomplish nothing towards unification of Irish societies. It will result as did the Chicago affair. If it is not, it will greatly injure the cause which all Irishmen have at heart. If it adopts dynamite resolutions, as intimated by Mr. Ford, it will forfeit for those engaged in the Irish struggle the sympathy which the discreet, prudent, and manly policy of Mr. Parnell obtained for it, and the respect which the moral suasion of such men as A. M. Sullivan and Michael Davitt obtained for it by their lectures here and their letters recently published. If dynamite resolutions are adopted Mr. Parnell will lose all the advantage of his recent manly stand in Parliament. To do so will tend to enlist the sympathies of the civilized world on the side of England and against Ireland, and will therefore leave England perfectly free to trample on Ireland, which she will under the circumstances most certainly and most naturally do. These considerations have operated to keep Mr. Parnell from visiting America; they will also tend to keep away from it many good Irishmen in America. It does seem as though it would be a failure. Even Mr. Egan may not care to attend.

BASE-BALL.

The Chicago Players Preparing for Action—Gossip of the Game.

The catchers of the Cleveland Club are Bushong, Briody, and Broughton.

Poorman, at one time pitcher for the Chicagos and Detroits, has signed with the Toledo Club.

The Harvard nine will probably contain five of last year's team—Crocker, Baker, Coolidge, Lovering, and Lelloyne.

Nicol, of last year's Chicagos, is playing with the St. Louis Club. The papers speak highly of his fielding, but say he is weak at the bat.

Stockwell, the new man of the Chicagos, has done exceedingly well in practice during the last week, and is considered a valuable addition to the team.

The Philadelphia Club played several games last week, and the new catcher is considered to be one of the best in the league. Ringo is his name.

The season tickets for the season's games in this city will be on sale Monday, April 17. The price for the first week will be $17.50. After that it will be $20.

The Base-Ball Park is fast being put in shape for the season. The improvements will cost about $5,000, and will add a great deal to the comfort of players and spectators.

An exchange states that Goldsmith, of the Chicagos, has lately been left a fortune by the death of his wife's mother. He says he has not heard of the death of his mother-in-law, nor does he know anything about a fortune.

The batting averages of the Chicagos in 1882 were as follows: Anson, .362; Gore, .318; Kelly, .305; Dalrymple, .294; Williamson, .281; Flint, .250; Burns, .247; Goldsmith, .221; Pfeffer, .221; Corcoran, .207. This average is better than any other team in the country.

The rule requiring a base runner to run back to his base in case of a foul ball is still in force in the league, but the umpire cannot declare any player out who does not return on the run. Not to run back renders the runner liable to be put out as an ordinary base-runner.

The Metropolitan Amateur Base-Ball League met in the reading-room of the Palmer last night, C. F. Degolyer presiding, and adopted a new constitution and by-laws. The Oakland Club was admitted to the league, and one other club was invited to join. The league is now composed of the Athletics, Riversides, Oaklands, Socials, and Pastimes. A schedule of games will soon be arranged.

The Chicagos have done but little work in the park during the week, owing to the bad weather. They have been steadily at work in the gymnasium, however, and are in good condition. There will probably be no chance to see the nine play until the season opens here May 5, in the game with the Detroits. Most of the men have had ball-practice during the winter and are in prime physical condition.

Great interest is manifested in telegraph circles here over the formation of the nine for the coming season, which it is conceded will be the strongest yet placed in the field by the telegraphic fraternity. Of last year's nine Furlong will play first, Geiger second, Quick third, Fraas short. Boole will guard the plate, and with Bennett will form the first battery of the team. The club will be called the Blue Stockings, the uniform being white with blue stockings, belts, and caps. It is the intention to form a league to comprise telegraph clubs in St. Louis, Detroit, Milwaukee, Indianapolis, and Cleveland.

LAKE.

The friends of Messrs. Darlington, Smith, and O'Niel, the newly-elected officials of Lake, propose, it is said, holding a jollication meeting during the present week. The enthusiasm of the victors has not died out, nor will it for days to come.

The citizens of Lake will not hereafter be compelled to walk from Thirty-ninth to Fifty-first street on Halsted. For a number of days past the Chicago City Railway Company has had a large force of men laying a double track to the above-named point, and as soon as it is completed cars will be put on.

The most dangerous crossings in the Town of Lake are at Clark and Root streets, on Forty-second. The Stock-Yards cars cross twenty-five tracks on each trip to the yards, and on sundry occasions they have been demolished, but fortunately no one was injured. The old Board of Trustees passed an ordinance to compel the railroad companies to erect gates, but they ignored the ordinance, and it has since been a dead letter. It now remains for the new Trustees to enforce it at all hazards and reduce the chances of disaster.

Got his muscles all tied in a knot;
He is now out again,
And says for all pain
St. Jacobs Oil goes right to the spot.

THE COURTS.

Applications for Divorces Occupy the Official Attention of Three Judges.

One Woman Fails Because Her Husband Was Not Quite Cruel Enough.

Tribulations of an Unfortunate Butcher and His Two Wives—Doctors Disagree.

An Unusually Lively Day in the Divorce Courts.

The divorce market yesterday was booming. Three Judges—Tuley, Gardner, and Moran—devoted all their attention to hearing the numerous tales of domestic infelicity, and in making as many applicants happy as they could. The number of the fair sex present was legion, young and old, fair and dark, and they filled the court-rooms. There were thirty-seven cases on the calendars, and over half of them were heard, but quite a number of them failed to make even a prima-facie showing.

NOT CRUELTY ENOUGH.

The first case heard by Judge Tuley was that of Catharine Hunt against her husband, Leander Hunt, a railroad engineer. She testified that they were married in June, 1869, and lived together until January, 1882, when they separated. Her story of cruelty was of the routine kind—continued abuse and neglect. He was very easily upset by drink, and when the least in liquor would often strike her. A very pretty sister of the complainant corroborated in very general terms the charges of the bill, but the Judge said the proof was not sufficient to show extreme and repeated cruelty, and directed the case to be continued for more evidence.

A LACK OF AFFINITY.

The trouble in the Housman family, as detailed before the same Judge, was want of affinity. Charles H. Housman, the complainant, is a middle-aged man, with a very bad habit of keeping his mouth in perpetual motion. He testified that he married Harriet Housman on Christmas-Day, 1859, and lived with her until 1881, when she told him she did not wish him to live with her any longer, and he obediently left her. She was very jealous of him, and made him very miserable when she went out in society with him, because she would not permit him to admire other women. She admitted she did not love him. When they separated at her request he divided their worldly possessions. He had $160 and some furniture, and he endowed her with all the latter and $60 of the former, and took a train for Chicago. He did not think there had ever been any affinity between himself and wife.

The Judge—It took you twenty years to find it out?

Witness (very meekly)—Yes; I waited until the children were married and settled in life.

The Judge—I can't give any divorce on such showing. On evidence like this I might divorce half the State of Michigan.

The attorney of Housman suggested that he had a deposition to corroborate his client's evidence. The Judge ran through it, and dashed the hopes of the man without an affinity by remarking that there was no evidence worth considering in the deposition, and he would not grant any decree unless better reason was shown.

The case was continued until a future time for more proof.

WICKED WADHAMS.

Among the cases heard by Judge Gardner was that of Elizabeth J. Wadhams against A. S. Wadhams, a well-known manufacturer of Masonic regalia and fancy costumes at No. 190 Clark street. The parties were married some nine years ago, and about a year ago she went out on the road to canvass for orders. On her return she discovered, as she alleges, that her husband had become quite too intimate with a young girl they had adopted. Naturally there was a row, and the young girl took the first train for home. A reconciliation was effected, and Mrs. Wadhams took another trip as drummer. When she got back she claims that she found the adopted daughter had been supplanted in her husband's facile affections by the servant girl. The latter assumed to run the house, and her matutinal duties of lighting the fires were performed in part by Wadhams, who also assisted in other ways. Mrs. Wadhams claims that she subsequently discovered that her husband had sent $50 to the adopted daughter, and was making arrangements to meet her in Florida. The meeting did not take place, as the girl's father stepped in and took a hand by intercepting the $50 check. Whether Wadhams got it back again did not appear. Two hotel clerks—one at the Revere House, the other at the Massasoit, testified that Wadhams had occupied a room at the hotel with a lady, and Mrs. Wadhams was made happy by a decree of divorce.

DOCTORS DISAGREE.

Another case heard by the same Judge was that of Dr. William H. Stockham against Dr. Alice B. Stockham. The parties were married in 1856, and have had two children—Cora L., 25 years of age, and William H., 21 years old. Stockham deserted his wife four years ago and went to California, and Mrs. S. had ever since supported herself and family by practicing medicine. She is living at No. 999 Polk street. The only possible reason for the separation was some disagreement over the arbitrary way in which he treated his children. The daughter corroborated her mother's statements, and said her father was arbitrary and would not recognize his children as grown persons. He did not contribute anything to their support. Dr. Stockham formerly practiced at Lafayette, Ind.

LINES FALLEN IN UNPLEASANT PLACES.

Charles G. Lines, the son of the well-known carriage-builder, was also defendant in a divorce suit before Judge Gardner at the instance of his wife, Jennie C. Lines. The parties were married Dec. 2, 1877, and lived together until Dec. 27, 1882. He was charged with neglecting his wife and children for other women; and Mrs. Lines was granted a decree.

HARBESON.

Another case of Judge Gardner's, and which savored considerably of being "cut and dried," was that of Frank O. F. Harbeson against Linda M. Harbeson. They were married about 1876, and she left him in February, 1881, in Cincinnati, while he was sick in bed. He had no idea what the cause was. He said his wife was willing his mother should have the care of the child, the fruit of the marriage, and be the trustee of any property that might go to the latter.

NEW BILLS.

New bills for divorce were filed yesterday by Helen Scofield against Henry Scofield on the ground of desertion; Franz Wawrinek from Elizabeth Wawrinek for adultery; Harriet I. Jones from William Jones for bigamy; and David Smith from Annie Smith on the ground of adultery.

Judge Tuley granted a decree of divorce to Mary A. Robinson from Charles E. Robinson on the ground of adultery, and to Clara G. Andres from Levingo S. Andres for adultery.

An Unfortunate Butcher and His Two Wives.

A little domestic squabble between the two wives of Patrick Ahern occupied a good part of the time yesterday morning before Judge Tuley. The matter came up on a rule on Patrick to show cause why he should not be attached for contempt. The first wife, Delia Ahern, who is the prosecutor, was married to Ahern in April, 1870, and obtained a divorce in June, 1880, on the ground of cruelty. The question of the custody of the two children, John and Mamie, was not decided, except to leave them with the defendant, who was to allow his wife to see them at all proper times. Since that time, however, Ahern has, as his wife charges, persistently refused to allow her to see the children, and she therefore asked to have him taught to respect the decree of the court. In her affidavit she charged that on the 9th of March last she went to her ex-husband's shop and asked very politely to see her boy, but he roughly refused to allow her to see him. He then called his present wife down-stairs, and the latter, together with a servant, attacked deponent, knocked her down, and blackened her eye. Ahern then drove her outdoors. She also took the witness-stand and repeated her former statement. Mrs. Ahern No. 1 is a large and rather attractive-looking woman, handsomely dressed, with a dramatic air, and the snap in her eyes showed she could make her husband's home quite lively, to say the least. She also testified when her little girl was dying some time ago her husband tried to prevent her from attending her or being present at the funeral, and abused her and threatened to throw her down-stairs.

Ahern took the stand in his own defense and swore straight through the calendar against his ex-wife, denying all her statements. There was evidently some hard lying somewhere. He said when he saw her coming he called his present wife down-stairs, pointed to Mrs. A. No. 1, and piteously asked, "Can't I have a little peace?" He denied that there was any scrimmage further than the attempt of his wife to prevent Mrs. A. No. 1 from throwing a lamp-chimney, or that he refused to allow the latter to see her child.

The Judge said an injured party should be prompt in applying to the courts for relief, and Mrs. Ahern had been guilty of great negligence. The only question was as to whether Ahern had disobeyed the decree in the divorce case. The question of what took place on the 9th of March ought to be referred to a Police Court for settlement. The boy was evidently not in the house at the time, and Ahern took no pains to get him there. The facts proved were not sufficient to justify punishing the defendant, but he would be admonished that if in the future he failed either in word or spirit to obey the decree the present facts would be taken into consideration next time. The decree, however, would be modified so as to allow Mrs. Ahern to see her boy every other Saturday afternoon from 2 to 5 o'clock, and then every alternate Sunday the boy should be brought to her house for the same length of time.

History Revised.

CHICAGO, April 7.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—In Friday's issue the letter relating to early Chicago history from Gen. T. J. Cram was stated to have been elicited in response to inquiries made by A. J. Hubbard, Esq., instead of which it was written to Col. A. S. Hubbard, of San Francisco, Cal., who is a corresponding member of the Chicago Historical Society, in whose interests the inquiries were made.

In the Olden Time.

WAUKEGAN, Ill., April 6.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—What is the matter? For years past the Governors of all the New England States appointed a day in April for fasting and prayer, which was taken up by the Governors of nearly all the other States, and by the President of the United States, until this year.

Have they forgotten the purity under which they were born? Or are they too busy making slates politically?

A Friend of Latin.

CHICAGO, April 7.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Permit me to correct an error in your report of the Harvard Club dinner. I expressed no opposition to the study of Latin. I said nothing about Latin. I am in favor of a higher standard in Latin learning than is now required in any of our colleges. I expressed my regret that Harvard, the leading university in America, had not yet advanced far enough to give the Bachelor's degree to a scholar, however profoundly read in everything else, who had not read Greek through his Freshman year. I further expressed regret at the tendency among colleges to add German to the prescribed course. I am warmly in favor of the largest opportunities for studying both Greek and German.

The distinguishing advantage of Harvard is that a student has facilities there for the largest and most advanced study not only of Greek and German, but of every other branch of knowledge.

Where Harrison Might Begin.

CHICAGO, April 5.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—It is evident from the remarks made by the Mayor Tuesday night after he was assured of his return to the official chair of the city, that he really intends to be the Mayor of the minority instead of the majority, as he has assured the public that nothing disreputable shall exist in the city if he can help it. Please ask him to at once inaugurate his good work by pulling out of existence the various hell-holes on Wabash avenue, one of our finest thoroughfares. Already decent people have been compelled to remove in consequence of the migration of these birds of prey to this handsome avenue. The ladies of the Woman's Christian Union are at present cursed by having one of these bagnios within three doors of it. The children of the Haven School all know of this infamous resort, and visitors to Grace Church, which is but a few rods distant, will consider it a great favor if his Honor will give some proof that he really means what he promised in his remarks on the occasion referred to. If he cleans out Wabash avenue thousands who voted against him will "applaud him to the echo."

Suggestions for "Bank Clerk."

CHICAGO, April 7.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—The wail of "Bank Clerk" in your issue of April 4 has attracted my attention on account of its very plaintive notes. Having been engaged in the banking business here in Chicago for the last sixteen years I claim to know something of its hardships as well as of its brighter sides, and feel it my duty to protest against "Bank Clerk's" comparison of sewing-girls and bank clerks. The usual banking hours are from 9 to 4 for competent men; when they work over this time they show that they are slow, and, as I fear in the case of "Bank Clerk," out of their sphere. It is fair to say that good bank clerks, who do not spend their time whining over the easy tasks of sewing girls, can easily do all their work in the time above mentioned, with sufficient time for lunch. The difficulty is that men will get where they are more ornamental than useful. The howl of the writer comes from one who has evidently mistaken his calling. Feeding wolves and bears in Lincoln Park would be a far more suitable occupation for him. If the banks of this city were rid of these $50-clerks with their 25-cent lunches the saving of gas would be enormous and the respectability of the profession greatly enhanced.

Revised Facts About Fish.

CHICAGO, April 7.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Your reporter, in a hurried interview with me, makes a few errors in regard to the London fishery exhibition, which permit me to correct. As to the exhibition from the Western lakes I informed him that I did not know how much, if any, exhibit would be made. Since arriving in Chicago I had been informed by wholesale dealers that there would not be any exhibit from here. The reason given was that they had not received notice in time. I know it has been the desire of the United States Fish Commission to make the exhibit from the United States complete in every department, and that they have used all efforts to give every one ample time to be fully represented. On further inquiry, I am pleased to find Chicago will be well represented by the firm of A. Booth. This exhibit will be one of the largest and most complete of any private exhibit, they having forwarded over 100 packages of goods showing the various branches of the lake fisheries, in goods, models, and views, as well as their fisheries of the Pacific coast. Of other exhibitors of the West I am not informed, but well knowing the enterprise of the Western country, I have no fears but they will be as well represented as the Atlantic coast.

Divorces and Episcopalians.

CHICAGO, April 5.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Will you inform me through your column "Voice of the People" if there be any church law recently or one was ever made by any General or Diocesan Convention of the Protestant Episcopal Church forbidding a clergyman of the Protestant Episcopal Church to unite in marriage a divorced man or woman whose wife or husband is still living? Any information on the subject will be gratefully received by G.

[The law of the Protestant Episcopal Church prohibits the solemnization by any of its clergymen of a marriage of any divorced party or parties, except in cases of divorce for the ground of adultery, in which case a clergyman is authorized to solemnize the subsequent marriage of the innocent party—that is the one who is granted a divorce on account of the adultery of the other. If a clergyman violates the law, he makes himself liable to deposition. Furthermore, it is often the case that a divorce is conclusively obtained on the ground of adultery, when no such crime has in fact been committed. In such case, it is the duty of the minister to pay no attention to the finding of the court, and to be governed by the facts in the case. Where there has been no real adultery, there can be no celebration of a marriage of either party.]

His wounds were dressed in a neighboring drug store, and then he was removed to his home at No. 56 Kansas street. The wagon was demolished.

The official canvass of the West Town vote has not progressed as rapidly as it might. It will not be fully completed until tomorrow. The count so far shows that the total majority of Sokup over Moore in the Sixth, Seventh, Eighth, Ninth, Tenth, Eleventh, and Twelfth Wards is 3,349. Huesman's total majority over Clark in the same wards is 3,286.

The Board of Managers of the Erring-Woman's Refuge held its regular monthly meeting at the home yesterday afternoon. Mrs. Dr. Roler, the Treasurer, reported the finances in a satisfactory condition, and reported forty-one inmates in the home besides the regular family. Eleven women had been admitted during the month, and homes had been procured for seven.

There will be a literary and musical entertainment at the Second Baptist Church, corner of Morgan and Monroe streets, Friday evening, April 13, at which the following well-known artists will appear: Mrs. H. P. Roundtree, Miss Lottie Smith, Mr. W. S. Battis, Miss Zelma Fanning, Master Frank Winters, Mrs. Zoe Swisshelm Allen, Mrs. C. H. Buchon, and Mr. T. I. Dunn.

Lucy Gorman, who is described as a handsome girl of 21, left her home at No. 605 Warren avenue two weeks ago last Monday, telling her mother she was going to work for a Mrs. Atkins, at the corner of Paulina and Jackson. She did go there and ask for work, but was not accommodated. Since then not a word has been heard from Lucy, and her mother fears she has been led astray.

The families of James Hamilton and John Brophy live at No. 112 South Halsted street. Hamilton's wife is sick at present, but this fact did not deter her husband yesterday, as Brophy alleges, from abusing her in a shameful manner. On complaint of Brophy, Hamilton was arrested and locked up at the Desplaines Street Station. He will be brought before Justice Walsh tomorrow morning.

The case against Frank Coryell, the clerk who was arrested Friday night for having made away with about $600 worth of fine lace goods from the store of his employers, the Hayden Bros., was continued by Justice Wallace yesterday to April 12 in $1,000 bail. Detectives Koehler and Murnane recovered more of the goods yesterday, making about $450 worth that they have restored to the firm.

Frank Delma, a German butcher, whose place of business is at No. 167 West Randolph street, has involved himself in a difficulty by selling an interest in his business. He sold the interest to Herman Hussing for $200. Hussing now alleges that he was swindled, and yesterday he caused the arrest of Delma on the charge of obtaining money by false pretenses. The accused will have a hearing before Justice Brown some time this week.

About a week ago THE TRIBUNE gave the decision of Judge Smith in the case of John Black against the Morgan Park Military Academy to recover $150 on tuition for his son. It was stated that young Black was helplessly drunk in this city at the Exposition, and had to be carried home. Hence his expulsion from the academy. From the evidence it appears that young Black was a little too boisterous, but could take care of himself, and did not have to be carried home.

The following Chicago people sailed for Europe last Wednesday by the Cunard steamer Servia: Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Armour, Mr. and Mrs. David Wallach, Mr. J. F. Wallach and Miss Bertha Bacharach, Mr. A. Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. D. Z. Wing, Mr. H. B. Fuller, Mr. Albert Giassepoole, Mr. E. C. Rogers, Mr. C. H. Seybt and Mr. Emil Broker, Mr. and Mrs. S. Cupples and family, Mr. F. M. Ames, Mr. Joseph Aron, Miss Edith Allen, Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Byrne, Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Cohen, two children, and nurse, Mrs. H. M. Cohen, child, and nurse, Mr. D. Cunningham, Mr. Frank W. Graham, Mr. B. F. Wright, and Mr. Fred Burt. This ship had 390 first-cabin passengers, showing that travel to Europe has begun very early this season.

The catalog of the New York Academy of Design shows that Mr. R. W. Wallis of this city exhibits No. 450 of the catalog, valued at $875. As a rule the productions of Chicago artists have always met with ready sale when sent to the academy exhibitions and accepted. The standard of the academy is high, and acceptance by the Examining Committee is generally taken by the public as sufficient indorsement of the picture; then, if the subject is pleasing, sales are pretty certain.

The Fourth Ward Republican Club met last evening at Armory Hall, on Indiana avenue, Edward Olson in the chair. The Chairman stated that a deficiency of about $150 existed on account of the last campaign. A committee consisting of R. W. Dunham, I. P. Rumsey, E. O. Seymour, S. H. Sweet, and M. J. Wilson was appointed to solicit funds to square up the account. A committee of one from each precinct in the ward was appointed to nominate officers for the ensuing term and report next Saturday evening.

Herr Ludwig Barnay, the German tragedian who has been appearing at the Grand Opera-House during the last week, received the following telegram after the matinée yesterday: "Omaha, Neb., April 7.—To Herr Ludwig Barnay, Grand Opera-House, Chicago, Ill.: Your Chicago triumph gives me great pleasure. America is learning that one of the world's really great actors is with us. Your genuinely earned success, without sensation or trickery, gratified me exceedingly, my dear Barnay. LAWRENCE BARRETT."

The Grain-Receivers' Association met yesterday to consider the proposition made by the railroads in regard to the weighing of grain. Objections were made to that part of the proposition which states that the Weighmasters elected by the shippers or others shall not be in any official way connected with the Board of Trade. No action was taken, however, and the association adjourned to meet Monday afternoon with the Shippers' Association. It is probable that they will accept the proposition offered by the railroads if one or two objectionable features are stricken out.

A supposed swindler was arrested in Hamilton, Canada, a few days ago, and on his person was found a check for $19,200, drawn by Joseph Strutt on the Bank of Montreal of this city. The check and a letter of inquiry were received from the Hamilton police yesterday by Chief Doyle. Inquiry at the bank developed the fact that about three weeks ago a man giving the name of Strutt called there and endeavored to get some money on the strength of the statement that he expected to receive a large amount of money from San Francisco. He was regarded as a crank and not furnished with any funds.

One night, about three weeks ago, Alexander Young, an old man employed by Revell & Co., was crossing the Clark street viaduct when he was jostled by a man and two women. A scuffle ensued, and the old man afterward missed a ring and some Masonic emblems. A boy named Deum found the missing trinkets on the Clark street bridge and a few days later returned them to their owner. Young ascertained where the boy lived, and yesterday he caused the arrest of his two sisters, Rose and Louise Deum, on a charge of robbery. The case will come up for a hearing Wednesday before Justice Kaufmann, Police-Inspector Welter signing the bonds of the accused young ladies. The latter belong to a very respectable family, and it is evident that Mr. Young has made a grave mistake.

Friday articles of incorporation were issued at Springfield to Orrin L. Evans, James E. Convis, and George W. Beavis, of Chicago, for the purpose of organizing the Mississippi Valley Benefit Society for the alleged benefit of widows and orphans. Two of the incorporators are small-salaried clerks in Marshal Field's wholesale store, and a third is a bookkeeper in an iron foundry. Messrs. Evans and Convis were interviewed by a TRIBUNE reporter yesterday regarding the financial standing of the organization, and they stated that they did not require any capital, as the association would be self-sustaining. Beyond this they had nothing to say, as they claimed that their arrangements had not yet been perfected.

The arrangements for the entertainment at Sinai Temple, corner of Indiana avenue and Twenty-first street, Thursday night, for the benefit of the afternoon kindergarten at No. 1237 State street, are now completed. The program includes an organ solo, by Koelling; a song, "Before the Dawn," by Mr. Charles Knorr; a piano solo, by Miss Bertha Berge; a song, "La Zingara," by Mme. Hastreiter; a violin solo, by Carl Becker; an address, by the Rev. Dr. Hirsch; and an oration by Emery A. Storrs. The kindergarten is doing a good work, and all it needs is a little more money, which the entertainment will, it is expected, provide.

Under the heading of "West-Side Dens" THE TRIBUNE of last Sunday gave a description of a few of the many hell-holes on West Randolph street. Nos. 160, 164, and 174 were specified as being hard places. Mention of No. 164 was a mistake, according to the statement of prominent citizens. The proprietor, with his wife and daughter, has occupied the premises for many years, and has never allowed a disreputable person of either sex to live in his building or frequent his premises. On either side of him are resorts for people of the worst class, but, despite his surroundings, the proprietor of No. 164 seems to have lived peaceably, decently, and honestly. He is given a good reputation by some of the best citizens of the ward.

The Directors of the German Aid Society held their annual meeting yesterday afternoon in the office of Conrad Niehoff. The constitution was amended increasing the number of directors from thirteen to fifteen. The following were elected: Jacob Beiersdorf, W. A. Hettich, Max Eberhardt, C. L. Niehoff, Louis Wampold, Henry W. Hill, F. Madlener, E. G. Uihlein, George Rapp, Carl Moll, W. Vocke, William Swissler, Louis Boerlin, John Feldkamp, and Richard Schiele. The Directors will hold a special meeting Tuesday to elect officers. The Treasurer reported as follows: Receipts in loans, $6,977; annual dues, $6,424; from the ladies' branch, $1,119; total receipts, $13,477; disbursed for aid, $2,039 in cash; total expenses, $12,564; balance on hand, $912.51; total assets, including loans and real estate, $15,702. The President reported that the membership had been increased from 602 to 731. The emigration of last year was 712,542—the largest on record; of this 226,000 came to Chicago. Nearly one-third of the 15,706 applicants for employment—5,067—were successful through the society's influence; 23,452 called for aid or employment; in eleven cases friends were found; lost baggage in forty-eight; 156 sent to city hospitals; given medical treatment, 38; transportation, 119. A vote of thanks was tendered the railroads for free transportation, and Jacob Beiersdorf, the President, for his noble work in the society's behalf.

CARELESS ELECTION JUDGES.

The judges in the Tenth and Eleventh Precincts of the Twelfth Ward seem to have been very careless in making up the returns—so careless that the result would have been effected had the contest been close. The judges in the Eleventh Precinct were John Haskins, J. T. Doherty, and P. W. Dunne; and in the Tenth, Charles E. Putnam, James Snow, and C. H. Horton. It appears that these gentlemen, instead of calling at the town office on Halsted street and getting the ballot-boxes, improvised boxes of their own, and received the citizens' vote without any reference to poll-books or any other formality. When it came to a count they had no tally-sheets, and it was impossible for them to properly make a return of the contest. The Eleventh Precinct judges rolled their ballots up in a wad and sealed them in a piece of note-paper, and superscribed the package to the Returning Board. No sealed box, no tally sheet, no balance, and the votes of the innocent voters will count for naught and be counted out. From the Tenth Precinct there was nothing returned except what purported to be a tally-sheet drafted on the back of a poster by one of the clerks and signed by the judges.

PETITION OF THE WHOLESALE LIQUOR-DEALERS.

About twenty-five gentlemen representing different wholesale liquor-houses met in the club-room of the Sherman House yesterday afternoon for the purpose of taking some steps towards the organization of a Wholesale Liquor-Dealers' Association in this city. Mr. John W. Enright presided, and Mr. F. W. Dietzsch acted as Secretary.

A petition was drawn up for presentation to the City Council protesting against the increased taxation of the wholesale liquor traffic in the city. The petition will be presented to the Council tomorrow night by a committee composed of Messrs. John S. Cook, Maas, Kerwin, Dennehy, and Enright. The drawing up of the petition to the Council was the only business of any importance transacted yesterday, but a meeting of the same gentlemen will be held at the same time and place Monday to organize permanently a Wholesale Liquor-Dealers' Association.

The Secretary was instructed to correspond with all the wholesale liquor-dealers of the city, inviting them to be present at the next meeting.

THE JURY QUESTION.

County-Clerk Ryan yesterday put the jury lists furnished him in the box to be drawn from, which, it is thought, will relieve him from making any explanation to the court on the subject. To a reporter he explained that he had not put in the new names before for the reason that the old ones had not been exhausted, and for the further reason that he wanted to have the list of new names complete before putting any of them in. It will be remembered in this connection that Judge Tuley had been complaining for months that the jury-box was empty, and threats had been made to call the attention of the grand jury to the neglect of the Commissioners in the matter, and also that about three months ago the County Clerk took occasion to send a communication to the board on the same subject, reminding the Commissioners of their duty. There is something strange in connection with the whole affair, for, while Judge Tuley complained months ago that the jury-box was empty, the County Clerk's excuse for not putting in the new names is that a different condition of affairs existed—that is, that the box was not empty when it was said to be. At all events, the Commissioners have been somewhat remiss. It was their duty to have prepared their lists at least three months ago, without regard to the condition of the box, and they failed to do it.

SOUTH WATER STREET.

Of early vegetables on South Water street the supply yesterday was only fair, excepting of green onions, which were in abundance. Cucumbers were markedly scare, and were salable at $1.25 per dozen. Lettuce could be procured at 40 to 50 cents per dozen heads, according to quality, with the poorer lots predominating. Onions sold all the way from 10 to 35 cents per dozen bunches. Green peas were more plentiful than at any time the present season, and were selling slowly at $1.50 to $1.75 per three-peck boxes. Spinach was also plentiful, and sold at $2 to $2.25 per barrel. Both celery and asparagus were scarce, the former selling at 25 cents per bunch and the latter at $1.25 per dozen bunches. There was a fair showing of new beets, for which 50 cents per dozen bunches was charged. New potatoes of good size from Louisiana were to be found at quite a number of establishments, the price asked being $2 per three-peck box. It is expected that next week will bring more liberal receipts of all kinds of early garden-truck, and prices are likely to be somewhat lower.

THE LUMBERMEN'S LUNCH.

The sixth of the series of noon winter lunches and social gatherings of the members of the Lumberman's Association was held in the Lumberman's Exchange yesterday at 1 p. m., about fifty of the members and several visitors being present. The lunch being finished, the assemblage was called to order by Mr. J. P. Ketcham, President of the association. As there was no business of any importance to be discussed, Mr. J. H. Swan moved that a vote of thanks be tendered the Oconto Lumber Company and the Messrs. N. and C. H. Mears for the lunch they had provided the association for the occasion. In making the motion the gentleman paid a handsome compliment to the Messrs. Mears for their excellent business standing and the unflagging interest they had always manifested in the lumber interests of the great Northwest.

The motion was seconded by ex-Ald. Addison Ballard, who took occasion while seconding the motion to relate some reminiscences of the early life of Mr. Nathan Mears and early history of the lumber trade of Chicago. These gentlemen were followed by Messrs. R. G. Peters, of Manistee, and D. Dulaney, of Hannibal, Mo., who complimented in the highest terms the excellent organization of the Lumberman's Association and the spirit of harmony existing among its members.

THE DISPERSION OF A FAMILY.

Patrick Stanton, a blear-eyed, dissipated wreck of humanity, together with his three daughters ranging in age from 8 to 17 years, all unkempt and dirty, were brought before Justice Kaufmann yesterday by Officer Dudley of the Humane Society. The latter found the family living in two little rooms at 94 Indiana street, where they all slept on a pile of rags collected from friends and people charitably disposed. The little girls were sent out to beg, and the only money for which the household could look came from a son, Eddie Stanton, who sells papers and blacks boots about the Northwestern depot. How to dispose of the family was a puzzling question. One girl said the family of a friend were anxious to employ her as a nurse, and she was allowed to go. An older sister, almost idiotic, will have to be sent to the Asylum for the Feeble-Minded. The third girl was sent to the House of the Good Shepherd, and the father was committed to the Washingtonian Home. The boy left the court-room in tears, to resume his work of blacking boots and selling papers at the depot.

IROQUOIS CLUB BANQUET.

The second annual banquet of the Iroquois Club will occur Friday evening at the Palmer House. There is every prospect that it will be attended by a large number of distinguished Democrats from all parts of the country, especially the West. The program of toasts and speakers is in part as follows: "Our Country," the Hon. Thomas F. Bayard, of Delaware; "Thomas Jefferson," the Hon. James O. Broadhead, of St. Louis; "Democracy," Col. W. F. Vilas, Wisconsin; "The Democratic Press," William Henry Hurlbert, of the New York World; "The Constitution," the Hon. Lyman Trumbull; "Tariff for Revenue Only," the Hon. Everett P. Wheeler, of New York; "Manifest Destiny," Col. W. C. P. Breckinridge, of Kentucky; Temperance a Virtue; Prohibition a Vice," the Hon. Henry Watterson, of the Louisville Courier-Journal. It is definitly settled that these gentlemen will all be here and speak to the sentiments mentioned. In addition there will be number of other distinguished speakers present, including probably the Hon. J. G. Abbott of Boston, the Hon. John G. Carlisle of Kentucky, the Hon. Carter H. Harrison, the Hon. William Springer, ex-Gov. Palmer, and Col. Morrison, of Illinois.

A NEW FIRE-ESCAPE.

Yesterday afternoon, at 4 o'clock, at the Leland Hotel, on the Michigan avenue front, was given an exhibition of a rope fire-escape, the invention of Mr. A. P. Sturtevant, of Norwich, Conn., the owner of the Sturtevant House in New York. The rope is an exceedingly strong one, made of 320 strands of cotton and five-eights of an inch in diameter, capable of sustaining, it is said, a weight of 1,500 pounds. To it is attached a very strong and wide leather belt, which is buckled under the arms and across the chest. The rope is passed through a strong iron hook, which is fastened at the side of the window, and mortised into the timber, and is held fast by ten two-inch screws. The rope runs through what is termed a friction-sleeve, made of rubber, which is held within easy reach by means of a short strap which is connected to the sleeve by a strong ring and is fastened securely to the belt. This contrivance was fastened to the extreme south window at the north part of the house. The rope was first thrown to the ground, and then dozens of persons, including several little boys, were let down rapidly or slowly, as they wished, the friction sleeve controlling the speed. The exhibition showed the efficiency of the escape, and Mr. Leland said at once that he would adopt it in addition to his present fire-escapes, and the new ladders he will construct from every window of the house. By means of this rope women and children can be lowered, and if women faint their weight will not carry them fast enough to hurt them when they reach the earth.

JONES, OF BOSTON.

Inspectors Hanscomb and Skelton, of Boston, arrived in the city yesterday morning for the purpose of getting John C. Jones, who was arrested here the other day by Central Station detectives. Jones is well known in Boston, where he used to be a broker. He attained considerable notoriety by being mixed up in the Pond divorce case, it being alleged by Mr. Pond that Mrs. Pond had committed adultery with him. This, however, wasn't proved, and Mrs. Pond got a decree, Jones keeping out of the way during the trial of the case. While in business he bought a $1,000 bond for John Hile, the keeper of the barber-shop at the Revere House, but instead of delivering it to Hile, sold it, and, as alleged, appropriated the money. Subsequently he failed and left Boston. Hile had him indicted, and he was caught in this city as stated. The papers for his extradition left Boston Tuesday, but they had not reached Springfield last night, and the Inspectors do not know what has become of them. Jones, however, has been remanded until Monday, by which time the requisition will perhaps come to hand.

THE CITY-HALL.

The city offices will be closed half a day Monday out of respect for ex-Mayor Raymond, who will be buried then.

Judge Cary called on Mayor Harrison yesterday afternoon, and the latter told him he would be pleased to see him at any time and to listen to any suggestions he might wish to make.

There were 938 deaths in the city in March, an increase of 109 over the preceding month, but a decrease of 303 for the corresponding one in 1882. Of the deceased, 483 were under 5 years of age, 324 of them being under 1 year; 15 were between 80 and 90, and 3 over 90. Diphtheria carried off 14, scarlet-fever 13, typhoid-fever 6, consumption 25, convulsions 18, meningitis 6, bronchitis 9, pneumonia 18, puerperal peritonitis 14, old age 23, accidents 33, and suicide 13. The annual rate was 20.72.

The votes in all of the precincts in the city for city officers, except the Ninth Precinct of the Fourth Ward, have been delivered to the City Clerk, and are now deposited in the vault at the rookery. Why this formality has not been attended to by the election officers of the missing precinct is a mystery. The names of the derelict judges are T. H. Patterson, E. J. Saulsbury, and W. S. Forrest. The time allowed by the law for depositing the ballots with the City Clerk expired Friday. The City Council will canvass the votes toward the end of the month.

The Erie street bridge was swung yesterday and the approaches barricaded on both sides of the river. The viaduct was condemned two years ago, and has since been considered unsafe. City-Engineer Artingstall looked it over the other day, and came to the conclusion that it was absolutely dangerous. Hence the closing. The Council appropriated $15,000 for a new viaduct in 1882, but not a cent this year. It is useless to patch up the structure. A new viaduct is needed, as the woodwork is rotten. About $30,000 is required for the purpose, and there can be no travel over the bridge until the Council appropriates the money.

Mayor Harrison has asked all the heads of departments to resign, and those who have not already done so will send in their resignations this week. So far as rumor hath it, only one is to be dropped—Superintendent Fogarty, of the Street Department. The report that W. J. Hynes is to succeed Frank Adams as Corporation Counsel is believed to be untrue. T. O. Thompson, the Mayor's Secretary, leaves voluntarily, as he is going West. A reporter on a morning paper will take his place. It is understood that Mr. Gurney will be reappointed Controller, but that there will be a fight over his confirmation, as a few of the Democratic Aldermen are opposed to him. Some are under the impression that Health Commissioner De Wolf will go. This, however, is not probable. Everybody around the "rookery" is anxious, expecting that the Mayor intends to give some of the other party workers a soft job for the next two years, and displace an equal number of the present incumbents.

REVOLUTION IN RAILROAD SIGNALS.

The Electric Signal Undergoes a Severe Test—Its Success Assured.

The American Railway Signal Company of Illinois again justly claims the attention of railway managers, shareholders, and the public in general.

On calling at the office of the company at No. 95 Fifth avenue, our reporter learned from Mr. D. E. McConkey, General Manager, that an order has just been issued by the officials of the Pennsylvania Railroad that all trains on their Tyrone Division should hereafter be run by the automatic electric block signals constructed by and known as the American Railway Signal Company's system. This system consists in a battery, one telegraph wire strung on poles, with the ordinary telegraph instrument used for opening and closing circuits, together with a track instrument placed under the rail, and when in operation on single-track road, a train passing over the track instrument into a section leaves a red target at the rear, and places one at the extreme end of the section ahead, and at such intermediate points as desired, which remain in that position until the train passes out, when they are raised and others set, and so on indefinitly, thus protecting the train continually while in motion, both at the front and rear, without the aid of any human agency, which cannot be said of any other system of signals yet introduced. It also indicates at each and every switch that a train has entered the section, warning switchmen not to open switches, and may be placed so as to cover all points of danger, such as crossover tracks, junctions, drawbridges, etc., and always indicates the condition of tracks.

This practical adoption by the Pennsylvania Railroad is all the more significant as last year they sent their representatives to Europe to investigate the various systems in use there in order to secure the best, since which they have given this system an experimental test of six months on this the most difficult and dangerous portion of their road with a view of investigating its workings and durability in all kinds of weather and temperature.

MARRIAGES.

HODGE—BARRY—At the residence of the bride's parents, 760 Washington-boulevard, by the father of the bride, on Wednesday evening, April 4, 1883, Alexander J. Hodge and Kate L. Barry, daughter of the Rev. J. K. Barry.

LONDON LIFE.

An Eccentric Aristocratic Family and Its Latest Sensation.

The Reign of Terror That Exists on Account of the Irish Troubles.

John Bright's Assumption of Rectorial Robes, and His Ill-Timed Speech.

Five Thousand Ragged and Dirty Boys Enjoy A London Pantomime.

LONDON, March 24.—[Special Correspondence.]—You will have heard of the reported attempt to assasinate Lady Florence Dixie; perhaps you have heard that already the political sensation has waned and the social sensation has waxed. It turns out that the police investigations throw very damaging suspicions about the whole story of her Ladyship. The circumstances can find no corroboration. She came into her house near Windsor Castle, and in an exhausted condition reported she had been attacked by two men in women's clothes. She gave out that she suspected them of being Fenians. She further accounts for her escape from their daggers by the presence of her powerful dog, and also the noise of an approaching cart, which frightened off her assailants.

Lady Dixie is already both famous and notorious. She wrote some years ago a book on Patagonia, which was brilliant and stuffed very full of valuable information. On her return to England she was to have been presented at Court, but was refused admittance to the Queen's presence because of her refusal to wear feathers in consequence of her hair having been cropped short for the greater convenience of travel. After this she went off to Zululand during the struggle there, as the war correspondent of the Morning Post. Her Ladyship's visit to Cetewayo was chronicled on all hands, and was furthermore depicted in the Illustrated News. Here, alas, in connection with her patronage of the Zulu King, comes large ground of suspecting her veracity concerning this attack upon her life. She published a letter addressed to herself from Cetewayo, which his Majesty avowed with an oath at the time he never wrote. Then her Ladyship published a statement to the effect that the interpolated passages in her letter were from a previous letter she had received from the King by an earlier mail. Cetewayo denied ever having written any such earlier letter, and Sir Hercules Robinson corroborated the King's assertion, to the confusion and flat contradiction of Lady Florence Dixie. The truth is that her Ladyship belongs to a very eccentric family. It was her brother, the Marquis of Queensberry, who made such an unseemly onslaught upon Mr. Tennyson's play, "The Promise of May," on its opening night. The Marquis is a secularist, and is almost socially ostracised because of his eccentric religious and social views.

Lord Archibald Douglas, another brother, is at the head of a "Refuge for the Destitute" in the Harrow Road, and has a sister with him, Lady Gertrude, who is at the head of the baking department of the establishment. Lady Gertrude has genius and very large, if somewhat unusual, theories of human rights and activities. She soon eschewed the society of lords and ladies, and found the society of the baker-boys who attended her more to her mind, and, having set her affections upon one of them, she married him. Although her eccentric brothers and sister protested against such a social scandal she heeded them not. The baker-boy was a physically handsome fellow—indeed, he is said to be a most fascinating creature to look upon; and these twain, made one, live sweetly and happily together as Captain and First-Lieutenant of the baking department of the "Refuge for the Destitute" in the Harrow road.

But Lady Florence is the flower of the family. She is young and beautiful. She is clever, and has traveled far out of the routinism of English women. But her Ladyship is romantic and lives in the ideal, and there is a suspicion—a cruel suspicion—that this reported attack upon her life occurred not in the domain of the actual, but in the higher domain of the ideal. At least its phenomena must be remanded to the investigation of occultism. However, "our gracious Lady Queen Victoria," as the Prayer Book calls her Majesty, has been almost prostrated by the news of the supposed attempt at assasination.

ALARM EVERYWHERE.

Indeed, there is widespread alarm in London. There is a panic. London is trembling in its boots. Five hundred men have been added to the police force, and some of the papers are crying out for a thousand more. The Queen stays at Windsor and is getting as nervous as the Czar. She was to have gone to Osborne before this, and it is given out that she slipped and fell, and, being a little upset by the accident, remains continued to her apartments. The fact is this: The good old lady is almost insane with fright and evil apprehensions. This blowing up of Government offices, this trying to blow up the Times newspaper building, this reputed attack upon Lady Florence Dixie, and all the rest of it has alarmed her Majesty, her Ministers, and all public functionaries.

The Prince of Wales is a brave man, and he is enthusiastically received everywhere. He drives about and walks about as though undaunted, and the crowd begin to believe he has a charmed life. His straightforward going to duty, meeting engagements, his bold public appearances at all sorts of meetings, have created a new and profound admiration of his pluck.

Poor Mr. Forster's life is not worth living. He is attended by detectives every step he takes.

"What next?" is the question. Here in London we are prepared for any news of dynamite and disaster.

JOHN BRIGHT AT GLASGOW.

Americans are always ready to hear any news of John Bright. He had political insight and sense when these qualities seemed to have deserted such statesmen as Mr. Gladstone and such philosophers as Dr. Martineau at the time of our Civil War. He has stood always and everywhere for the people and the enlargement of their privileges and amenities of life. But he did seem a little out of place as the Lord Rector of Glasgow University. There were 4,000 people yesterday in St. Andrew's Hall, and Principal Caird presided. The plain old Quaker was invested with the hood, and upon him was conferred the degree LL.D. What incongruity! Mr. Bright stands five feet eight in his boots. He is broad, and now he is getting corpulent. His face is square, his mouth is wide, and his lips compressed. His eyes are a bluish-gray. He has an abundance of white hair, and his whiskers have now grown under his chin and are left quite long. He dresses in very plain black old-fashioned broadcloth he still wears. His collar is unique, a sort of magnified stable-boy's collar, standing up rigidly round his neck. He has worn for the last thirty years the scarf and pin worn thirty years ago by dandies—such as Bulwer, Dickens, and Beaconsfield wore in those days. The only thing that indicates his religious sect is his broad-brimmed hat. Mr. Bright confesses to constitutional laziness. He inherited a large fortune, and, though the manufacturing business which his father left is still carried on at Rochdale, he takes no part in it other than to receive his share of the dividends. His brother, Jacob Bright, member for Manchester, gives much more time to public affairs, social questions, and private business than does his more famous brother. Mr. Bright has said nothing new or prophetic these many years now, and yet he says his old things with such honesty and downrightness that one is refreshed and stimulated by hearing them.

Yesterday Mr. Bright stood up to speak in his rectorial robes, but found them cumbersome and hindering, and so he stopped at the very beginning of his speech and took them off. Whilst in this process, which he did with his Quaker deliberateness, the students struck up and sang: "He's a Jolly Good Fellow." After silence had been restored Mr. Bright gave a sort of resumé of political growth, or the growth of political liberty, since the establishment of American Independence.

After this political sketch the Lord Rector gave a homily on social statistics, which was as far a field of the occasion as the political part of the speech. In this social part of the address Mr. Bright twitted this religious Scotch people with their utter want of religion. He told his Glasgow audience of 4,000 souls that in their great town forty-one families out of every hundred lived in houses of one room! He quoted further their statistics showing that thirty-seven families out of every hundred lived in houses of only two rooms; that therefore seventy-eight families in every hundred were living an unwholesome, worse than barbaric, and, indeed, morally indecent life!

However, this was hardly the sort of pabulum these 4,000 genteel people came to receive, and, though good and wholesome, it was not suitable to the needs of the hundreds of students who sat before this political patriarch. Indeed, there was so much laughter and so much cheering during the delivery of the speech that it was evident that the students were treating the whole performance as in the nature of a joke. Mr. Bright felt out of place, and before he ended his address his audience knew his feelings did not belie the facts of the situation.

THE PANTOMIME.

The jump from John Bright as a Lord Rector to the pantomime is not great or hazardous. Both are equally English institutions. Not John Bright as a Lord Rector, but plain John Bright the Quaker and the good and gay pantomime. And long may they both live! It is difficult to understand why the pantomime has not been transplanted to America. In the provinces all the theatres and in London several of the leading play-houses are given over to the pantomime from Christmas to Passion Week. So the magnificent, rollicking, gorgeous, glaring, miraculous spectacle which has held the boards at Drury Lane all these weeks closed with the end of last week. Mr. Augustus Harris deserves all praise for opening his house several times to charity children, and last week at a morning performance to the waifs and strays of the East End. These children of the gutter came 5,000 strong in rags and filth, a long, slimy procession, in a pelting rain.

Mrs. Burgwin, of the Borough District School Board, marshaled these hosts of the unwashed, and with such assistance as she could command marched a distance of between two and three miles to old Drury Lane. Such a sight is to be seen nowhere else on earth but in London. Rags, tatters, flummery, frippery, filth, matted hair are words that convey to American ears no meaning as compared with the actuality for which they stand in London. The attempt to keep these 5,000 unfledged birds of prey in order during their march was very soon given up as hopeless. Their glee was simply uproarious, their horse-play irrepressible, and their taunts and jeers at times far from savory. During the pantomime the chorus of criticism, the gutter slang, the throwing of bits of rags called caps, the quick perception of the ludicrous, the stamping the time of the familiar tunes, the reckless joining in the songs, the catching up a phrase and sending it booming from pit to gallery, was a frolic and a rollick to be heard nowhere on earth except in England. Then, at Mr. Augustus Harris' expense, refreshments were passed around and pandemonium was enacted in detail. The screaming and the snatching were appalling, and eating was done with the fury of young wolves. What is to become of these children? Let us not philosophize. There they were, 5,000 strong, from the squalor and destitution of the East End of London. These children are born in sin. They huddle in tenements, in alleys and courts, as thick as bees in a hive. They know neither father, mother, nor earthly relative. They are a class below the newsboys and bootblacks. They beg and steal; perhaps beg a broom and take to sweeping the street crossings for a while. They turn out at 11 or 12 o'clock at night to open cab-doors for persons coming out of the theatres, for which needless service they claim a penny. There are thousands upon thousands of these juvenile cut-throats who have no home and no means of support from day to day. They lodge at night wherever they can find a doorway and whenever they fall asleep.

The West End of London, seemingly, is heaven on earth, and the East End is hell on earth. This seething mass of destitution and degradation is today the terror of civilization!

ROBERT LAIRD COLLIER.

ORGANIZED CHARITIES.

Dinner Given to the Rev. Dr. Gurteen by the Friends of the Cause.

The Rev. S. H. Gurteen, who has been laboring so assiduously to reform the system of public charity in vogue in this city and county for some time—he is the Secretary of the Chicago Charity Organization—was given a dinner at the Leland Hotel last evening by J. O. Henning, who has been equally active in the work.

Invitations had been sent to a few of the most prominent citizens, and the table had been arranged to accommodate twenty-five persons. There were present among others Col. W. P. Rend, A. F. Seeberger, W. C. D. Grannis, Emery A. Storrs, the Rev. S. H. Gurteen, M. A. Ryerson, J. O. Henning, B. P. Moulton, G. C. Clark, G. C. Walker, and W. W. Kimball, and letters of regret in which the greatest sympathy was expressed for Mr. Gurteen's work were read from J. V. Farwell, J. R. Walsh, A. A. Carpenter, Mr. Crerar, Marshall Field, N. S. Bouton, W. T. Baker, W. A. Fuller, G. M. Pullman, Marvin Hughitt, C. L. Hutchinson, E. G. Keith, and P. D. Armour.

The dinner was one of the finest ever spread in the city on such an occasion, and was followed by brief speeches

DR. GURTEEN.

The Rev. Dr. Gurteen spoke of the history of the Charity Organization in London, where it originated, and also of its work in this country, dwelling upon the fact that its purpose was not so much to distribute alms as to help the poor to help themselves, and to do away with public alms-asking, and to make street-begging obnoxious. The society here, he said, had already secured a registration of a large number of the persons receiving relief, from whatever source, and it was intended, if the necessary financial aid was extended, to establish a system of visitations, district the city, and employ visitors, which he thought would not only decrease the number of paupers, but would serve to concentrate the charity of the city and prevent the giving to persons who were undeserving. It was just as wrong, he said, to give money to a professional pauper as it was to give whisky to a confirmed drunkard, and it was this idea that the organization was trying to impress upon the public mind, and when it was impressed it would be a relief to everybody, not excepting the street mendicants. And, further than this, the object was to teach thriftiness and discourage the making of paupers, and at the same time to protect every deserving person from suffering and want by supplying him with the means of earning a livelihood if he was willing to work.

B. P. MOULTON.

B. P. Moulton followed with the reading of a paper recently presented to the Commercial Club, which was largely statistical, and which went to show that wherever charity had been consolidated, as in London, for instance, the results had been excellent. The paper commended the organization presided over by Mr. Gurteen in the strongest terms, and argued that the giving of money was by no means the best charity; but, on the contrary, the prevention of the misapplication of charity was the great desideratum. If the Charity Organization was sustained, as he thought it should be, it would put a stop to promiscuous alms-giving, and there was no better way to sustain it than by the consolidation of all charitable work. He referred to the expenditures of the county for charitable purposes, among other things, and thought that the amount could and ought to be largely reduced, and that the organization in question would do a great deal to that end.

Messrs. Clarke, Rend, and others added words of approval of the movement, and Mr. Henning announced that he felt greatly encouraged. He had found the business public who had been made aware of the objects of the organization heartily in accord with it and ready to help it on, and announced, as an instance, that J. W. Doane had promised a contribution of $500 when it should be needed, and that P. D. Armour, C. F. Cummings, Franklin MacVeagh, and others had assured him that they could be relied upon for a few hundred each as necessity might require.

THE METROPOLIS.

Leading Actors and Their Engagements for Next Season.

Dr. Mallory Insults Mr. Parton at a Free-Thought Club Meeting.

The Passion Play Finally Consigned to a Merited Oblivion.

Some Reminiscences of Peter Cooper and Thurlow Weed—Notes and Gossip.

NEW YORK, April 5.—[Special Correspondence.]—In a recent letter to you I spoke at some length of the leading ladies in the various theatres of the country, calling attention to the fact that even the prettiest and most popular were getting along in years, and named some of the more promising girls likely to succeed them. At the head of these last I placed Miss Georgie Cayvan; and the precedence has been justified this week, for A. M. Palmer has engaged her as leading lady at the Union Square Theatre for next season, taking Miss Sara Jewett's place. This gives her position as the youngest leading lady in America, and no doubt she is the most capable.

Naturally following the subject of leading ladies is that of leading men. It is a matter with which managers have to cope constantly. Good leading men are as scarce as hen's teeth. In fact, there are probably not more than three or four who fill all the requirements on the English-speaking stage. The best of these—for he speaks his native tongue correctly and elegantly—is Charles Coghlan, but he is anchored in London.

Frohman, of the Madison Square, who seems to be trying to get all the trump cards into his hand, went after him a year ago, but Coghlan's terms were so high that the effort was abandoned. The fact is, Coghlan is comfortably fixed in London. He has a family, an interesting club-life, a bright circle of admirers, and he is not compelled to travel. He is the man Palmer ought to get to succeed Charley Thorne, but Coghlan would probably want the receipts of the theatre to come. Mr. Palmer will still have to depend upon Joe Whiting for leading business. Chicago theatre-goers who remember him as John Strebelow in "The Banker's Daughter" will not need to be assured that he is a good, sterling, conscientious, and finished actor, who will probably play well the parts presented to him. Mr. Palmer has in consideration several other gentlemen whose names we shall shortly know, and will doubtless be able to carry his season through with his old-time prestige. Miss Cayvan will be the novelty. Maude Harrison will play the comedy parts; while Parsloe, J. H. Stoddart, Mrs. Phillips, Mrs. Vernon, Nettie Gulon, Walden Ramsey, and the rest of the company will be seen at the opening of the season in New York in a new play entitled "Storm-Beaten," by Robert Buchanan, which has just scored a success in London.

Lester Wallack had Osmond Tearle some years ago, but let him go and secured Mr. Herbert, a London actor, but Herbert turned out to be rather weak, and successful negotiations were reopened with Mr. Tearle. He is now playing the principal part in the "Silver King," and, being popular in this city, he is likely to remain at Wallack's for a number of years.

The Madison Square Theatre has discovered a new leading man who promises to grow fast. His name is Fred Bryton. Frohman loaned George Clarke to John Stetson, and substituted Bryton for him in "Young Mrs. Winthrop." Bryton made a hit. He is a handsome, dashing fellow, as personally attractive as Montague was, a better actor, and thoroughly artistic, and he seems to be a sort of surprise to managers who had not heard much of him before. He is 32 or 33 years old, and will play next Monday in Mrs. Burton Harrison's comedy, "The Russian Honeymoon." He has been engaged for three years, and promises to be a profitable "find" for the Madison Square proprietors.

Augustin Daly has no strong leading man. As his pieces are all of a light-comedy order, he will no doubt do very well with his present force, which is well adapted to comedy parts. John Drew is honest and pleasant in his interpretations, and Ada Rehan is charming; so the plays will not suffer.

James O'Neil, whom you know very well in Chicago, has joined his forces with John Stetson, and, while he will doubtless be seen a good deal throughout the country next season, Mr. Stetson will doubtless exhibit him at the Fifth Avenue Theatre during most of the winter. Sara Jewett, after considerable commercial coquetry, has at last broken away from the Union Square absolutely, and joined the O'Neil company under Stetson. This attractive lady received an offer from the Madison Square, but Stetson's blandishments prove to have been superior.

"A Parisian Romance" has at last been taken off at the Union Square. It is a bit of splendid misery and debauchery, and has run too long. I doubt if it is a healthy and noble thing for an artist to paint a cancer to sell and hang up in somebody's picture-gallery, even if it has developed beautifully, and has come to look a good deal like a full-blown rose. The play has been admirably presented, of course. Next Monday Mr. Palmer's guests are to be regaled with the delightful comedies of the Wyndham troupe, whose pleasantries will come like a sweet breeze blowing over a malarial district.

THE SUICIDE OF MORSE.

Mr. N. S. Morse, manager of the News, who committed suicide yesterday by shooting himself through the head in his office, has a history. In Connecticut, when the War broke out, his voice was loudly heard on the side of the Rebellion through editorials in his newspaper, the Bridgeport Farmer. He ridiculed the Union army for its defeat at Bull Run, likening its soldiers to frightened cowards running away from heroes defending their homes and their rights. I remember Morse's career well. He presided at the peace meetings, pulled up the white flags, and advised his hearers to fight the enlistment officers of the tyrant Lincoln. He called a county peace meeting at Stepney, which I remember well, raised a great white flag, and was on the platform speaking in behalf of "the cause of the South," when a hundred or two Brideport boys under command of P. T. Barnum appeared over the hill with Union flags flying. Morse and his compatriots fled to an adjoining corn-field, where they drew their arms and threatened to make a sally to retake the platform. Elias Howe, inventor of the sewing machine, who was on the platform, shouted: "If they fire a gun, boys, burn this town, and I'll pay the Union men's damages!" There was no fight. Morse retreated to his Bridgeport office and was writing an editorial about the outrage perpetrated on peace-loving citizens, when he heard an angry shout on the street, and, looking out, saw several hundred of Lincoln's hirelings making for the office in a state of high excitement. He fled to the roof and escaped by adjoining buildings, while the crowd entered, threw the type and fixtures in the street, and broke the presses with sledge-hammers. Two hundred clubs for defense were found in an adjoining room. Morse, hooted at and grossly insulted wherever he appeared on the street, shortly fled to Washington, and escaped thence across the Potomac and James to the land of his choice, becoming the editor of a paper in Augusta, Ga., which he published during the War, raising no more peace flags, but repeatedly calling on the Confederate hosts to "rally." He raised considerable cotton, and was about selling it when the insatiable Sherman came along and burnt it up. This is the man who, at the age of 56, shot himself in the office of Ben Wood's paper yesterday. If Sherman had permitted him to sell his cotton—however, what is the use of conjecturing?

THE NINETEENTH CENTURY CLUB.

Tuesday evening I attended another of the interesting meetings of the Nineteen Century Club at Courtlandt Palmer's on Gramercy Park to hear James Parton's paper on "The Religion of the Future"—published next morning in most of the papers. It was a brilliant performance, of course, but the polite discussion of the tender theme from a radical point of view was not accepted by the orthodox clergymen invited, as Mr. President Palmer had probably anticipated it would be. Mr. Parton mentioned the fact that his parents were devoutly orthodox, but he had been unable to accept the doctrines they taught him; whereupon Dr. Mallory, owner and editor of the Madison Square Theatre and eight or ten peripatetic theatres, and stage manager of the Churchman (Episcopal organ), being invited to comment on the address, began in a bitter and defiant tone of voice and said he was not surprised to hear a condemnation of sacred things from "a man who had not hesitated to throw disrespect upon his own mother!" This outrageous speech was greeted with hisses, loud, indignant, and general, quite silencing the speaker, who made his remarks brief and retreated to the street with his overcoat on his arm, without waiting to take any formal leave. This scene was the more remarkable because it took place in a club where extreme courtesy is the rule, and where offensive personality has never before been indulged in by any speaker, and in drawing-rooms where the intellectual élite of the city were assembled. The Rev. Howard Crosby was invited to be present and participate, but he sent his negative, drawn from the same bundle of maternal similes, remarking: "I cannot discuss the truths of religion, I would as soon discuss the virtue of my mother." Which strikes me as a queer speech. I begin to think it is of doubtful expediency to discuss the questions of religious belief with those who differ from us very widely.

THE PASSION PLAY—EXIT.

Salmi Morse has had several millions of dollars' worth of good advertising, but it is unavailable, for the courts steadily refuse to let him produce the Passion Play. I have already set forth in these letters extracts from the text of the sacred drama, from which your readers may have seen how sapless and stilted it is—how utterly unlike the simple and dignified words uttered by Jesus and his disciples. And yet I confess that I have sympathy for Morse, not because he has borrowed a good deal of money, for that may not trouble him seriously, but because, really, you know, this ought to be a free country to some extent. I was up the other evening at the last rehearsal. The present objections to the play, even from the most devout point of view, are mostly fanciful. The crucifixion and ascension scenes are both omitted. So is the Gethsemane scene. So is the Last Supper with its dreary monologue. In fact, the Nazarene is the least interesting character in the play, and appears only twice, and only for two or three minutes each time. In this character Wannamaker is no more "horrible" than the Jesus who sings in the oratorios, except that he is made up to resemble the pictures painted in the sixteenth century, which probably look as little like the historical Nazarene as they do like any man. The black-eyed blonde Mary, with a white cashmere robe, draped and hooded with blue, becomes quite an interesting personage; so does Joseph, in raw silk of neutral tints and long black hair. But the real hero is Judas, with a shaggy red head and frowsy red beard like Justus Schwab, and appareled in a red flannel shirt like a Minnesota lumberman just in from a "drive." And the scenes of the temple and the streets of Jerusalem are quite impressive.

But they were not half so impressive as was the indignant wailing of the Jewish maidens and mothers when the show was broken up Tuesday night. They had sung for four months and had received no pay. They had lived on promises. Mr. Morse had chucked them under the chin and called them good girls, and always told them they would be paid next week. They would trust him no more. Some of them cried. Others mashed the papier-maché babies against the temple, kicked the papier-maché brass lion, sat on the altar, and denounced the whole outfit. Mr. Morse came upon the stage and told them that they would be paid next week, when Cymon of Cyrene told him to "cheese it," and Salome and St. Bartholomew inquired of him in one voice what he was giving them.

It is certain, I think, that the choruses can never be got together again until it is publicly known that a license has been granted.

THE CHILDREN SUCCESSFUL.

I trust that alleged humanitarians have not been so successful thereaway in keeping children from earning a respectable living on the stage as they generally have in this city. Hundreds of children of all ages are now fighting to keep off starvation, some of them, no doubt, by beggary, because they have not been permitted to "ruin their health" by acting in petty parts in harmless dramas. Barnum has taken a stand in favor of his young performers, and he made something of a sensation in court when he offered to exhibit their prosecutor to the public as a man who wanted to prevent children from earning a living. If it were a choice between acting in a show and being sent to school by rich fathers, there might be room for remonstrance, but it is always a choice between acting and something worse. In outward condition, Sissy Sleary is the typical child of the stage.

PETER COOPER.

Every flag in the city is at half-mast to celebrate the death of our most venerable and public-spirited citizen. Ninety-two years is a long time to live. When Peter Cooper was born Edgar A. Poe's grandfather was not yet married. Shelley, and Tom Hood, and Keats were not born. Byron was a baby in his mother's arms. Washington was farming again. Napoleon Bonaparte was a young Second Lieutenant on half-pay and without a command. New York was about as large as Kalamazoo now is, and the City-Hall Park was a flower and vegetable garden a little out of town.

"I well remember," he said to me one day, "how, fifty odd years ago, I went off up-town alone, and rowed across to Mr. Blackwell's farm, in the East River, and got an offer of it from him at a stipulated price, and then came back to the Board of Aldermen, of which I was a member, and induced them to buy it for the city prisons. Nobody expected to live to see the city grow around those islands."

During this same call Mr. Cooper said to me: "I have just had a curious caller: an Episcopal Bishop, who came to see if I would not join 'some evangelical church,' so that, when I came to die, nobody should say that the Cooper Union was established by an atheist or infidel. I told him I was not an atheist or infidel; I was a Unitarian in belief; I knew no object of worship except the one living and true God; and I considered religion nothing more nor less than a science by which the movements of the material and moral world could be regulated; and that I knew no better teacher than the opinions of mankind. He politely said that he perceived that I was a scholar. This compliment I was obliged to decline, and I told him I had never been to school more than three or four months in all my life. If I had my way, I told him, the worst of the human race, the mose depraved wretches, should wake up in another life, not in torment, but in the midst of loving friends and beautiful things. The good Bishop did not even try to convert me to any better theology, but he went away with every expression of kindness—kindness which I am sure he felt."

Thurlow Weed told me of a similar visit he had after he was 80 from a complacent young sprig from the divinity school, and how he received him. It was a very interesting interview indeed, but the venerable journalist did most of the talking, and the serious-minded youth retired more serious than ever. "How absurd and how incomprehensible it is," said Mr. Weed, "that clergymen should imagine that a thoughtful man can live to years of maturity amid death and suffering without having given grave attention to the puzzles of this life and the problems of the next."

BITS OF TALK.

I called on O'Donovan-Rossa the other day, but what good? His eyes were big, and he was chock full of mystery. His inflections foreshadowed awful events. I asked, timidly, "Are you really going to blow up the throne when the Prince tries to sit down on it?" He looked wise and portentous, and merely said, "Look out for something soon." That is all I could get out of him.

The Jumel-estate lawsuit is settled again this week, and the heirs of "May Bowne" are still in possession, as they have been since Mme. Jumel died in 1865. Litigation has now lasted for fifty years almost without interruption, and the Chases expect it to go on. The present settlement is brought about by large concessions of real estate to the French claimants. It is now reported that the heirs of old George Washington are about to reopen their case. G. W. B. has brought suit twice on the ground that he was a natural son of May Bowne before her marriage to Jumel, and that he was named after his father. It was substantially proved that the first part of his claim was true, but the last half was not established.

CROFFUT.

JOHN HOWARD PAYNE.

For The Chicago Tribune.

He's found at last his "Home, Sweet Home!"
He found it in the grave alone!
Where'er we dwell, where'er we roam,
This is the only home we own.

Who for the living Homer cared—
For all his symphonies divine?
A beggar through the streets he fared;
But, dead, no name doth brighter shine.

The splendid shafts that men may build
Atone not for his lonely life;
His heart with bitterness was filled—
He knew naught but despair and strife.

O Genius! such is e'er thy fate—
Ne'er to enjoy thy meed of praise;
O World, thy honors come too late—
Too late thy laurels and thy bays!

BOSTON.

A Gossipy Letter from the Bay State Town.

How a Gloucester Fisherman Learned to Sketch Prettily.

Beautiful House Decorations—Social and Literary Notes.

BOSTON, Mass., April 5.—[Special Correspondence.]—The fact that Easter fell early this year has no apparens effect on our changeable weather—sunshine one day a snow-storm the next. We sons of the North have to acclimatize our lungs to this as best we may. It makes our heart thrill with envy to hear of one prosperous, care-free friend's wanderings in Florida and the Sunny South generally—a certain halo of orange-blossoms and roses surround them. Well, we must be philosophical, for these peripatetically-inclined people lose a great deal of interest after all.

The picture-shops fairly teem with artistic beauties, many of the best artists being well represented with such names as Jacquil, Detaille, Munkacsy, Troyon, and Wahlberg among the number. At one of the sales which I attended lately were shown two very fine specimens of Benjamin Constant's work. This artist, a pupil of Cabanel, is remarkable for his wonderful command of color. For instance, the larger and more important of these pictures is called "Oriental Woman Perfuming Her Garments After the Bath." The woman is of Titienesque coloring, and is represented as standing against a background composed of a bright, grass-green curtain while she wears drapery of peacock blue. This combination is managed with consummate wit, so that the effect is not displeasing; it is positively good.

A very interesting tale of real life has lately come to the ears of some of us interested in art matters. The hero thereof is known as "the Gloucester fisherman," but his real name is George W. Harvey. Harvey was born and grew up in the quiet little fishing-town of Gloucester, on Cape Anne, a stalwart, sun-browned young fellow, earning his bread by his ancestral trade "fishing." On the deck of the little schooner which he owned or hired for that purpose he would, while sailing before the wind or waiting for a haul of fish, sketch with a bit of charcoal from memory whatever pleased his fancy. At last the happy day arrived when he could purchase the necessary colors and brushes that form an artist's stock in trade. With these ready to his hand he made charming little views of the sea he loved so well, or bits of beach, with an old boat perhaps, or his own little schooner scudding along wing and wing before the breeze. Graceful, dainty "aquarelles" they indeed are, and last year the young artist was glad to sell them as low as $4 apiece, an incredibly small sum for such fine work. Now the price is materially increased, though still very reasonable.

A NOVEL COURSE OF LECTURES.

A subject that has lately excited the heart of the female portion of the population are some lectures called "Emergency Lectures." The object of these is, as the name indicates, that people may learn how to act in case of sudden accident, fractures of limbs, etc., pending the arrival of a doctor. Dr. C. B. Porter, of Boston, is delivering the course, and the lectures are made most amusing as well as instructive by the introduction of "an assistant"—i. e., a man to whom all the drenching, bandaging, etc., is applied. It was highly interesting at the last one to see this unfortunate fellow resuscitated, apparently, from a drowned condition. Perhaps it was not painful, but it certainly looked so. Similar lectures have taken place in New York this winter, and they serve a double purpose, as the tickets can be sold for charitable objects, as is the case here, several hundred dollars having been raised for a most worthy charity.

HOUSE DECORATION.

At a recent reception which I had the pleasure of attending I was struck by the exceeding beauty of the house. In the first place, it was not very large. Far be it from me to deprecate size or magnificence in houses, but even in these days all have not their millions, and this house, in point of size at least, represents what some of us may hereafter attain to, though we are not Vanderbilts. The house was designed by the well-known architect Mr. James R. Gregerson, and is somewhat French in style—the first story being built reg-de-chausse. The hall is very large, and is composed of white wood, carved by Rossi, the famous Italian designer. The floor is polished and spread with rugs, while Gobelin tapestry hung at intervals relieved the monotony of the walls. On either side of the noble fireplace, fit in size to grace a baronial hall, are placed casts of Lucca de la Robbia's famous "Singing Boys." Charmingly-designed stained-glass doors open into the rooms proper of the dwelling. The library is the most beautiful of these. It is nearly square, and is perfectly appointed in every way. A large and roomy bow-window gives this room additional size and elegance. From this window a truly wonderful view can be obtained, for it looks directly out, apparantly without land between, upon the River Charles. The lights, especially about sunset, from the river are most brilliant and remind one of Venice and all sorts of lovely places. To return, however. Up-stairs we find the dining-room, also commanding a river view, and two charming drawing-rooms, a large and a small one. In the latter the colors are yellow and white; in the other darker shades prevail—the effect of the wall decoration in this room being exceptionally fine. The color of the groundwork is terra-cotta, with large white lilies painted in bold relief.

THE AUTHOR OF "MR. ISAACS."

Among the notable people at present making Boston their home is Mr. F. Marion Crawford, the author of that much-talked-of story, "Mr. Isaacs." Mr. Crawford is tall, blond, and quite young, being only 28. He is very accomplished, speaking well half a dozen languages, and is a fine musician as well, though caring little for society. I had the pleasure not long since of attending a lecture delivered by this young author on "Art and Architecture in India"—a most learned and exhaustive essay truly, treating the subject from the time of Tamerlane downward. Mr. Crawford contemplates leaving town almost immediately for a tour through Japan in company with a party of friends. He may discover an entirely original source of romance among the denizens of that island, and refute the saying that an author's first book is his best. A very funny bit of humor appeared not long since in the shape of a newspaper sketch entitled "Mr. Jacobs," purporting to be a parody of Mr. Crawford's story. The author of this squib is F. T. Wheelwright, a rising young journalist of this city.

MISCELLANEOUS NOTES.

The last Henschel symphony concert occurred Saturday evening, the chief work presented being Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. It was fairly well rendered, but the chorus, which was a volunteer one, lacked the training necessary for such a great composition. The concerts recommence Oct. 13, their third season.

An effort is being made to retain Mr. William Warren, the veteran actor, as one of the stock company of the Boston Museum. Mr. Warren has announced his determination to resign at the end of this season, and a petition signed by over a thousand citizens is to be presented on the evening of his coming benefit, begging him to reconsider a decision which is a matter of great regret to many of the community.

CHIC.

LIEUT. RODGERS AND THE PANAMA CANAL.

From the report to the Navy Department of Lieut. Raymond P. Rodgers, United States navy, upon the Panama Canal—the plans, the progress actually made, and the prospects for the future—it appears that the labor of excavation is actually in progress at two points, having been retarded by the great preparation that was necessary in the construction of landing-places, houses, wells, etc.; but that the excavation goes on so slowly as to be more formal than effective, though machinery has been built and contracts made that will by and by carry it forward with great vigor. Lieut. Rodgers' account of the plans shows in simple words the stupendous difficulties of the future. The total length of the canal will be seventy-three kilomètres, and for about fifty kilomètres the depth of the cuts required will be moderate, ranging from five to fifteen mètres only; but for a distance of twenty kilomètres the cuts must be from thirty to 110 mètres in depth. Cuts 110 mètres in depth will be 120 mètres wide at the top. Naturally the anticipations are not oversanguine. Lieut. Rodgers holds "that there can no longer be doubt as to the intention of the company to carry out the proposed plan of this canal. The date fixed by M. de Lesseps for its completion is 1888, and the cost 600,000,000 francs. But I infer from conversation with canal engineers and with others well versed in affairs that the canal will not be finished for some years later, and that the cost will largely exceed the estimate. And it seems probable that this will undergo the experience of many other great projects—that the original subscribers must again subscribe or lose their venture, and that new stockholders will be the ones to share the profits." That will not encourage investment, but it sounds like good sense. Certainly, if it has cost 130,000,000 francs to get ready, to scratch away rubbish, and mark out the ground, four or five times as much will not suffice—if twenty times as much will—to complete a canal with such cuts as are described.

AMERICAN SOCIETY.

Notable Events in Chicago and Washington During the Week.

In Chicago.

It has been the custom in Chicago social circles to recognize the departure of the Lenten season by a round of gayety in the shape of balls, parties, etc., but this year it has been unusually quiet and dull—almost as much so as it was during Lent—and there are but few events to chronicle during the last week. Monday evening the first annual exhibition of the Bohemian Club opened at the new art institution and it was attended by a number of society people. Mr. and Mrs. S. S. Kidder, of No. 3548 Vincennes avenue, celebrated their crystal wedding the same evening. A pleasant surprise party was tendered to Mr. and Mrs. Horace Tucker Monday evening, and Mrs. Tucker was presented with a pair of solitaire diamond earrings. Nellie French, daughter of J. H. French, Esq., entertained a number of young friends Monday evening at the residence of her parents, No. 652 West Monroe street. The South Side dancing-class was resumed Monday.

Wednesday evening Miss Jessie Roberts, daughter of S. C. Roberts, Esq., and William Preston, of Preston, Kean & Co., were married by the Rev. W. X. Ninde at the residence of the bride's parents, No. 2320 Indiana avenue. The Misses O'Brien, of No. 240 Dearborn avenue, entertained a party of young friends Wednesday evening. The ladies of Unity Church gave a hop the same evening at Martine's Hall in aid of the Channing Club.

The Amherst Glee Club were tendered a banquet at the Palmer House Thursday evening by a number of friends. The same evening Miss Regina Watson gave a select dancing-party at the residence of her parents, No. 297 Indiana street.

The Harvard Club dinner at the Grand Pacific Hotel occurred Friday evening and was well attended, and the same evening the St. Andrew's Society gave their annual banquet and ball at the Sherman House. The Chicago Ladies' Seminary held a reception the same evening.

The social outlook for the coming week is not very promising. Tuesday evening the post-Lenten party of the young people of the Church of the Epiphany occurs at Martine's West Side Hall, and the same evening the Baptist Social Union meets at the Palmer House for a banquet and reunion. Miss Ada Springer, of Thirty-ninth street and Prairie avenue, has issued cards of invitation for private theatricals and dancing Tuesday and Thursday evenings. Friday evening the banquet of the Iroquois Club occurs at the Palmer House. Saturday evening the French Club meets at the residence of Miss Kimball, No. 2612 Michigan avenue.

There will be three notable weddings April 26. Miss Belle Jansen and Col. Reiser, of Denver, will be married on that day, as will Miss Lora Small and J. Herbert Moore, and Miss Hibbard and Mr. Sterling.

Washington.

What is called the "Washington season" generally ends with Lent, and there are seldom any official local events after that. But the world of the National Capital is not limited to Congress, and the diplomatic and official world do not deprive themselves of social pleasures when Congress goes.

On Sunday night Gen. Tourtelotte, of Gen. Sherman's staff, who has been an official guide for dignitaries the last year or two, gave a dinner to his army and navy friends, and Mr. Sanderson gave a dinner to Mr. Charlton and wife and to Mme. Nilsson.

On Monday the Germans gave a grand supper and ball for the benefit of their orphan asylum, and the Irish-Americans—among whom such names as Capt. O'Meagher Condon can be found—gave a ball for the benefit of their society. A number of young people endeavored to put into practice the charitable lessons of Lent by giving the "snowball" at Lincoln Hall to a fashionable audience for the benefit of the Central Dispensary.

On Tuesday Engineer James W. Kinkaid, of the United States navy, was married to Miss Cassin, of Georgetown. It was the most fashionable wedding of the week.

The last german of the season was given by the Bachelors' Club. Mrs. Blaine received the guests, among whom were to be found the noted people of society. The advance of the season was indicated by the diminished number of attendants.

On Wednesday Dr. Loring, Commissioner of Agriculture, gave a dinner which was attended by Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Bonaparte, Mr. and Mrs. James Lawrence of Boston, Mr. and Mrs. John Jay, Aristarchi Bey, the Turkish Minister, Mr. Howard, of the British Legation, and others.

The social event of Thursday was the reception at the elegant residence of Mr. Justice Wood.

Thursday the President left for his Florida trip, and his absence will even make society duller than it has been since the adjournment of Congress.

Friday the Unity Club, one of the literary clubs, held a reception, at which Mr. Spofford, Librarian of Congress, read a very elaborate and instructive paper on "Persian Peasantry," and Edward Pradt, of the Brazilian Embassy, entertained the Chilian Minister and other diplomats.

One of the most interesting societies of the Capital is the Literary Society, which holds weekly meetings. Gen. Garfield was a patron of this society and an officer of it at the time of his death. At the meeting held this week Dr. Tonor, who presented the famous medical library to the National Library—which Chicago might have had for a suitable building—read an interesting paper.

During Lent a society of young ladies organized a club for the purpose of giving to sick and poor children a rest in the country during the hot weather. A house is to be hired and entertainments held to obtain the necessary funds.

Col. Robert G. Ingersoll and family have arranged to go to Europe for the summer.

Mrs. S. S. Fassett, who has been seriously ill, is recovering, and will go to New York as soon as she is able to travel.

Gen. Charles P. Stone, late of the Egyptian army, is here as a guest of Gen. Sherman.

Mr. John T. Raymond, celebrated his 47th birthday here this week, and received much attention.

The venerable Mark Hopkins, late President of Williams College, is on a visit to his son here.

Baron Struve, the Russian Minister, has left for home on a short leave of absence, leaving Mr. Willamov in charge of the Legation.

Several Senators who have been on a visit to Florida have returned complaining of the hot weather and mosquitoes. They think the President has too long delayed his visit there.

TEACHING THE LOVE OF MONEY.

[New York Tribune.]—Something new in education has been attempted in a Western city, where the Superintendent of Schools has undertaken the establishment of a system of trade and finance among the pupils. The children are trained in the arts of making money, and taking care of it. They are encouraged to earn an honest penny in all possible ways—by blacking boots, selling newspapers, making small marketable articles, etc.; and they have a bank for the care and management of their accumulations. The object apparently is not that they may earn their education, but that they may be taught the value of money, the importance of thrift, and the mysteries of commerce. We are not surprised to hear that the boys take to the scheme kindly. It is said that their books are not neglected; on the contrary, increased diligence in study seems to result from the general spirit of rivalry awakened at the touch of trade. The lad who has got ahead of his companions in a mercantile transaction at half-past 8 is still in an emulous mood when he enters the class-room at 9. Altogether the schools are lively.

The children—but, God save us! are there any more children? Are these premature financiers the innocent creatures whom fathers used to take upon their knee, finding in their simple prattle refreshment of heart after the depressing contests of the busy day? Are these the models of meekness, docility, purity, and trustfulness upon whom the Master laid his sacred hands when he bade us become like little children? Bankers in round jackets, boys who have discarded Robinson Crusoe for the Price Current and substituted interest tables for the Arabian Nights, they seem to be in a fair way to imitate the lawyer in the Battle of Life by changing the old rule, "Do as you would be done by," into the improved modern maxim, "Do, or you will be done brown." And what terrible sharps they promise to be when they rise from the petty operation of the playground to the serious bargaining, selling, buying, lending, discounting, note-shaving, bulling, bearing, and cornering for which their instructors are now giving them such a practical preparation. They ought to be shrewd enough in a few years to get the better of a Chatham street clothing dealer.

If there is anything which American children have no need to be taught it is the importance of money-getting. That is a lesson they learn soon enough by a miserable experience. The haste to be rich is, in the opinion of most observers, our great National fault. This is the cause of our instability and recklessness in trade, our laxity of financial morals, the frequency of our embezzlements and breaches of trust, the gross dishonesty of our governments, the bold robberies of our public officers, our wild license of speculation, our vulgar taste for display, our low standard of value in all things, material, intellectual, and religious. And there could hardly be a more striking illustration of the base mercenary spirit which is destroying us than the fact that a Superintendent of public schools thinks it is a praiseworthy action to teach the love of money to children predestined by inherited taint or by National example to love it only too soon and toowell.

THE LANGTRY OF JERICHO.

[Indianapolis News.]—A remarkable scene occurred at Jericho schoolhouse, in Van Buren Township, Shelby County, a few evenings since. There was a public entertainment, at which one feature of the program was voting an album to the prettiest girl. There were two competitors, and the voting was so close that the manager determined to give an album to each one. When he called Miss ——, a jealous miss behind her made a sneering remark, when the prettiest girl turned round and dealt her a blow between the eyes. At this they clinched, and for a few moments the air was full of ribbons and things. The affair came near causing a general fight.
